How suddenly the Salt Trust has lost its favor. Wherever it shall be salted? The opposition organs have made Corporal Tanner a big man. When you start to canonize a man be sure you don't wind up by canonizing him.

WHAT hold have the garbage collectors on Councilmen that they are not compelled to collect the uncollected garbage? The time has come to put a sharp point on this question.

SINCE the Emperor of Germany has made his "Most Illustrious Grandmother" Colonel of the First Dragoon Guards of Berlin, what reason can there be for longer withholding the ballot from women?

Now Major Kilrain goes to rejoice the loved and lost Col. John L. Sullivan. Governor Lowry was slow to anger, but he is reaching his destination with certainty. We shall see whether Mississippi justice will strike these bruisers with bare knuckles.

CHICAGO says she has $5,000,000 for the great Christopher Columbus celebration in 1892 and wants to know what New York has. Bless your soul, New York has the sweet memory of her noble resolve to build a worthy monument to the greatest soldier of the age. She has also the greatest soldier's remains, obtained by false pretense.

WASHINGTON TERRITORY is having more than its share of the calamities of a year of calamity. Spokane is the third of its prosperous young cities to be visited by disastrous fire. The estimate of loss seems exaggerated, but with due allowance for that the destruction is probably greater in proportion than either Boston or Chicago suffered by the fires that burnt great holes in them.

The Tennis Blazer. We owe the tennis blazer an apology for not going to its defense sooner. We desire to get there now with all celebrity and with all the force we may. The tennis blazer is "catching fits" with a seriousness of a serious man with a garment unworthy of a serious man with a serious, every-day business before him.

It is a mistake to look upon the greatest of the world's cataraacts as the chief attraction of Niagara Falls. All the wonders, all the beauties, all the awe-inspiring heights and depths and far-reaching roars are less engaging and impressive than the once proud Niagara dollar-hunter, now fallen to the low estate of a supplicant for dimes and nickels. His spirit is broken who once lorded it over these domains. He no longer bullies and browbeats. He obsequiously begs the favor of your patronage; with a pained melancholy gives gratis a whole library of information once worth its weight in gold. This in the hope of finally disposing of his wares or his services for a really reasonable consideration. A cabman gave to my companions and myself so much valuable instruction, so wholesome and apparently disinterested caution with regard to the few remaining dishonest folk of Niagara, that when he told us on his honor as a man that it would be impossible to "do" the Falls region on bicycles, I almost believed him. It was at least a minute before I could bring myself to realize that so chastened a spirit, so good though new a friend, could lend himself to the vulgar arts of the common Niagara Falls liar. This man offered to take three of us for a four hours' drive in a two horse carriage for three dollars, assuring us that he ought to have five dollars for that service. Later I heard an offer from the same party to take six for five hours at the same price of two dollars and a half for the job lot.

The trades people are hungry and as desperate as the osprey. "Barkers" stand in front of the "Indian curiosity" shops or lie in wait within easy range to pull in the passer-by. Strolling along in the evening with nothing in particular to do, you are weak enough to stop for a peep in the window. That seal of your door. The "barker" is bold. A French dancing machine is not more and life. "It costs nothing to stop and see the curiosities. Business is so dull this season that we hardly expect anybody to buy, but it is always a pleasure to show the finest collection at the Falls." What a splendid opportunity to do some business this season? The "best people" have gone to Europe—that is to say, confidentially, about all the best people saving your worshipful presence. Excursions in the morning and the evening and the breaking their necks to slip out early in the evening, have just so much money to spend and they invest none of it in these treasures of art and wondrous specimens of the handicraft of the fascinating Indian Falls. Even "best people" who used to come for a week are now satisfied with a day and a night. While they remain they are so busy sight-seeing that they have little time for buying. So the trades people are having hard lines, and if you keep your wits about you you may save something out of the wreck of a bargain for wares.

In one of the curiosity shops is a veritable artist whom I will back against any of her class for diabolical experience. She is plump, of Spanish olive complexion with a slight touch of pink on the cheeks, but has an abominably lustrious black eyes, a kitchin-like vivacity alternating with a repose almost dignified. She speaks a little of half a dozen languages. She has a fine command of girl-of-the-period English. In no matter she is anybody's bosom friend. This is her art. You don't wish to buy, but, non die, what a pleasure it is in these dull times to be allowed even to show these beautiful things to one who can appreciate them. When we entered she was at work on a young man who was just yielding enough and just obstinate enough to make the contest interesting. "Jan! this spar pin lovely! Wouldn't it look well on your sweet-heart? You sly fellow, don't tell me you haven't a sweet-heart! She places the pin on herself to show how it will look. "Oh, here is a scarf pin that all the gentlemen buy. Isn't it a beauty?" And before the young man knows it she has slipped it in his scarf. Suddenly she thinks of something rare she knows he would like to see. She takes him familiarly by the arm and leads him off into a corner. We can't hear what she is saying, but we can see that the contest is becoming more and more friendly. She has him laughing, and then she begins to wrap up one article after another. She knows when he is at the end of his purchasing string. "Don't you want a drink?" The young man is becoming more and more friendly. She has him laughing, and then she begins to wrap up one article after another. She knows when he is at the end of his purchasing string.

A Niagara Falls "Indian curiosity" shop has the curious interest of being stocked chiefly with wares which no Indian ever saw and which have nothing to do with the genius of the place. There are toy bows and arrows, moosehorns, the old time bead work and the birch bark canoes, all which the Indians may have made but which have nothing to do with the genius of the place. There are toy bows and arrows, moosehorns, the old time bead work and the birch bark canoes, all which the Indians may have made but which have nothing to do with the genius of the place.

The adulteration of food products is engaging the attention of the Pennsylvania Board of Health, which seems to be trying to get to the bottom of the subject. So far as it has gone it has made some important discoveries in this much exploited field. The importance of the discoveries relates mainly to the degree of adulteration of articles already commonly known to be adulterated with free hand. A member of the Board made this striking statement:

The demand of the consumer for gifts with goods is growing rapidly, and the quality of the goods deteriorates in proportion to the value of the gift. If you buy $50 worth of spices and receive a $50 music box with the goods, you have $50 worth of cracker meal and a wheezy music box. Whole spices can not be ground up and sold for five cents or six cents per pound less than the unground goods cost. There is not one percent of the genuine article in the pepper of a certain Michigan manufacturer, and the way I know it is this: I put ten pounds of the pepper in ten pounds of sausage meat, and experts were unable to discover the presence of pepper in that meat. It is on record that pepper in Michigan has been adulterated ninety-nine percent.

ORIGIN OF "CHESTNUTS." Two Sources Attributed—The Most Probable One. "Chestnuts" in reference to repeating stories which are old, is a new word, and not much can be said in its favor, except that, being a word of two syllables, and expressing so much in two syllables, it has probably come to stay with us. Its origin is not positively known, and only two probable sources are given. One is that some shrewd wit, seeing an analogy between the propensity of a joke to be chestnut to become wormy in a few days, applied the word "chestnuts" to a joke when repeated too often and panned off as new on a company which had heard it so frequently as to become bored. This may be its origin, but I am inclined to attribute it to the other alleged source, to-wit: That a theatrical party, traveling on a train, and trying to beguile the weary hours by reading and telling stories, bought a lot of chestnuts at a station to help pass the time. A member of the company proposed that they tell stories, and that whoever told a story which had been told recently should be pelted with chestnuts. A little bell in the party was to be rung whenever a joke was perpetrated as a signal that all were to be inclined to attribute it to the other alleged source, to-wit: That a theatrical party, traveling on a train, and trying to beguile the weary hours by reading and telling stories, bought a lot of chestnuts at a station to help pass the time.
