

ENGLAND'S DANGER.

Lord Salisbury Says the British Free Traders Have Gone Too Far.

HE IS NOW FOR PROTECTION.

The English Premier Creates a Sensation by Calling Attention to the Fact That Free Trade Has Failed-- Predictions Regarding Its Benefits That Are Unfulfilled-- England Cannot Fight the American Tariff-- London Editors Criticize the Speech.

Colly Dispatch from London, May 18.

Lord Salisbury, in a speech which he delivered yesterday at Hastings, counseled the workmen to follow the example set them by other nations, and substitute arbitration for the violent methods which were sometimes adopted for settling labor disputes.

England only maintains the position which she occupies by the vast industries existing here, but a danger is growing up. Fifty years ago everybody believed that free trade had conquered the world, and prophesied that every nation would follow the example of England.

The results, however, are not what has been expected. Despite the prophecies of the free trade advocates, foreign nations are adopting protection. They are excluding us from their markets and are trying to kill our trade.

We live in an age of war tariffs. An important point is that, while nations are negotiating to obtain each other's commercial favor, none is anxious about the favor of Great Britain, because Great Britain has stripped herself of the armor and weapons with which the battle is to be fought.

The attitude which we have taken in regarding it disloyal to the glorious and sacred doctrines of free trade to levy duties on anybody for the sake of anything we get thereby may be noble, but it is not business-like.

If you intend to hold your own in this conflict of tariffs, you must be prepared to refuse nations who injure access to your markets. We complain most of the United States, and it so happens that the United States mainly furnishes us with articles which are essential to the food of the people, and with raw material which is essential to our manufactures.

We cannot exclude either without serious injury to ourselves. I am not prepared, in order to punish other countries, to inflict dangerous wounds upon ourselves. We must confine ourselves to those matters whereon we will not suffer much, whether importation continues or diminishes.

While we cannot raise the price of food and raw material, there is an enormous mass of imports, such as wines, spirits, silk, gloves and laces, from countries besides the United States which are merely luxuries, and of which a diminished consumption could be risked in order to secure access to the markets of our neighbors.

I shall expect to be excommunicated for propounding such a doctrine, but I am bound to say that I think the free traders have gone too far.

SALISBURY CRITICIZED

By the London Editors for His Speech--He Surprised Even His Friends.

LONDON, May 19.--The Daily News, commenting on Lord Salisbury's speech at Hastings, ridicules what it terms the speaker's views on "protection by halves," and adds: "If protection is beneficial, farmers are equally entitled with manufacturers to be protected. If Mr. Goschen had any backbone he would resign to-morrow."

The Chronicle says: "The Gladstonians ought fervently to pray Lord Salisbury to deliver a series of addresses until the brink of the election. Fair trade is the incline plane which has led European countries, like the Gladstonians, into the sea of absolute prohibition. We should not be surprised to hear that this speech brought about the dissolution of the unionists' alliance. It will certainly modify the country's belief in Lord Salisbury's statesmanship."

The Standard says: "Lord Salisbury's remarks about free trade will be a surprise, even to many of his followers. The facts he mentioned are susceptible to other interpretations than those he placed upon them. He would have acted more prudently by omitting this portion of his speech."

The Telegraph comments Lord Salisbury's courage in braving misrepresentation by boldly speaking his thoughts on an important question.

The Times says: "Lord Salisbury's lopsided scheme would involve us in angry conflicts and leave the most serious part of the wrong untouched. It is a mere dream to suppose that a war of reprisals against a few protectionist countries, allowing the others to go scot free, would have any chance of acceptance in Great Britain, or that a serious proposal in that direction would not give rise to a bitter, prolonged conflict, imperiling the unity of the Conservative party and Unionist alliance. It is to be regretted that Lord Salisbury thought it expedient to touch the subject."

In addition to his remarks on free trade, Lord Salisbury dwelt at length on the Irish question. He read a strong protest from non-Episcopal ministers in Ireland against Gladstonian home rule, declaring that priestly influence would be paramount in a Dublin Parliament and would be certain to lead to civil war. This, he said, was the most important testimony, as they could not be accused of much sympathy with the present English government. After again denying that he had urged Ulster to rebellion, Lord Salisbury quoted Sir Robert Peel's famous warning that "if the Union should be repealed, the spirit of the Protestant North would awake from its repose to defend itself from civil and debasing domination begotten by a foul union of religious hatred and perverse ambition."

"With these words from the grave of the illustrious past," said the speaker, "I entreat you to pause before you commit yourselves to this mad experiment."

ELECTRIC DARKNESS.

The Circuit which Includes the City Hall Clock Furnishes no Light.

Early yesterday morning the electric lights on the East Wheeling circuit, which includes the City Hall clock, by the way, were dark as Erebus, whatever Erebus is. It is most too early to have people become tired of the new system, but workmen and others who had to make their way through the sloppy weather, on the steep hill streets in the rear end of the Third ward, were very tired before they had gone a square. It would be a good idea to keep the gas burning, as of old, in the town clock, especially, as the electric lights are not turned on until long after the figures on the dial are invisible on account of the darkness, and are turned off long before it is light enough to see them. The little gas burned would not cost much in proportion to the advantage, especially if that circuit is to be dark very often.

ROLAND REED.

"Lord Mo Your Wife" is cleverer than most farcical comedies seen in Boston. It is bright, brisk and full of mirth. Mr. Reed's Captain is a personification quite distinct from Bandy in the Woman Hater, and Smythe in Cheek, and yet it is as effective--Globe, Boston.

In "Lord Mo Your Wife" Mr. Reed has a success, and one that cannot fail to be popular whenever and wherever he appears in it. One fault of the piece is the excessive demand it makes upon the audience and its mirth-provoking scenes--Boston Herald.

Mr. Reed will be seen at the Wheeling Opera House Friday and Saturday evenings and Saturday afternoon.

All Sorts of Local News and Gossip from the Glass City.

A very remarkable occurrence on the Ohio River railroad happened just opposite this city yesterday and was witnessed by several people. Just ahead of the north-bound train two horses were seen running wild, a bay and a gray. A trestle over a roadway was reached and the bay left the track, but the gray undertook to jump over it and landed on its stomach with all four feet through the trestle. The train stopped, but before any of the men reached the animal it rolled over onto its back and turned clear off the trestle and galloped away as if it had only been having fun.

A WONDERFUL CASE.

The Husband Appears Before a Notary and Makes an Affidavit.

A Most Graphic Story Told by a Well-known Lady Which is Confirmed by Her Husband.

Much has been written of cases where people have been brought to life after having been to all appearances dead. Many more instances have occurred where persons have been at death's door, given up to die by those around them, but who by timely aid have been restored to life, health and loving friends. The majority of such cases have occurred in remote places and so have attracted but little attention save in the immediate locality.

A remarkable case of that kind has been brought to light here in New York--that of Mrs. M. A. Brensing, now living at No. 137 West 127th street, the facts of which have hitherto been known only to a small circle of friends and the physicians who attended her.

I called at the above number to obtain a full statement of the circumstances, and was courteously received by Mr. Brensing. I explained to him the nature of my mission, and was introduced to his wife.

Mrs. Brensing is the mother of twelve children, all of whom are living. She is a fine looking healthy woman of about fifty years of age and certainly her appearance did not indicate that she had had such a wonderful experience.

"The circumstances of my death," she said, "occurred a few years ago. I was suddenly seized with an illness for which I could not account for up to that time. I had never had any indications of disease in any way. It was accompanied with the most unusual symptoms. My body was in constant pain, and very sensitive, so that I could not bear the contact of any but the lightest garment. I can scarcely tell of the agony I suffered during that time. The physicians who had been in attendance pronounced it to be acute Bright's disease, and after a time informed me that I could not possibly live. At that time it seemed to me that death would be a welcome relief from my sufferings.

"In a few days they told me that I was slowly dying and my friends were called in to bid me farewell, each one thinking it was for the last time. I was prepared to go, yet the desire to live--for and with my family--was strong within me. When a dear friend called to see me and told me of a remedy which she thought might have helped me had I but used it in time, I saw in her words a ray of hope.

"I was then almost in the embrace of death, in fact, I was dying, yet my husband sent for some of the medicine and gave me a small quantity at once. After taking the second dose a peaceful, restful feeling seemed to steal over me, and for the first time in several days I slept.

"The change in my condition, for I was improving, perplexed the doctors, for they did not know then of the medicine which had been given me. From that time my recovery was assured, and I grew gradually better until my health was fully restored.

"I thank God," continued Mrs. Brensing, fervently, "that my life was spared, and through the agency of Warner's Safe Cure. It cured me, and I know that it will cure others. I feel it to be my duty to tell the whole world about it, for it may save other lives."

"The statement of my wife," said Mr. Brensing, "is the exact truth, and I am ready to swear to it."

I accompanied him to the office of a notary, where he made the following affidavit:

George P. H. McVay, Notary Public, No. 258 West 125th street, New York. State of New York, City and County of New York--George L. Brensing, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is the husband of Mrs. M. A. Brensing, whose statement is attached hereto, and that said statement is true as therein set forth.

(Signed.) GEORGE L. BRENSING. Sworn to before me this 15th day of February, 1892. (Signed.) G. P. H. McVay, Notary Public, New York county. (Seal.)

Does any man or woman who reads the above doubt its absolute truth in every respect? Can the earnest gratitude which both husband and wife felt for the wonderful restoration to health be doubted for one moment? There are thousands of other ladies and men who need assistance as this lady did. The above is published in the hope that it may be the means of showing them the way.
