GRANTED HER DEGREE.

The Famous Brooklyn Divorce Case is Concluded.

EX-MAYOR HOWELL'S DAUGHTER

Gains Her Suit--The Husband May Appeal--Will the Unfortunate Co-Respondent Repeat Her Sad Story? The Terrible Ordeal Through which She Passed During the Trial.

BROOKLYN, July 9.--By a strange oversight during the recent trial of the divorce suit of Lillie S. Cray against her husband the very material evidence of her marriage was omitted, and yesterday the case came up again for final proofs.

Mrs. Cray, who is the daughter of ex-Mayor and ex-President of the Bridge Trustees, James Howell, of Brooklyn, started the social world, in which she was a prominent figure, by bringing a suit for absolute divorce against her husband, William P. Cray, a short time ago.

The trial, which was by jury, was replete with sensational details, because of the confessions on the witness stand of the co-respondent, Miss Wilhelm Tunstall, Mrs. Cray's first cousin, and for years the wife's companion.

Mr. and Mrs. Cray were both in court yesterday, the latter accompanied by her father and mother and David Barnett, her counsel, and Mr. May, of Howe & Hummel's office, represented the defendant, and raised the objection that the case was not regularly noticed on the calendar for trial at Special Term. Judge Osborne overruled the objection, and the examination of Mrs. Cray, as to her marriage to the defendant, was continued.

The ceremony, she testified, was performed on April 20, 1882, at her father's house, No. 8 South Portland avenue, by the Rev. J. O. Peck. Two children were born to them, Annie E., now six years old, and James H., aged four. While Mr. and Mrs. Cray were residing at No. 3 Plaza place, in December 1890, she left her husband. It was two days before Christmas, and she took the children with her. That night, she swore, she had found her husband in the bedroom occupied by Miss Tunstall.

After some fruitless questioning Judge Osborne said he would grant a decree upon the findings being signed. It is understood that Mr. Cray will appeal. When it became known some months ago that Mrs. Cray was seeking a divorce Brooklyn was astounded. The political prominence of Mrs. Cray's father gave the case an interest that reached beyond the social limits. Counsel on both sides as well as the parties to the suit, were silent as to the details of the charges and the trial was awaited with anxious expectation. It began June 11 and lasted two days.

The greater part of the time was occupied by the co-respondent, once the trusted relative and companion of the plaintiff, who upon the witness stand confessed her shame amid tears of humiliation and repentance. Several times in the course of the long and agonizing ordeal the witness broke down completely.

Throughout the trial Cray was calm, unshaken, composed--even while he listened to the story of his own infamy from the lips of the woman he had wronged. Pale, trembling, nearly fainting, Miss Tunstall was assisted to a seat in a side room at the conclusion of her testimony. The story she told was a sad one.

Cray for more than a year, despite repulses, had persisted in his attentions to her. He would kiss and caress her, and one night he stole into her room in the darkness. Afterwards when their relations were discovered, he asked her to go to New York with him, promising to hire and furnish a flat for her.

TRAGEDY OF AN UMBRELLA.

Two Men Claimed It and Then the Trouble Began.

Chicago News. A thick-set bullet-headed man in a duster and slouch hat stepped out of the elevator, grasping an umbrella firmly in the middle.

A pursy man with red whiskers stood before the elevator shaft waiting to go down. The florid face of the discontented man wore a vexed look.

"Oh, there--brought my umbrella back, did you?" he cried, as soon as he saw the man in the ulster.

"I brought somebody's umbrella back"--indictively.

"Well, it's mine," holding out his hand for it.

"Where's mine, then?"--putting the one he had behind his back.

"I don't know anything about your blasted umbrella"--impatiently.

"I carried it into that office not half an hour ago," pointing excitedly with the disputed umbrella to the door in front of them.

The florid man reached out and caught the cord of the umbrella. "Likely your's is in there now," he said, pacifically. "Down! Why, gimme my umbrella!"

"You gimme mine, then!"

"I ain't got your umbrella!"

"Somebody's"--

"I don't care what somebody's got. This is my umbrella, and I'm going to have it." The florid man gave the umbrella a sharp twist. There was an ominous creak, as of parting wood, and the florid man desisted--very mad, but recognizing the necessity of diplomacy.

"What sort of an umbrella?" he demanded.

"Black stick and silver-handled."

"Well, it's in there now, leaning against the first desk."

"Go 'n' get it, then."

"Why, you old fool, get your own umbrella. Give me my umbrella!"

"Gimme my umbrella!"

"I ain't got your umbrella"--frantic emphasis on the "got."

"You say it's in there--go 'n' get it."

"You shan't have this, then."

The man in the duster gave a quick jerk and pulled the point of the umbrella from the florid man's hand. With a snort of rage the florid man rushed forward, seized the umbrella firmly with both hands and gave it a tremendous wrench. The stick broke in three pieces and a bent wire tore a ragged strip out of the silk.

The florid man stepped back with the wreck in his hands, glaring.

"Ho! he!" wheezed the bullet-headed man--"fixed it now, ain't you?"

The florid man said never a word, but he darted through the office door and out again in a minute, bearing in his hand an umbrella with a black stick and silver handle.

"Down!" he shouted to the elevator boy.

The man in the duster gave a roar and closed in. The elevator boy paused an instant in astonishment, then sped downward.

On the next trip he carried down from the fifth floor the policeman, one florid man with a ragged patch gone from one mutton-chop whisker, his shirt front rumpled, his collar torn off and a large welt over his left eye. Also one bullet-headed man, whose duster was ripped up the back and who held a beermarsh kerchief to his nose. And in the corner of the car a little heap of splintered wood, twisted wires and tattered silk.

My physician said I could not live, my liver out of order, frequently vomited greenish mucus, skin yellow, small dry humors on face, stomach would not retain food. Burdock Blood Bitters cured me. Mrs. Adelaide O'Brien, 372 Exchange street, Buffalo, N. Y.

Tommy (aged four)--"G'ma, I tant see iver your specs." Grandma--"Why, Tommy?" Tommy--"It makes my looker feel wiggly."

Remarkable Rescue. Mrs. Michael Curtin, Plainfield, Ill., makes the statement that she caught cold, which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse. He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption and that no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption; she bought a bottle and to her delight found herself benefited from first dose. She continued its use, and after taking ten bottles found herself sound and well, now does her own housework and is as well as she ever was. Free trial bottles of this Great Discovery at Logan Drug Co.'s Drug Store.

FINANCE AND TRADE.

The Features of the Money and Stock Markets.

New York, July 9.--Money on call easy, ranging from 1 1/2 to 2 per cent. last loan 2 per cent. closed offered at 2 per cent. Prime mercantile paper 5/16 per cent. Sterling exchange quiet and firmer at $161 3/4. Sales 113,011 shares.

Notwithstanding the abundance of money available for speculative purposes, together with the bright prospects of the market season, there seems for the present to be no disposition to enter into any ventures in the stock market, and dullness, narrowness and general stagnation still mark the trading. The market was very quiet for some kind of attention, and especially Burlington and Louisville & Nashville weakened under foreign selling. The declining tendency was indicated by the fact that the list of four active stocks showed losses of something over 1 per cent at the lowest prices, and with some covering in the last hour a shade was recovered. The close was very dull and stagnant, with the active shares close to bottom figures.

Railroad bonds moderately active; sales $767,000. Government and State bonds dull and steady.

Chicago, July 9.--Wheat was dull and weak to-day, and most of the business accomplished was for the export trade. The price of wheat of new favored the bears' side. The weather throughout the districts where the harvest is in progress was fine. The market rallied some after noon, but report that several very heavy loads had been taken at New York for export. Estimated heavy receipts for to-morrow, indicating the forwarding of some of the new crop, probably decided but not heavy.

Corn was weak from the start. The warmer weather improved corn prospects, and the weakness in wheat were weakening factors. Oats were fairly active and steady. Provisions firm on some good buying.

Flour dull and unchanged.
