

A Week in Morocco—No. 11. (Copyright, 1892, by Edgar L. Wakeman.)

TANGIER, Morocco, Jan. 15.—The present "revolt of the tribes" in Morocco, though doubtless overestimated in importance, renders a tour of adventure to the interior by any white man from Tangier an impossible performance. It also brings sharply to mind many recent prophecies, from highest European diplomatic sources, of the early disintegration of this the last barbaric sultanate of ancient Mauritania.

At least four great European powers are concerned in the acquisition of all northern Africa. For years Italy has had her itching fingers in the affairs of Tripoli, whose trade with the African equatorial kingdoms is enormous.

France from her new and matchless empire of Algeria, is pushing her railways across the eastern boundaries of Morocco, and but a few weeks since took forcible possession of the rich oases of Tuat. This point, about 700 miles a trifle southwest of Algiers and a trifle southeast of Tangier, is in the central northern portion of the Sahara.

It is by all odds the most splendid possible strategic possession in northern Africa. Here the great caravan routes converge from all parts of the Sahara, and even from central Africa and the countries bordering on the Gulf of Guinea. France has thus tapped, diverted and must eventually largely control, the richest trade of a major portion of the entire African continent.

An English fleet is now at Cadiz. Two of her great war-ships are in this very harbor. Another English man-of-war is by this time at Cape Juby. At the latter place, about 300 miles down the western coast of Morocco, just opposite the Canary Islands, immense English trading interests have been established with the Aznaid country and the western Sudan; and all of these have been diverted from their old channels through the Morocco sultanate to its commercial capitals, the cities of Morocco, Fez and Tangier. Powerful British interests at Tangier are seeking and would be benefited by Morocco's disruption; while the British government has had more than one cause of regret, since the wonderful achievements of France in Algeria, and the recent marvelous development of African countries and trades that it ever relinquished its former possession of Tangier, in 1684; previous to which, through Portuguese cession, it had been held and looted by various English military commanders for a period of twenty-two years.

Meantime poor old Spain, the hereditary foe of the Moor, is gloating over the probable near downfall of his Sheerian highness, Muley Hassan, and will find her own full reward in simple revenge, though when the occasion of dismemberment comes, a few additional crumbs will doubtless fall to her pickings. In her last encounter with the Moors she retired victorious and not wholly empty-handed, and still holds, as earnest of her prowess in 1850, all the cities of the northern Morocco coast, such as Melilla, Penon, Al-Khuzemas and Ceuta, the latter fortified city being one of Spain's most important convict stations.

The present so-called revolt is locally attributed to the exactions of the Bashaw of Tangier. These are no worse nor better than they have always been. By some it is vaguely hinted that it is but the beginning of a dangerous revolution against Muley Hassan by his recently deposed kalfia, or supreme judge, and the sultan's brother, Muley Ismail, who was banished from Fez with the kalfia in November last. Knowing merchants and small diplomats whisper of French intrigue and renegade Berber and Khabyzie chief emissaries, who, with valuable gifts and more glittering promises of preferment and profit from Algiers, are commissioned to stir up such dissatisfaction and turbulence as shall give excuse to a more formidable coup d'etat than that of Tuat, which shall remove the Algerian boundary some hundreds of miles westward within the sultan's present domain.

In any event the four powers named are eagerly alert for the possibilities in all new moves in northern Africa; and Morocco, the last remaining empire of barbarism of ancient Mauritania, is doomed. The glitter and clink of an hundred thousand chassepot rifles girdle it on the east and south. Open mounted cannon complete the circle on the north and west. Strangely enough civilization often confronts barbarism in this way. There is not at this moment a break in its circling impact. The inevitable and resistless pressure may come before these words can find their place in print. It may not come before the century is done. But it is no less inevitable. Then Morocco will be transformed, like Algiers, into a paradise of health and plenty, and beyond it, even to the wild Sudan, the oases of the waterless wastes of Sahara shall bloom and blossom in all the glorious luxuriance of a Cuban vale.

CUSTOMS, ETC. Until then, from any standpoint this weird old city must remain a place of the rarest interest. No one can tell its age. The sieges, pillages and pestilences it has withstood are heart-rending. It is the most Moorish of all Moorish cities. Decaying, ruinous, hoary, it has still clung, though but twenty miles from Christian Europe, to its primitive customs closer than Tunis, Alexandria or Cairo. Costume, custom, faces, utensils and food of scriptural times are here precisely as they were known in Oriental cities 2,000 years ago.

Taking your stand midway between the harborside and the Soc-de-Barra, study with me these strange and varied tides of human travel crowding in either direction. There is suppressed excitement in the faces of all owing to the constant exaggerated rumors of the possible action of the mountain tribes, and what may be done by the Sultan, if he can take a moment from the charms of his thousand wives, to oppose their threatened sedition. Aside from this all things in Tangier go on as they have each day for many an hundred years.

Chebka, a little oasis surrounded by lofty rocks in the most arid and burning portion of central Sahara. To some extent return rich to Hammada Chebka, the Mozabite will work and starve half a lifetime. You cannot mistake him in Tangier. He is darker than the Arab; not so black as the negro; his skin has the appearance of continuous oiling; he wears a white turban, but is chiefly distinguished in dress because of invariably wearing a sort of sleeveless tunic, called the gandoura, which falls straight to the knees. The stripes and zigzags in this garment are something marvelous. His wife wears the adjar or veil, like the Arab woman, but her hair (shawl or wrap) which covers her head, falling nearly to her feet, is of blue and white checked stuff, similar to that worn by negroes in Tangier. The Mozabites have with them a boy of Khabyles who are in from the farther Atlas range of mountains, despite the tribal tumult, with animals for the stables. They are butchers; are on their way to the abattoir, and are volubly depressing prices in excited banterings.

Behind them are a score of negroes. They are on their way to their masters' homes from the market of Soc-de-Barra. You may find any day hundreds more like them as helpers at the market. One is chanting some wild song of the jungle, and she is now and then encouraged by shrill cries of "Jaleo!—Jaleo!" from her companions. They are indescribably ugly, with short, puffy bodies, tremendous heads and short, huge necks, lumpy cheeks and square jaws, nostrils flattened back almost in a line with the facial angle; and lips like a pair of cloned-conch shells. Their hands are always of the blue and white checked variety, intensifying the lustre and depth of color of their coal black skins. Some of them are veiled, giving them an air of monumental coyness and shiffliness. Besides the hair and veil little should be said about their costume. Below the hair are cascades and cataraacts of argemoney of all sorts. Two wear the cast-off trousers of some consular attache. A pair of calvary boots ornament the feet and legs of a third. The rest are barefooted and their feet are like huge claws. They are slaves, and were born in the jungles about Sahara.

But here is a bevy of Jews on their way to the place of customs at the waterside, on some errand connected with importations, and a few Jewish women are with them. There are 3,000 of these folk in Tangier, and not one is poor. They could not but welcome incoming civilization, for now none of them can ride upon horseback, and must perforce employ a donkey, nor can they come into the presence of Moors or Arabs connected officially with the sultanate without repeated salaams, kissing the heels of their rulers' burnous, and other confessions of humiliation and degradation. They are nearly all dressed similar to the Arabs, with long flowing white robes, turbaned heads, richly embroidered waists and sashes, ample trousers caught with jeweled bands below the knees, blue silk stockings and low sandals upon their feet. A few have the red, Turbosh with blue and black tassels, betokening that the wearers are Tunisian Jews.

THE WOMEN. The women in their company give an excellent example not only of the beauty of the female members of this race as they are found near and in the Orient, but also of the costumes of the better class of these in Tangiers. Long, straight gowns without drapery and of the richest silk, green, orange or purple, encircle at the waist by cords of silk, gold and silk, or chains of pure gold, constitute the sole outer garment, strikingly different from the Arab woman's. Their feet are encased in colored pointed slippers. Each woman wears a black silk scarf, bound tightly across the forehead, gathered closely over the head, falling in delicate folds behind, held in place at the back by great gold or jeweled ornaments. This, with a plain band of spotless white linen drawn tightly across the chin, and a magnificent India shawl carried upon the arm or thrown carelessly across the shoulders, completes the costume of these, the most stately and beautiful women of Tangier.

Besides these there will troop by you hundreds of the Biskris—the scavengers, water-carriers and men-of-all-work of Tangier—bareheaded and shaven, fine featured and with splendid form and muscular development. Impish little bootblacks of mongrel race who will perform any diabolical, from blacking and shining their own faces to plumping an eye-out and into its socket, for but one copper for each exhibition, are dancing about you. Snake-charmers with hideous cobra-de-capelles wound about their filthy bodies will pass you. Necromancers who really eat fire are as common in the streets as are those who do not at our summer resorts and nickel-shocker museums. Moorish soldiers, bareheaded and barefooted, and even on the trot, skurry past you. Half grown negroes from the Sudan with scant breechcloths of untanned hides for raiment are here. Venerable Rifans, apathetic as opium-eaters and withered as mummies, pass tremulously by; while genuine Bedouins, on skinny steeds magnificently caparisoned, each lumpy beneath a wondrous burnous, dash recklessly through the crowds.

And still there are trains of donkeys and of camels laden with merchandise for the Berber villages and farther oases of the desert; women with servants in whose baskets are fowls for beheading at the Berber villages and farther oases of the desert; women with servants in whose baskets are fowls for beheading at the Berber villages and farther oases of the desert; women with servants in whose baskets are fowls for beheading at the Berber villages and farther oases of the desert.

All architectural beauty is found in carved Moresque arcways, among which are many magnificent specimens; in bases and capitals of spiral stone pillars supporting arches, vaulting over which superstructures often shut out the sky, and these are in the pure Arab style of 1,000 years ago; about the facades and fouts of numberless fountains set in cool alcoves, projecting unexpectedly from blank walls, or built upright from the center of tiny squares, the only places in all this ancient city where sunlight ever reaches the earth; and behind the massive walls in interiors, whose structural grace and exquisite ornamentation are an endless feast of artistic delight.

The shops of Tangier are all merely tiny niches in the walls. The Moorish merchant enters his little black den through a trap-door; lowers the shutter which falls often in steps to the street and sits in the centre of his possessions, which are all within reach, voiceless and grave the day long like a brazen Punch in a pantomime. Every manner of a shop is just like his. In some, workmen are embroidering the white burnous, utilizing their great toes to hold tight the disengaged thread. In others greasy fritters are fried in a solemn and stately manner while one waits. Some display ostrich eggs and native ornaments. Here and there is a seller of herbs and vegetables. Again white-robed and bearded men are surrounded by crates of charcoal and tiny bundles of figs. In others almost priceless oriental draperies are packed and bunched around a merchant who smokes and dreams as if no thought of traffic ever entered his head.

The ancient and venerable letter and scribe writer has his niche, or chair, at archway side, and waits with that stoic patience only an Indian or a Moslem can command, to indite epistle or trace sacred passages from the Koran upon egg shell or on ribbon for some devout one's amulet. Shoemakers squat cross-legged, sewing and hammering upon slippers and sandals only. Bread-sellers crouch against walls and doorways. Groups of swarthy Khabyles with their copper ewers are ever before the gurgling; old fountains. Veiled women wriggle and nuzzle to and from market, or khoubra or mosque. Stately Arabs appear and disappear, their flowing robes shutting out the vistas of the narrow streets. Cloth vendors higgie-haggie at the cracks of massive doors barely ajar. Funeral corteges pass on the run—for the dead Moslem arrives in paradise that much more speedily. Girls with dough-covered boards ready for the bakeries are as fleet as the funerals. The donkeys loaded with street garbage, force you against the streets. Other donkeys with panniers packed with fruits, orange blossoms and roses, fill the shadowy ways with the attars of sunny valleys.

The same weird, wild scenes of semi-barbaric life that were here a thousand years ago are here to-day, every-day, all day, and will remain. And if you wander these ghostly ways at night, all is still, shadowy, silent. You see the white, silent walls about you. You know that white, silent forms whisk past you. And away up there through infinite space you see the white, silent stars looking down.

Advanced Mexican Lottery Stock. NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 5.—The supreme court decision sustaining the act of Congress excluding lottery matter from mails and Mr. Morris' letter withdrawing his proposal for a renewal of the Louisiana lottery charter, have had the effect of advancing the price of shares of the Mexican lottery six to ten dollars per share.

Forty Persons Drowned. BRAN, Feb. 5.—Thirty barges were torn from their moorings by drift ice at Breslau to-day. Several of the barges sank, and it is reported that forty persons were drowned, including many women and children. The fate of the occupants of the barges was the cause of many heart-rending scenes.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Sold by druggists, price 75c per bottle.

Sudden Deaths. Heart disease is by far the most frequent cause of sudden death, which in three out of four cases is unsuspected. The symptoms are not generally understood. These are: a habit of lying on the right side, short breath, pain or distress in side, back or shoulder, irregular pulse, asthma, weak and hungry spells, wind in stomach, swelling of ankles or dropsy, oppression, dry cough and smothering. Dr. Miles' illustrated book on Heart Disease, free at the Logan Drug Co., who sell and guarantee Dr. Miles' unguented New Heart Cure, and his Restorative Nervine, which cures nervousness, headache, sleeplessness, effects of drinking, etc. It contains no opiates.

No Money Required of Responsible Parties to Commence Treatment. Drs. France & Ottman. Formerly of New York, now of the FRANCE MEDICAL AND SURGICAL INSTITUTE, Columbus, Ohio, by request of many friends and patients, have decided to visit BRIDGEPORT, SHERMAN HOUSE, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 2. BELLAIRE WINDSOR HOTEL, THURSDAY, MARCH 3.

DR. OTTMAN THE CELEBRATED EXAMINING PHYSICIAN OF THE FRANCE MEDICAL AND SURGICAL INSTITUTE, 38 & 40 W. Gay St., one block N. of State House, Columbus, O., incorporated, 1885. Capital, $200,000.

DRS. FRANCE AND OTTMAN, after years of experience, have discovered the greatest cure known for weakness in the back and limbs, involuntary discharges, impotency, general debility, nervousness, languor, confusion of ideas, palpitation of the heart, timidity, trembling, dimness of sight, or giddiness, disease of the head, throat, nose or skin, affections of the liver, lungs, stomach, or bowels—those terrible disorders arising from the solitary vice of youth—and secret practices, brightening their most pallid hopes or annihilating, rendering marriage impossible. Take one candid thought before it is too late. A week or month may place your case beyond the reach of hope. Our method of treatment will speedily and permanently cure the most obstinate case, and absolutely restore perfect manhood.

TO MIDDLE-AGED MEN.—There are many from the age of 30 to 60 who are troubled with frequent evacuations of the urinary deposits, a rosy or slightly burning or smarting sensation, weakening the system in a manner the patient cannot account for. On examination of the urinary deposits, a rosy or milky hue will be found, or the color will be thin or milky hue. There are many men who die of this difficulty, ignorant of the cause, which is a second stage of seminal weakness. We will guarantee a perfect cure in all such cases, and a healthy restoration of the genito-urinary organs.

FREE EXAMINATION OF THE URINE.—Each person applying for medical treatment should send or bring from 2 to 4 ounces of urine (that passed first in the morning) in a clean glass, which will receive a careful chemical and microscopic examination, and if requested a written analysis will be given. Persons ruined in health by unlearned pretenders, who keep trifling with them month after month, giving poisonous and injurious compounds, should apply immediately. Delays are dangerous.

WONDERFUL CURES. No experiments or failures. Parties treated by mail or express, but where possible, personal consultation is preferred. Curable cases guaranteed. No risks incurred. Cases and correspondence confidential. Treatment sent G. O. D. to any part of U. S. List of 120 questions free. Address, with postage, DR. FRANCE, Nos. 38 and 40 W. Gay St., Columbus, O.

CASTORIA for Infants and Children.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me." H. A. ANGERM, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y. The use of "Castoria" is so universal and its merits so well known that it seems a work of supererogation to endorse it. Few are the intelligent families who do not keep Castoria within easy reach. CARLOS MARTY, M. D., New York City. Leto Pastor Bloomfield Reform Church.
