When I was in Europe last summer Mr. Crawford obtained for me facilities to go to the naval review and other places. I had a running talk with him about general things abroad.

For a nation 50 well set up in their own self-esteem as they are, especially in the self-esteem of their superior knowledge, they are the most incapable race alive to understand our institutions. They thought that when Cleveland issued that message or proclamation it was the end of the matter; that immediately the tariff would all pome off, and they would come in and occupy the land. They

A grower of potatoes, vegefables and market produce in the interior of England told me that the French would land their apricots, grapes and garden yegetables in London and sell them cheaper than he could raise them. He said that his hothouses and wall vines, &c., were valueless to him. The Belgians are selling them railroad engines. The nation they fear the most is the German, which has a very light tariff and is pour-

"Did you look into the alleged poverty in England?"
"I did, and just before I came away. I have been in every country of Europe except Spain and Russia. I have been from half a dozen to a dozen times through Holland, France, Belgium, Switzerland and Italy. These is no nation in Europe with the amount of pauperism that you find in England. In the city of London at this moment there are one handred thousand persons in the almshouses; there are three hundred thousand unemployed men in London. differed, and the grade of the drink dif-fered correspondingly. In the lowest compartment you get the lowest kind of beer and alcohol; in the next you get a better grade and in the third you get the best grade. I went there and found the place crowded chiefly with what are called navies. They come in there on Saturday nights about 7 o'clock and stay until the place closes up. In that time the proprietor told me that the average until the place closes up. In that time the proprietor told me that the average drink of a man would be about four drink of a man would be about four gallons of beer. They just drink it down by the pint. I was introduced to the proprietor, who told me the modus operandi. Said he: "These men get their wages on Saturday, and the first thing they do is to lay in their houses the supply of meat and bread. The next thing they do is to go and take their clothes out of pawn. Their clothes are continually in pawn except on Sundays. What is left over after they have made this provision and redeemed their clothes they spend at the public house for beer. "I believe that you kept house in London; was it expensive?"

"In that Free Trade country there is but one expense less than the expense of living in New York, a great American eity, and that is house rent. Clothing may be a little cheaper, but it is not as cheap in cotton goods, such as shirts, socks, etc., as in this country. All the rest is higher. I had to pay for my beef thirty cents a pound invariably, the same quality of beef you buy in the United States for from twelve to eighteen cents."

very well for Blaine. Of course he can not sleep out in the snow and cut wood in the wilderness, but he is in good spirits and abundantly satisfied not to be running for offlee. You know that he is slow to be interviewed, and I stayed with him three days in Florence before he would consent to take. were mystified and mortified when it was explained to them that the President could not either make or break any law; that his megange was a more recommendation. Oh, well, they said on hearing this, of course those manufacturing States will have to come it. They may resist him by force a while, but as he is the ruler, and has expressed the policy, it can not be very long."
"Age the British doing well under Free Trade."
"They may be able to show you some statistics to that effect, but to the naked cys and-from what you hear by the ear they are the most galaphy beingsto-day on the globe with respect to their trades. As prominent a man as flow have in the Kerlss, e and Ingrease—James D.

the most is the German, which has a very light tariff and is pouring into England from Ghemitz hosiery and all sorts of woolen and cotton goods. It is a notorious fact that the Americans who go over there are changing their orders from England to Germany, where, with a tariff, they are manufacturing cheaper than the English with free trade. It has been only recently that the Americans have looked into the manufacturers of the continent, and when they, get over there they seldom return to Great Britain. There is variety in design and ecommodation to existing fashjous among the continentals which the British gre too slow to come to. You see that Germany extended its territory after the wars with France and Prussia, and the German etities began to grow rapidly. The Government of Bismarck considered that it was the first duty of a Government to set its people to work. So they expanded their tariffs, gave protection to their mechanics, supervised the whole system of industry, and they bave made Germany an alert live nation. That is the nation the British fear; the Germans can make bridges and railroad iron and many other things cheaper than the English, though the one has tariff and the other has not. That feeling of anxiety is universal through the British Islands. There is a party growing rapidly into prominence called, Fair Trade party, whilch menns nothing but a reciprocal tariff party, or indeed a tariff party. It represents, in my opinion, to-day the majority sentiment of England."
