The Southern Industrial Situation. No doubt there is general progress in the South, but there is also very much to tion, especially when there are not com pensating advantages in the shape health, schools or society.

The rent of land in the South is high all things considered, especially cotton lands, and there seems little encourage ment for white farmers to go South in search of land to rent. It is only the man who can control land of his own who can hope to crop successfully in any part of

We observe that recently circulars we sent out from New York to parties in sev eral of the Southern States asking a num ber of questions in regard to labo Among other questions was this one "For what kind of labor is there a de mand in your community?" The replice we are told, "show an almost universa demand for farm laborers, not so much because farm laborers seem to be scarce as because they are not satisfactory."

This is the trouble as respects farm laborers: They are not satisfactory. A further trouble is that while the employe get labor very cheap because it is abundant and not satisfactory they would expect to get white labor at a very small increase of cost over what they pay for this colored labor. The fact is, the negro's work and wages correspond, and certainly he does not get the better end of the exchange.

As a rule, he gives decidedly more than the same period. To save the babies the Sanitary Department to day detailed fifty young physicians for immediate service, each man being as-

The replies to which we have referred show that there is a considerable demand for white skilled labor in Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia, the three most important industrial States in the South at this time. We read, however, that

The individual answers do not show so much that plenty of work at good wages awaits competent, skilled men, although a number of correspondents specifically report a demand for mechanics, as they show that in skilled as well as unskilled show that in skilled as well as unskiled labor there is more or less general dissatisfaction with the quality of the present supply. Exceedingly significant is the number of the domands expressed for cooks and servants. This shows that the domestic service which, it will be recalled, was said to be so excellent in slavery, has for some reason become unsatisfactory.

The day has not come as yet when the white farm laborers of the North are under the necessity of accepting such a state of things as exists in the agricultural districts of the South. A correspondent of the Pittsburgh Di patch, writing on this subject from Birm ingham, has the following remarks on the question of cost of iron. He says:

There has been a vast deal of fiction current as to cost of iron in Alabama and Tennessee, but those interested in the question may set it down as certain that $10 iron is an every-day fact in Alabama, and the cost need never exceed that at and the cost need never exceed that at leading plants except by bad furnace prac-tice. This allows for liberal repairs and contingencies. The theoretical cost, as stated by a manager of large experience, is as follows:

TERRIBLE HEAT And Alarming Mortality in New York Bake Oven Tenement Houses, N. Y. Times of the 14th.

The tenement house district was ver hot last night and its inhabitants gave many indications of suffering. At midnight it looked as if only a small percent age of them had gone to bed. Sidewalks were crowded with men, women, children and babies, the last named distressingly vocal, especially when the cry went up in a weak, helpless whimper, that in many cases, helped to tell the tale which was only too clearly revealed by the anxious face of the watchful mother as it scanned the pinched features of the little sufferer. It looked as though every mother of a sick child in the district was giving it the benefit of such "fresh" air as was to be had by a change from stifling tenement rooms to the only a trifle cooler bidewalk.

The air was listless and so were the peo-ple who breathed it. About the only persons who undertook to display any energy were those who manipulated palm leaf iams and others who had been sent out to "rush the growler." These did their work in a perfunctory way, the em-ployment of the word "rush" in connec-tion with the later messangers being ad-

No doubt there is general progress in the South, but there is also very much to be done before it becomes an ideal region for white immigration from the North.

To begin with, the wages of common labor are not enticing by any means. The negro creates the standard of common labor wages and inasmuch as he is abundant and cheap as a laborer, he virtually regulates the price for all kinds of hired agricultral work.

No Northern white man could better his condition by going South as a farm laborer. He would meet the poorly paid negro at every turn, and find his competition too much for him. Then, too, white laborers do not want themselves or familists to be subject to that sort of competition, especially when there are not competition to much for him.

weather, which formed the gole Staple of conversation. That these victims had the sympathy of their friends was clearly snown in the fact that they invariably had front seats. They got the first breath of such cool currents as at very long in-tervals came wandering along; those less bountifully supplied with adipose tissue ware content to groun on decorates and were content to group on doorsteps and get the benefit of such infinitesimal puffs

Another phase of the answers to the questions sent out is the fact that wages deen the cause. Health Officer Magic desirons sent cut is the fact that wakes are paid in all corts of ways, by the week, the month and the year, and partly in cash and partly in supplies. There were 131 cases of the latter as against 50 of the former.

Take all the information received in answer to the circulars sent out and it does not precent an attractive picture to white laborers at the North. It is not least the sent on the cause. Health Officer Magle said this morning that with one or two exceptions every Chinaman who had died in this city for several years had died of consumption. Their dist, he said, was not all nutritious, and they were, in reality, have starved. The use of opium was also a leading cause of the trouble, though acting in an indirect manner.

The position which they are obliged to resume in their laundry work, too, greatly contracts their cheeds. President Bay-less recently made a tour of inspection in are past acquiring the knowledge."

The old man stared at Loyeday, amazed at her and acity.

"You think," pursued the girl, "that a woman's coul is to be tinkered with a slater's sax. It is of too fine a nature to be touched even with the thumb. When a particle of dust enters your watch and stops the hands you hold your breath as you examine the works lest a breath should rust them. A woman's heart is more delicate in its mechanism than that, and a rough touch and a rude blast will spoil it forever. You know our Cornish proverb, 'The earth is sirewn with potherds.' It means that everywhere, in every village, almost in every house, are broken lives, lives broken by rough usage and careless handling. You would have used the figure-glasses for a jest and a forfeit, and headed nothing if they fell and were shattered. We poor women are like these same finger-glasses, fall of fresh and pure water for you men to dip your solid fingers into and cleanse them—not for you to convert into bumpers to break for a wager."
