The Controversy About the Attitude of President Lincoln

TOWARD HAMLIN AND JOHNSON

general Sickles is Confident That the Martyr President Did Not Favor Johnson -- Testimony of His Old Friend, Burton C. Cook-How Hamlin Was Defeated in the Baltimore Convention.

New York, July 10.—General Daniel E Sickles was shown a dispatch from Chicago stating that he had been sent by President Lincoln upon a mission to

"I cannot go into these matters," he sid "because my relations with President Lincoln were of a confidential name, and even now I do not feel that I may speak of them. CHEAGO, ILL., July 10 .- The contracesy which has been going the mands of the press since the death of ex-Vice President Hamlin, as to whether Abraham Lincoln desired Mr. Hamlin saths ticket with him prior to the convention of ISO4, should be set at rest by the following interview with the Hon. When questioned regarding the editorial from the Philadelphia Times, charcing that Mr. Lincoln opposed Mr. Haadin's renountantion, and John G. Nicolay's denial in a letter to Mrs. Hamilia We Collegia and the control of the con lin, Mr. Cook said:

"Mr. Vook said:

men who say the Presidential candidates prefer this man or that, and tary do it without the slightest authority. It was so in this campaign.

"It was so in this campaign.

"It was current that Andrew Johnson was Mr. Lincoln's choice, and it was my business to find out whether it was or not. We were beyond all measure for Mr. Lincoln, first, last, and for all time. If he desired Mr. Johnson he would have been our choice, but he did not. As the dispatch indicates, Mr. Lincoln was particularly anxious not to make known his preference on the question of his associate on the ticket. But that he had a preference I positively know.

"After my interview with him I was as positive that Hamibal Hamilin was a positive that Hamibal Hamilin was as positive that Hamibal Hamilin volay. Although he had not told me directly, he had given me this to understand. The fact is further proven by the action of the entire Illinois delegation, which was a unit for Mr. Hamilin, and, as I stated before, were at his service in the matter.

"We had bright prospects of nominating Mr. Lincoln's choice until Horace Maynard, afterward Minister to Spain, made his speech for Andrew Johnson. He spoke so pathetically of the sufferings of the people of the South during those terrible years which had passed, and the noblemess of Mr. Johnson, that iffied up the entire convention. Simon Cameron, who had been for Hamilin, I believe, was influenced by this speech, with many others, and he turned over to Johnson. This elected the man who was afterward impeached."

"MR. RAMLIN, I BELIEVE,
Was Lincoln's choice because he was

"Yes," continued Mr. Cook, "those were days in the history of our country worth speaking of. I never think of it reper with a smile how we had to fight to establish Abraham Lincoln's capacity to establish Abraham Lincoln's capacity to have no nonsensical opinions about him, and yet I firmly believe that Mr. Lincoln intimately. You can publish that as gospel truth, not as braggadocio, have no nonsensical opinions about him, and yet I firmly believe that Mr. Lincoln would have developed into a colosal figure in the world's history had he lived. He was absorbing and daveloping beyond all possibility of conception to the circless squanderer of life. His early years had oeen devoid of opportunity, and he so much appreciated his position to develop that it is scarcely possible to imagine what he would have become had he lived. Even his faults were virtues to

THE PEOPLE AT LABGE "I remember sitting in a room in the White House with him upon one occasion when Judge Holt, of the Bureau of Milltary Justice, entered with a lot of court martial papers, which he wanted Mr. Lincoln to sign. wanted hir. Lincoln to sign. They were the death warrants of men who had been tried and convicted of great cowardice.

"Judge Holt stated that he had examined the papers, and if the testimony was true the men were certainly guilty of great cowardice, as in some cases they had been the cause of stampeding entire regiments. The officers are clamoring to have these men shot, Judge Holt continued. They maintain that they cannot preserve discipline unless stringent measures are enforced to punish such criminal conduct."

"Mr. Lincoln rose from his chair and began to walk the floor. After he had crossed and recrossed several times he stopped before Judge Holt, and in that falsetto voice in which he spoke when excited, said:
