He was a Wheeling Boy.

The Cincinnati papers are indignant over the verdict of murder in the second degree in the case of Joe Levo, the murderer of Ida Kipp. Levo was born in Wheeling, but went to Cincinnati when a boy. He has a married sister living here, and his brother is also a resident of this city, and employed at a South Side factory. The murder was a cold-blooded one, but the jurors all considered the prisoner's sanity a matter of grave doubt, hence the verdict which the papers all denounce.

Films—Fitzsimmons.

Mr. James Filan, the well known saloon keeper and member of Council, was married yesterday morning at half-past five o'clock, at St. Joseph's Cathedral, to Miss Nora Fitzsimmons. Rev. Father McElligott officiated at the nuptial ceremony. A wedding breakfast and reception at the home of the bride's mother followed, and in the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Filan left for Pittsburgh, where they will remain a few days. They will go to housekeeping on their return.

Mr. Gilmore, of New York. About 6 o'clock yesterday morning he got up and went out to the yard. He did not return, and some time after he was missed, and his body was found in an outhouse. Mr. Yates was formerly a prosperous and well known farmer of this county, living near Roney's Point. Several years ago he sold out his farm there, and since that has been spending his time about among his children.

A WHEELING GIRL IN TROUSERS

Locked Up in Pittsburgh—Didn't Know It Was Against the Law.

Yesterday's Pittsburgh Dispatch contains a column article on the escapade of Ada Schell, a Wheeling girl, who left this city about six months ago and is living with her sister in Allegheny.

William Kramer, a young basket maker, was Ada's "steady company"; he visited her Monday evening, taking a companion, one George Beecher, along. After playing a game of euchre the trio engaged in general conversation. Kramer bragged of Miss Schell's love for him, and his sweetheart agreed with him that she did, indeed love him, and when Beecher dared her to dress in men's clothes and accompany Kramer to Allegheny, she, to show her love for the latter, immediately accepted, the stipulated wager being a couple of theatre tickets. Beecher being a small man, the girl decided to wear his clothes, and retiring to another apartment, he disrobed, and handed out his clothes. The girl was soon dressed in the, to her, new fangled togs, and she and her lover left for Pittsburgh, leaving Beecher behind clothed in an old wrapper belonging to Miss Schell.

Arrived in Pittsburgh, they began to take in the sights, but were soon compelled to flee from several men, who had penetrated the girl's disguise. Their pursuers notified an officer and the two were arrested, taken to the station house and locked up over night. In the morning Miss Schell was discharged by the magistrate with a lecture, and Kramer was fined $5 and costs. For fear of arrest Beecher remained at the girl's house all night, clothed in her wrapper.

GRAVEYARD INSURANCE

As Worked by a Wheeling Agent.
He Writes a Policy

ON A MAN LYING ON HIS DEATH BED

Mrs. G. C. Winzenried Relates How She Secured a Policy, that Wasn't Policy, on Her Husband's Life. Agent A. J. Byerly's Hearing Continued, and He Himself Recommitted to Jail.

From the documentary evidence submitted to Squire Arkle yesterday it was apparent that A. J. Byerly, the insurance agent, was not a bit particular about the risks he insured for his company. On the seventeenth day of last October the late Mr. G. C. Winzenried was insured by Byerly in the Provident life insurance company, and $2 00 was paid in by Mrs. Winzenried. On January 19 the secretary of the company discovered that a policy had been issued to Winzenried, and when the second payment was made by Mrs. Winzenried, he gave the money, $5 20, to Byerly with instructions to cancel the policy and return the money, as Winzenried was sick and his application never should have been accepted.

During Byerly's hearing yesterday, on the charge of having obtained money by false pretense, Mrs. Winzenried testified that Byerly had come to her, informed her that the policy had to be cancelled, but said, that for $1 80 more he would insure her husband's life in the American Mutual Insurance company, of Elkhart, Ind. After some hesitancy, Mrs. Winzenried gave the agent the money. Last Saturday, February 13, she hunted up Byerly, told him that her husband was dead, and asked for the policy. The agent told her that he had sent on the money and was expecting to receive the policy. If the latter was refused, the money would be returned to Mrs. Winzenried. He also told her that he already knew of her husband's death.

Byerly took the stand and admitted that he had not sent the money to Elkhart, but produced an application for a policy on Winzenried's life, which application had been returned to him from Elkhart for emendation. He had not sent in the money, he said, because it was customary for insurance agents to retain the money, take out their commission and send on the balance when the application was accepted. He claimed that he had committed no offense and had intended to return the money to Mrs. Winzenried.

The application Byerly had sent on to Elkhart was the proof of the way some agents do up the companies they represent. The application contains several questions, which are to be answered by the party desiring a policy, and some to be answered by the agent. From the testimony it was proved that Mr. Winzenried was not present when the answers were filled. One question asks as to the patient's health, and Byerly wrote the answer "Good," when the fact was that Winzenried was sick in bed at the time. Another question is, "Has the risk ever been sick at any time in his life?" "Never," wrote Byerly. "What is his appearance as to general health?" "Good," wrote the agent, and Winzenried was at that moment sick in bed, or was at least outside of the range of Byerly's vision.

The evidence all being in, Squire Arkle took the matter into consideration, and announced that he would give his decision on Thursday at 3 p. m. Byerly was remanded to jail.

The hearing of the case of assault and battery and trespass, charged against Jack Lash and Burt Haggerty, was postponed until Wednesday at 2 p. m.

Robert Purcell, charged with illicit intercourse with Mamie Stevens, appeared before Squire Arkle yesterday and gave himself up. He was released on his own recognizance and the hearing set for two o'clock this afternoon.

The Late Captain Schmidt.

The Washington, Pa., Reporter has this to say of the death of Capt. Charles Schmidt, already announced in the INTELLIGENCER: On Sunday afternoon Captain Charles Schmidt, the well known vine grower of South Strabane township, died of typhoid pneumonia, aged seventy-two years. Captain Schmidt was very well known in this place, having been in business in town for many years before his removal to the farm east of town. He was a man of sterling integrity and he will be missed from the community. Mr. Schmidt leaves a wife and four children, two daughters and two sons. The daughters are the wives of John and George Becker. Of the sons, Frank is unmarried and lives at home, while Charles occupies a responsible position with Reymann, the Wheeling brewer.
