MORAL DEFORMITY

Of Certain Abnormal Types of Men Discussed by Experts.

THE INFLUENCE OF HEREDITY.

Criminal Insanity---Peculiar Formation of the Brain and Head Which Sometimes Characterizes Those Who Commit Brutal Crimes.

European Edition of New York Herald.

The abominable crimes that have been recently committed in France, and of which the most widely known are due to Anastay's knife and Ravachol's dynamite, have once more brought to the front the much discussed question of the character which differentiate ordinary men from criminals. Some authorities think that criminals form a variety in the human race characterized by special signs and subjected to the laws of heredity; others incline to the opinion that they are not in entire possession of their senses; still others finally agree in the widely spread idea that a criminal is an individual that has voluntarily become hardened and dangerous. These form the three types of the criminal by birth, the criminal by brain trouble and the criminal by profession.

According to the idea of M. Lombroso, of Turin, the type of criminal by birth really exists. Such a one is characterized by a cranium with high and retreating forehead, by an excess in development of the maxille, by facial asymmetry, by dental anomalies, by exaggeration of the orbitory cavity, by the existence of a depression behind the head, by reduced frontal curvature and by an increase in the antero-posterior parietal curve.

The compound photograph of the skulls of a number of murderers and of a number of highway robbers furnish, according to M. Lombroso, two types that are remarkably like each other, and show, with an evident exaggeration, the characters of the skulls of criminals and in certain particulars of man in a wild condition. Thus the leader of the Italian school thinks that in every criminal we have to deal with a degenerate individual, with the result of long continued action of the effect of heredity, which throws into the middle of our civilization an individual in the physical condition of the primitive savage, whose anthropological characters he bears with him like so many physical marks. Consequently, criminals are born criminals, fatally condemned by their material and moral organization to theft, murder or incendiarism.

What now are these born criminals? Are they the representatives in our epoch of a more ancient social condition, of a coarser, and more cruel custom; or are they simply madmen? Either idea has been upheld by Lombroso, who, after having considered the criminal as a savage, has now come to consider him as a madman, in the moral sense of the word, without, however, entirely abandoning his first opinion. The modern idea, therefore, of the criminal is that he is either a savage or a madman.

MORAL INSANITY.

In France and in England there is a tendency to identify the criminal type with criminal madness, to which has been given the name of moral insanity. The different forms of insanity being considered diseases of the mind, of the sensibility, or of the will, moral insanity could be considered as a disease of the moral faculty, a degenerative disease in the same degree as the other forms of insanity, but affecting a special department; in a word, the criminal is a madman—that is to say, a patient—in spite of the objection made that with a madman a crime is a purpose and suffices for itself, whereas with the criminal it is generally a means, and most usually a means of pleasure.

The term criminal insanity should therefore be kept to designate the condition of criminals acting under the impulse of some transitory derangement of the intellect, sensibility or will. As for considering criminality as a sort of prolonged condition of childhood, as the normal state of a savage of a previous generation, the idea has been found in contradiction with the fact that women who have a greater resemblance to the primitive type than men, and who, on that account, have striking similarity with criminals by birth, are, nevertheless, good and devoted in the main, and much less inclined toward crime than the men.

There are some persons, however, who do not consider a criminal as either an insane person or a savage, but class the criminal by birth among the professional types. Just as there are physical types—men with artistic, religious or virtuous ideas—so also there are professional types—hunters, soldiers, magistrates and priests, who are characterized by muscular habits, created by imitation and expressed by acquired physical signs added to their innate physical signs.

FINE DISTINCTIONS.

Thus it is usual to refer to these types by saying that they have the physique of their profession. In the same way it is claimed that a criminal merely one of these types, fashioned by the influence of imitation for generations, since that profession has always existed, although it seems never to have been more flourishing than to-day. There is no doubt that it is a hideous type, but it is an anti-social type, according to M. Tarde, whereas the insane person is extra-social and the savage is pre-social.

On the other hand, societies of criminals resemble in all respects industrial corporations, and the increasing number of old offenders proves without a doubt that criminality has taken root and is becoming a career. For these reasons the criminal type can be considered a professional type, and the features which evil doers have in common can be explained in great part by the similarity of their habits.

Before looking for the best interpretation to be given of the criminal type the point whether this type really exists must be settled, as this matter has been contested in many directions. The Italian school has been accused of giving too much importance to physical characters, which it is claimed are not always found, and therefore have no great value; of giving too much attention to anomalies of the cranium and brain which have been found in perfectly honest persons, and of using as an argument the symmetry of criminal brains, as though perfectly symmetrical brains were not absolutely exceptional.

BRAIN FORMATION.

As to the peculiarities of the frontal and parietal curves, to which attention has been called by Bordier, and which have been found as well in persons innocent of any crime, and apparently very little disposed to commit any, they only seem to indicate a condition of intellectual inferiority and a certain exaggeration of the motor activity.

Finally, it is claimed that specialists in criminality would be absolutely unable to agree on the distinctive traits which they attribute to criminals, whose complexion is oftener dark than light, and whose hair is rather smooth than curly, according to some, on the importance to be given to the greater frequency of the depression on the middle line of the occipital bone, which has also been met with in Arabs and Jews, whose crime average is better than that of Europeans, and on the value to be ascribed to the existence of so-called marks of heredity.

Whatever may be the action on the organism of a murderer of the kind of life which he leads, this kind of criminal have all a special physiognomy which has no resemblance at all to the habitual expression of young prisoners which has been modified by the difference of their present surroundings from those in which they had lived previously. By their imagination, intelligence, sensibility, will power and moral sentiments they create a place between the savage and the child, on the one hand, and the insane individual on the other. Since they form, like the latter, a natural family, there is such a great resemblance between all criminals (however different a murderer may be from a dynamiter or an incendiary) that it would almost be allowable to create a science of general criminal psychology in addition to that of general normal psychology.

PUZZLING PROBLEMS.

An attempt has been made to explain crime by a lack of adaptation between criminals and society; but this is rather a definition of crime than an explanation. The desire which leads a man to commit a crime can be compared with the irresistible impulses of epileptic and degenerate individuals. All moral sentiment has disappeared in the majority of professional among them a state of unconsciousness of the wickedness of the deeds they have committed. The criminal is a man with excessive passions which he cannot resist and which he cannot satisfy by legal means; he has neither the courage to become resigned to his fate nor that of setting to work or to struggle; he wishes to occupy life, but he wishes to do so without effort, and by deceit or violence he will get possession of what he wishes, all of this because he belongs to the class of individuals apparently healthy in mind, but who in reality are affected with some hereditary taint or stigma.

Intellectual disorders heaped up by successive generations, or else diseases of the nervous system in general, transmitted from father to son, have had a disastrous influence on the offspring, of which they have lessened the capacity of judging, or reflecting, by stopping the natural intellectual growth. The genealogical study of criminals is therefore indispensable. We must not only look for the direct action of heredity, which exists sometimes, as is proved by our knowledge of whole families of murderers, but also for any other manifestation of a cerebro-spinal complaint, of whatever nature it may be; and we shall then find that even if a person does not bear within him the germ of crime, which has been disputed, he has at any rate that of insanity, which is not so easily contested.

Your Blood

Undoubtedly needs a thorough cleansing this season to expel impurities, keep up the health-tone and prevent disease. You should take Hood's Sarsaparilla, the best blood purifier and system tonic. It is unequalled in positive medicinal merit.

An Undisputed Test of Merit.

A medicine that has been a household remedy for over fifty years, and used in that time by more than 150,000,000 persons, must have great merit. Such a medicine is found in BRANDRETH'S PILLS. This fact demonstrates the value of these pills better than any statement of the proprietors. It will be observed that the dose required to cure is small. One or two pills taken every night for ten or twenty days will cure dyspepsia, costiveness, rheumatism, liver complaint, biliousness, or any disease arising from an impure state of the blood.

BRANDRETH'S PILLS are purely vegetable, absolutely harmless, and safe to take at any time.

A Pointer.

"I am very much pleased with Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says H. M. Bangs, the druggist at Chatsworth, Ill. "During the epidemic of la grippe here it took the lead and was very much better liked than other cough medicines." The grip requires precisely the same treatment as a very severe cold, for which this remedy is so efficient. It will promptly loosen a cold and relieve the lungs, soon effecting a permanent cure, while most other medicines in common use for colds only give temporary relief. 50 cent bottles for sale by druggists.

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Trescott are keepers of the government lighthouse at Sand Beach, Mich., and are blessed with a daughter, four years old. Last April she was taken down with measles, followed with a dreadful cough and turning into a fever. Doctors at home and at Detriot treated her, but in vain, she grew worse rapidly, until she was a mere "handful of bones."—Then she tried Dr. King's New Discovery, and after the use of two and a half bottles was completely cured. They say Dr. King's New Discovery is worth its weight in gold, yet you may get a trial bottle free at Logan Drug Co.'s drug store. 6

FINANCE AND TRADE.

The Features of the Money and Stock Markets.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Money on call easy at 1a1½ per cent, last loan 1 per cent, closing offered at 1 per cent. Prime mercantile paper 3a5 per cent. Sterling exchange $4 86¼a4 87½. Sales 307,561 shares.

The stock market to-day was rather active in the forenoon, but quieted down later, and with the continuation of the demand from the shorts to cover, prices were advanced all along the line. In the making of this result, however, an increased buying by commission houses and some aid from the foreigners contributed not a little, though the long buying was still rather cautious. The size of the short interest, however, was evidently too unwieldy, and the reduction resulted in materially better prices all along the line. The bulls claim that the damage by the floods in a portion of the country, together with the actions by the Northern Pacific and Atchison companies, had been fully discounted and that these influences have had their full effect is seen by the desire to cover by the leading bears. The traders are inclined to rely more upon the attitude of the foreigners, and this fact being ranged this morning on the long side there was some buying for the long account by that class of operators. The weak holders of stocks have been entirely shaken out. The grangers were the leading prominent stocks to-day and Atchison, St. Paul, Burlington and Rock Island gave tone to the market, the last two showing material gains, while a decline in Erie preferred was followed by full recovery. There was more strength and activity in the coalers and industrials in the afternoon, but late in the day the bears made a vicious drive at Northern Pacific preferred and it dropped 1¾ per cent; but while the whole list was affected by such a drop the greater portion of the early gains were retained and the final changes show a number of material advances.

Railroad bonds were in active demand. Sales $2,868,000.

Government and State bonds dull and firm.

Breadstuffs and Provisions.

CHICAGO, May 23.—A surprise was in store for the speculators to-day—the biggest weekly decrease ever reported in the record of the visible supply of wheat. It caused a sharp recovery from a general decline in prices, caused by the sudden general improvement in the weather. The signal service map was the first thing that attracted the attention of operators; it showed that the weather everywhere was splendid for the crops and for farming operations. There were only two points west of Chicago that any rain fall was reported, and the barometer indicated a continuance of these conditions. Values were still further demoralized by lower cables. There was some good buying by those who put out short lines on the recent bulge, and were inclined to take profits. The visible supply was to show a good decrease of any where from 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 bushels, but the report of the lakes was last in, and when that was posted showing a decrease of 4,501,000 bushels, the market took a sudden jump of 1½c. But the advance was met with news of big Indian shipments, 2,200,000 bushels, and a rumor that the world's shipments to Europe were over 8,000,000 bushels.

Corn was weak and lower on fine weather.

Oats unsettled and lower.
