

A CLASS FROM LINCOLN.

Closure of the Public School Commencement Last Night.

FOUR YOUNG LADIES GRADUATE.

A Fine Programme Highly Appreciated by a Packed House, and the Whole Performance a Brilliant Success—Good Essays.

Last night Lincoln school held its commencement exercises in the Opera House. The class being small, there was opportunity for the entertainment afforded by the four young ladies of the class with the assistance of friends and younger pupils was very pleasing, and won the enthusiastic plaudits of the audience, which packed the house downstairs and overflowed into the gallery. The auditors were most graciously divided as to race, many unknown white people enjoying the ceremonies fully as much as the colored portion of the audience.

The performances were creditable. They needed no allowances in comparison with those of the night before, when the graduates of the ward schools were their normal leave of school life. In the music, at least, the palm must be given to the Lincoln class. Their opening and closing choruses were sung with a good deal more spirit than those of any other night, and quite as correctly as to time and tone.

The class consisted of Misses Carrie B. Young, Maggie C. Beasley, Fannie B. Leach and Clara A. Franklin. With them on the stage sat the other pupils of the grammar school. Superintendent of Schools Anderson, President S. L. Jepson of the Board of Education, Rev. Dr. Brooks, Dr. Clinton and others.

THE SALUTATORY.

The class filed on the stage to the strains of a march by the Opera House orchestra. In the absence of Rev. S. C. Cox, who was to make the opening prayer, Prof. J. McH. Jones, principal of the school, led in prayer, making a pertinent and appropriate invocation. The pupils then sang a chorus, with Miss Ada V. Lewis at the piano.

Miss Fannie B. Lee, the second honor pupil, was then presented, and read the salutatory. Her theme was "Flowers of Memory," and she handled it in a very graceful way. She paid a high tribute to flowers, as the sweetest and most lovable things God has created without souls. She referred to the pictures presented by memory as flowers, and carried this idea out very prettily. Her essay was very neat in composition and her delivery was pleasing. She was most heartily applauded.

Miss Annie Jennings and Ada V. Lewis played a piano duet with considerable skill, and this was followed by a catchy melody by the orchestra, both being warmly applauded.

Miss Clara A. Franklin read an essay on "Hypnotism." She gave the scientific theory as to "animal magnetism," and reviewed the history of mesmerism in different ages. The paper was well prepared and well read, showing some research, and was listened to with great interest by all.

Mr. George T. Simpson, the famous baritone, sang Ardit's "What Shall I Sing?" He has a beautiful, pure voice, and his rare cultivation, especially sweet in the highest notes, and the excellent selection received full justice. He was imperatively encouraged by Mr. H. B. McClure played his accompaniment.

THE VALEDTORY.

Miss Maggie C. Beasley had for her theme "The W. T. D. C." These talismanic initials proved to refer to an imaginary "What to Do Club," for which Miss Beasley solicited members. She took a practical view of the openings of a young woman finds in life, and spoke of the disadvantages she must contend against as compared with a man. Her paper was thoughtful and bright. Her easy bearing and pleasant voice pleased the audience greatly.

After music Miss Carrie B. Young, the first honor girl, read the valedictory, "The Silent Factor." This title she applied to woman, and she showed what influence woman has on the lives of husbands, sons or brothers. Her style is graceful and attractive, and her essay was a creditable climax to the pupils' part of the programme.

Mr. Simpson sang "Our Father, We Praise Thee," to the accompaniment of the piano, by Mr. McClure, and again by Professor Spill. He was vigorously encouraged, and sang "Jesus, Lover of My Soul."

Dr. Jepson presented the diplomas to the graduates and the medal to Miss Young, accompanying it with a brief speech. He cautioned them against the common idea that an education consists of a greater or less amount of knowledge instilled into the mind. Education means drawing out, development. To be sound and enduring, an education like a house, must have a solid superstructure on a sound foundation. Therefore the graduates knew more last night of book lore than they will know again, but they might, nevertheless, go on and complete their education.

He warned Miss Young that it was not always the leading pupil in a class that succeeded best in life. While contemplating her he encouraged the other three by informing them that the first honor man of his class had made a failure throughout life and ended it in an insane asylum, while the man who graduated at the foot of the class was now one of the most successful and distinguished physicians on the Pacific slope.

CLASSES PRESENTED.

Prof. Jones presented to each of the graduates a class pin, a crescent and star. He paid them a high compliment for punctuality and good deportment. The crescent, he said, represented the moon, and as the moon grows daily larger and brighter so should they try to become brighter and fuller of all that is good and ennobling. The moon shines with reflected light, symbolic of the knowledge imparted to them; but the star gives a light of its own. All could not be stars, but he urged all to get their own light shine, even if but faintly. He said he was proud of Lincoln School and of them as its representatives, and urged them to conduct themselves in the future as in the past, so that all the friends of the school might continue to be proud of them.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

Matters of Minor Moment in and about the City.

PAY DAY to-day at Bloch Bros.' tobacco factory and the LaBelle mill.

The Silver Leaf Social will give a picnic at Whiteman's grove on the evening of July 3.

Most of the mills and manufactories will have their pay-day next Friday, July 3, instead of Saturday.

Thomas S. O'Neal, the well-known carriage manufacturer, of Pittsburgh, was in town yesterday. Mr. O'Neal delivered the handsome new landau, ordered by Louis Asmus, the liveryman, and left for Cincinnati in the afternoon.

PROGRESS.

IT is very important in this age of vast material progress that a remedy be pleasing to the taste and to the eye, easily taken, acceptable to the stomach, and healthy in its nature and effects. Possessing these qualities, Syrup of Figs is the one perfect laxative and most gentle diuretic known. DAW

The rate from any ticket station to any other station on the Pennsylvania lines within two hundred miles thereof will be one fare for the round trip July 3 and 4, good to return until July 6. No excursion tickets to adults for less than twenty-five nor to children for less than fifteen cents.

FROM PRISON TO PRISON.

A Convict Whose Two-Year Term at Moundsville is Out To-Day

WILL BE REARRESTED FOR THE U. S.

An Ohio Man Wanted for Personating an Officer and Securing a Woman's Pension Money—He Will Be Transferred To-Day.

A. L. Duty, a convict in the West Virginia penitentiary at Moundsville whose term expires to-day, he having served two years, less good time, will walk out of the prison walls into the arms of Deputy United States Marshal G. W. Robinson, who will take him into custody and escort him to Columbus, Ohio, and there deliver him over to the United States officials. Duty is wanted here for personating an United States officer illegally and fraudulently, on June 1, '89, and in that way obtaining pension money belonging to Nancy J. Abbott, of Washington county, Ohio.

The indictment returned against Duty at Columbus has been on file here for some time, and the officials have been keeping their eyes on him. Yesterday Captain Robinson received a telegram that his man would be discharged to-day, and he will go down and take him into custody.

Violated the Pilot Laws.

Kemble White, a student of the university who is assisting U. S. Marshal White during vacation, will leave for Parkersburg this morning in charge of O. M. Waddle, Charles J. Waddle and Ora McQuay, indicted for violating Section 4,438 of the Revised statutes, regulating pilots on steam vessels. The offense is alleged to have been committed on a steam ferryboat at Wellsville.

Collar Inspection Done.

Mr. James A. Dunning has completed his work of inspecting the collars for the Board of Underwriters. He found the collars, for the most part, in fairly good condition, those of the drug houses being the best. The millinery and dry goods stores were in the worst condition, and several orders to clean up were issued.

Mr. Dunning has taken charge of the new building John G. Hoffman & Son are erecting as an addition to their tenery at Twenty-fourth and Main streets. He has full control of the work and will superintend the construction and the placing of the machinery.

A River Party.

The steamer Jolly Bros. stopped here yesterday on her way to Parkersburg, having quite a number of passengers, relatives and friends of Messrs. A. J. and J. K. Jolly. The following stayed over night at the Hotel Behler: A. J. Jolly and wife, J. K. Jolly and wife, Misses Gertrude, Sadie and Alice Jolly, H. J. Werneburg and wife, Miss Mamie Werneburg, Miss Maggie McCormick, Miss Emma Anderson, Miss Angy Swager, J. D. Anderson and wife and F. L. Jolly. The J. K. Jolly band, of Coropolis, was along, and gave a concert on the river last night.

Death from the Heat.

George Largo, a boy about sixteen years of age, while plowing corn on the farm of J. C. McClure, near Portland, up the river, was overcome by the heat. He went to a spring to get a drink and after drinking sat down to rest. His two little brothers seeing something was wrong gave the alarm to R. J. McClure and Alex Hathaway in an adjoining field, who immediately ran to him, but before they could get to the house he was dead. Dr. Hoge pronounced it a case of apoplexy.

A Horse Horribly Injured.

A horse belonging to D. M. Campbell, the produce dealer, became frightened on Sixteenth street and ran off yesterday afternoon. The animal, a fine beast, straddled a short hitching post, which tore his abdomen open, allowing the bowels to protrude, and causing the blood to flow in a stream. The horse was taken to the stable and the wound sewed up, but there was little hope of saving him. The horse was valued at $250.

A Runaway Horse.

Yesterday afternoon a horse attached to the delivery wagon of R. E. Adams, the Market street plumber, became frightened on Market street and ran away. The horse got onto the pavement near the German Bank and the wagon struck a hitching post, checking the animal's wild chase. Both axles of the wagon were broken, and the vehicle was otherwise badly demolished.

Water Lilies Fashionable.

For a few days past water lilies have been abundant in Wheeling. They retail at two for a nickel or a quarter a dozen. F. Laupp, the Market street florist, gets them from Sandusky, where a florist named Mollineux raises them for the market by the thousands. Laupp sold 300 yesterday, and he averages 500 in two days right along. Their popularity increases, apparently, and their lesson the demand for roses and lilies perceptibly.

Corner Stone Laying.

The laying of the corner stone of St. John's Roman Catholic church, at Denwood, will take place to-morrow. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon a special train will leave the B. & O. depot for Denwood. All the Catholic societies of Wheeling and vicinity will take part in the exercises. Delegations from other towns are expected. Bishop Kain will officiate at the ceremony of laying the stone.

WILL BE NO STRIKE.

The Iron Manufacturers and the Amalgamated Association will Agree Amicably

There has been a great deal of talk for several months about the probabilities that the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers and the manufacturers would lock horns this summer. There never was any real ground for such an opinion, and the chief reason assigned by those who talked most about it was that they had, not tested their strength for a long time, and that they were about due to quarrel. But the Amalgamated Association is not that kind of a body. It does not strike for fun, and never makes a fight till it feels that it is necessary. The manufacturers have come to know this, and they have the utmost respect for the association, and do not pick quarrels with it unless they feel that there is just cause and that their differences can not be settled any other way. A manufacturer speaking of the Amalgamation yesterday said it was the most conservative and careful organization he knew of, and that it was far easier to operate the mills with it than it would be without it. It makes the same exactions on all and asks the same methods from every mill that recognizes it. The matter of settling disputed points between the mills and their men is reduced to a system, and the mills are not compelled to deal with individuals at all. The whole matter goes into the hands of men who make a study of the different points concerning which there may be trouble, and they are always fair in their dealings.

The Amalgamated scale has been prepared and is now in the hands of the Manufacturers' Association in Pittsburgh. There are only two provisions in it that make it different from the scale signed last year and under which the mills are now working. These points are only felt by a few of the mills, and they are not of any particular importance to the men who work in them. The general opinion is that if the manufacturers and the Association make a settlement of all the other points of the scale, these will not be pushed. One of the Wheeling manufacturers, speaking of the matter yesterday, said: "These changes of method proposed by the Association make no material difference in themselves, but they may lead to something more important next year or the year after. The men who are at the head of the Amalgamation are a shrewd set of fellows, and they look far into the future and read the signs of the times and know the iron market as well as the best posted manufacturers. They come up to changes of all kinds very gradually, and often by the insertion of a clause here and there from time to time, and in the course of a few years, without even asking for it, what, if they were to demand outright, would shut down every mill in the country. Their way is, of course, the best, but we have to watch them carefully, and look out for the future."

The changes that are proposed are of a minor character and will only affect a few of the mills and none of the Wheeling mills. The first is as follows and is in the memorandum of agreement. "The time in scrapping and bushing, also finishing and all other departments shall in no case exceed nine hours from the time the first heat is charged with charging shall cease; this is not to apply to boiling department, except scrapping and bushing, also rod-mills, wire mills, nut and bolt-works and other departments working under the eight-hour system."

The manufacturers claim that this may repeatedly do them an injustice because it may happen that the required tonnage may not be produced. They think they are entitled to the full capacity of the mill per day and that the unavoidable condition should not be made to operate against them entirely.

The other big objection is directed against the clause in the boiling scale which specifies the time for boiling a heat, accidents and unavoidable detentions not reckoned in the time. "Hard" iron, inferior coal, tools, scarcity of ore and scrap, or any of them constitute a grievance, if by them the time is extended beyond the limits laid down in the scale, after a majority of the furnaces have given due notice of the extra time put in.

Concerning the intentions of the Wheeling district mills it is not probable that any of them will be closed down except for the regular summer stop and for taking stock. There is no fight against the scale in the district and there is no cause for any.

If the Pittsburgh manufacturers secure any modifications of the scale the Association will allow the same changes in the scales signed by the Wheeling mills, even though the scale were signed before the changes were made.
