The Intelligencer.

WHEELING, FEBRUARY 27, 1892.

THE approaching contest is rendered especially important by reason of the industrial and financial policies of the Government being at stake. The popular decision on these issues is of great moment and will be of far-reaching consequence.

The Immigration Problem.

It is much to be hoped that the immigration matter may be taken hold of vigorously and disposed of for the common advantage before circumstances force it into the realm of partisan politics.

The question appeals to the common sense and the patriotism of citizenship of all kinds, native or adopted, of all conditions and of all parties. It has the keenest immediate interest for the wage-earners of the country, which is another way to say that it is of profound moment to the great majority of the people with whom there would be no country to speak of.

Happily we have got away from the idea that this country is to be forever the home of the oppressed of all lands, whether their coming be of advantage or disadvantage to us. In our legislation cutting off Chinese immigration, in our contract labor laws, in our laws prohibiting the coming of paupers, criminals and others likely to become a public charge or a public danger, we have clearly and emphatically asserted the wholesome principle that we no longer hold ourselves helpless to deny residence and citizenship to whom we do not want.

The universal asylum idea may have been very well in an earlier day, when less advantage was taken of it and when the scheme of "assisted emigration," the deportation of criminals and paupers in bulk, had not yet been invented. With immigrants of all sorts, largely undesirable sorts, pouring in on us at the rate of half a million a year, representing so many mouths to be fed and backs to be clothed, it is the common instinct of self-preservation which asks us what we are going to do about it.

The new-comers must gain a livelihood or be maintained at the expense of those who work, and so long as they continue to come we must try to absorb them into the whole body of the people. Most of them, let it be admitted, come to work. What does this mean? It means that they come to compete for work and wages in a labor market in which our own labor is struggling to maintain the standard of its wages and the stability of its employment.

We make a logical and humane and patriotic effort to preserve to our wage-earners their work and their wages through a protective tariff, and through this instrumentality we accomplish a vast deal of good for the whole country; but it has become necessary to complete the circle of protection by erecting a barrier against the producers from other lands, as well as their products.

To meet this situation the INTELLIGENCER has proposed a tax of $200 on every immigrant fit to be let into the country at all. The object of the tax would be to reduce the number and improve the quality of the immigrants, each a desirable end. The sum of Europe will not come rushing at the rate of tax proposed. Those who do come will be above the average, and they will contribute only a reasonable initiation fee to admit them to the full benefits of this great national society of ours. Every man, woman and child that comes is by the mere act of coming admitted to equal ownership in all the public property accumulated by years of toil and taxing—national, state, county, city property—and to equal privileges with the oldest and the best of our citizens.

This country belongs to those who are here and have made it. We have a right to keep it for ourselves and our prosperity. We can let in or keep out whom we will and for reasons satisfactory to ourselves. The sooner we begin to turn back the tide the better for the country.

The question is too much alive to be kept in the background. Every steamer that comes across the ocean thrusts the matter before our eyes. Every man in the country knows what is going on and what it means. Behind those who come is the tremendous pressure of those who will come as soon as they get the opportunity. Half a million immigrants a year may easily be doubled without making any serious impression on the reserve force of possible immigrants.

This is a good time for the people to speak out and let Congress know what they want done about it.

SENATOR QUAY'S health is improving, and in due course of mail he will be on deck again. There is enough at home to engage his attention, and the opposition to his re-election will find that there is enough of him to engage their thoughtful consideration. Altogether it is a pretty fight as it stands.

An Indefensible Act.

The INTELLIGENCER suspected the "accidental social gathering" of five Democratic members of the Council committee on police in the back room of a saloon the other night to be more than it was represented to be. If the proceedings last night did not justify those suspicions, they certainly require explanation.

Chief of Police McNichol made grave charges against an officer whom he sought to remove. He named reputable citizens as the aggrieved parties, and indicated his readiness to produce many witnesses.

The committee ignored the opportunity to establish the truth or falsity of these charges, and ordered the officer reinstated on March 1.

If Mr. Shanley is guilty as charged it is unwise, subversive of good municipal government and indecent to replace him. If he is innocent it is unjust to him to reinstate him with such charges hanging over him, not proven false. There is no point of view from which the committee's action can be reasonably defended.

The Conspiracy Against American Industry.

The Register belongs to the band of conspirators who are doing all they can to discourage the tin plate industry in this country and to prejudice the public mind against the effort that is being made to establish an American tin plate industry. The conspirators have some reason of their own for preferring to have tin plate for the American market made in Wales.

These things will not be forgotten. The conspiracy may not be without its effect on the young industry, but the conspiracy will not succeed and the tin plate industry will. The country has gone successfully through other industrial struggles. It has made steel rails, for example, when it was said they could not be made in this country. It has shown that American skill can make ribbons, silk dress goods, fine glass ware, china; has furnished new employments for American labor and cheapened the price of every article.

So it will be with tin plate. When this industry shall have been established in the United States the product will be furnished to consumers cheaper than ever the foreign manufacturer furnished it.

Why do the Democratic party get red in the face over the proposition to keep at home $20,000,000 a year and to cheapen every piece of tin plate? It may be good partisan politics, but it is a very inferior article of business and patriotism.

Too Big for Comfort.

What is this we see? The Democratic majority in the house so large that it may have to content itself with a conference on the silver question because the faithful cannot be pulled into a caucus? This is more than sad. A conference cannot bind. That is the gentle office of the caucus.

If the Democrats had the house by a narrow majority they would have no trouble to "get together," as Mr. Randall advised. The land-slide which brought in the present Democratic house brought with it a good many statesmen who feel that they are as big as any other big statesmen, leaders by the score, every one with his hat full of schemes necessary to the salvation of the party.

So it happens that there is no leadership and the party is powerless to make headway against the force of its own numbers. This is an oddly interesting situation in which the Republicans of the country are understood to find great and growing comfort.

Emperor William and his Toilers.

A riotous demonstration at his castle gate is the response of the German Socialists to Emperor William's alleged desire to do something to improve the condition of the wage-earners of his great empire. Perhaps they do not believe him sincere. Perhaps they are against the government on general principles.

At all events they reject the young emperor's overtures and in effect aid the aristocratic party in its efforts to tie the emperor's hands. This is not the intent but it is the effect.

It is the misfortune of a monarch in these days to be suspected when he proposes something for the masses, who cannot understand how a person so far away from them, being out of touch with them can honestly desire to benefit them in any way.

The idea of the German masses seems to be that the emperor reveals his real self when he tells his soldiers that they belong to him body and soul and must shoot down father or brother at his command. The doctrine of absolute ownership suggests a servile state which is repugnant to the Teutonic mind.

A Better Way in Journalism.

Taking up the report that Mr. Whitelaw Reid is about to give up the diplomatic post in Paris and resume the editorship of the New York Tribune, the Sun, World and Herald, competitors in business and opponents in politics, embrace the opportunity to speak in terms of highest commendation of Mr. Reid's services abroad.

It is pleasant to note that a man is no longer considered of necessity a horse-thief and a scoundrel in general because he is connected with an opposition newspaper. As journalists come to a higher respect for their profession they take more delight in treating each other as gentlemen and praising merit where they find it. Mr. Whitelaw Reid has reflected credit on the American press.

THE INTELLIGENCER is in receipt of two dollars from Mr. H. Sinsel, Pruntytown, and an equal amount from Mr. W. Ballard, Glenville, for the Russian famine fund. The money has been turned over to the city bank, as other contributions for the same fund will be.

It will be some satisfaction to Hill to lay Cleveland out as cold as a dead mouse, but while this is part of his programme it is not the whole of it. The other part will give the Democracy more trouble before it reaches the end of it all.

They are not making so much fun of Uncle Jerry Kaak as they used to. Uncle Jerry has taken his place among the solid men of the country. He is one of the best of the cabinet officers.

The Blair boom is doing very well for a boom of that kind. Perhaps the Chinese will come to the rescue and help us out of the dilemma.

The way to carry West Virginia is in blocks of ones. Individual work, the individual vote—this is what will tell.

What is there about Capt. John K. Thompson that makes the esteemed Register so snappish?

The Cleveland men regard them as the Hill-hounds of the opposition.

BREAKFAST BUDGET.

The Woman's Tribune tells of a chivalrous justice down in Alabama who says that, when the young lawyers spout law at him till they don't know which side they are arguing and he doesn't either, he listens to them all and reserves his decision until the next day. Then he goes home, states the case to his wife, and she gives the opinion, which he announces in the morning. The man says his wife doesn't know a line of law, but that she has the biggest stock of common sense of any woman in that part of the country.

COL CAMPBELL'S WORK.

What He Has Done for the World's Fair in Australasia. London Correspondence. New York World.

Colonel Alexander Campbell, West Virginia's World's Fair commissioner to Australia and New Zealand, sailed by the Britannic on Wednesday.

He has busied himself during the past seven months with heaping up exhibits for the Chicago Exposition, traveling through Queensland, Tasmania, Victoria, New Zealand, New South Wales, South Australia and Ceylon.

Zealand, will run fortnightly from Sydney to San Francisco. Intense interest is shown in the fair in Australasia. These colonies have claimed 1,000,000 feet of space, New South Wales alone asking for 370,000 feet.

Commissioner Higginbotham, who has been appointed for New South Wales, will sail for the United States immediately.

The principal exhibits from Australasia will consist of wool, minerals, flax, blue gum and Maori curios.

New South Wales has appointed fifty-three commissioners. Among the articles shown will be the famous jarra flower, which is the hardest wood in the world. It is impervious to water and will lie 100 years underground without decaying.

THE PENSION OFFICE.

Investigation Begun—Secretary Noble Examined by the Committee.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 26.—Secretary Noble was examined to-day by the special house committee appointed to investigate the management of the pension office. Mr. Enloe questioned about the removal of young Green B. Raum.

The secretary narrated the facts, now well known, of how Civil Service Commissioner Lyman called on him in May, 1891, with a paper making charges against young Raum of receiving money either directly or indirectly, through a colored man in the treasury department, for the appointment of a man named Smith, and another man named Johnson personating Smith, in the necessary civil service examination.

The secretary said he had never been his practice to wait very long under such circumstances, and he immediately required young Raum's resignation. He did not examine into the matter before the report of the civil service commission. Young Raum was the son of the commissioner, and he gave him time to find something else to do before his resignation took effect. He treated young Raum mildly, as he thought the circumstances required that he should do so because of the young man's relationship to the commissioner.

Mr. Little, of New York, asked if it were customary to give men whose resignation was demanded ten days leave. The secretary said there was no rule on the subject. He had expected there would be some criticism of his action, but the man being young, he would rather let him go out under such circumstances than to shirk the responsibility and criticism.

Mr. Brosius, of Pennsylvania, and Mr. Payson asked if an opportunity had been given young Raum to defend himself from the charges made.

The secretary replied, "No, because the charge was of such a character affecting the service so deeply; because the charges were brought to me by an officer of the government which had investigated the matter, and because they made statements so apparently truthful, I determined to rid myself of it at once. I thought the good of the service demanded that he should go and I sent him."

The secretary said he had done nothing with reference to the fraud on the civil service commission, for the commission looked to him to take care of Raum and it would take care of the offense against it.

Mr. Enloe then asked the secretary about the filing of charges against young Raum by Messrs. Howard and Engle, clerks in the pension office, charging Raum with demanding money from them. He told Mr. Bussey to call the commissioner's attention to this matter and request him to see to it. The commissioner said the charges were circulated to injure him and filed counter-charges with a demand for the removal of these men, and Special Examiner Taylor, who was suspected by the commissioner of being connected with the matter. The secretary told Mr. Enloe that he thought the charges about balanced each other. Young Raum was out of the service and he refused to remove Howard and Engle. Taylor had asked to resign because he (Mr. Noble) had previously come to the conclusion that it would advance the government interests. The commissioner and Mr. Taylor were not getting along together. Mr. Enloe proceeded to question the secretary as to the removal of persons without cause. Mr. Noble said all removals were for cause.

The secretary was next asked about the re-ratings which occasioned so much comment early in the administration of the pension office. He said that the responsibility originally rested on Commissioner Black and when he found Commissioner Tanager was proceeding to carry into effect his predecessor's ruling to a degree highly injurious to the government he promptly stopped it. He thought it intolerable that employes should undertake to re-rate themselves and he made them feel the weight of his authority. Those re-ratings were not for large amounts each month, but as they went back a long time the aggregate was considerable. Mr. Noble said he wished to say so far as the efficiency of Commissioner Raum was concerned that he thought he was running the pension bureau with great efficiency.
