WHEELING, JUNE 3, 1892.

NOTICE TO REPUBLICANS.

The Republicans of Ohio county will meet in their several districts, Monday evening, June 6, 1892, at 8 o'clock, to suggest names for district officers and delegates to the county convention, to be held at the primaries on Saturday, June 11, 1892, between the hours of 9 and 8 o'clock.

Each district will elect five delegates to the county convention, said convention to nominate candidates for county officers and members of the Legislature and elect delegate to the State and Congressional conventions and senatorial caucuses.

The county convention will meet Monday, June 13 at 2 p. m. The suggestion meetings and primaries will be held at the following places:

- Washington—Vigilant Engine House. Madison—Squire Petermann's office. Clay—Old Court House. Union—Atlantic Engine House. Centre—Hook and Ladder House. Webster—United Engine House. Ritchie—Eighth Ward Hose House. Richland—Brick School House. West Liberty—Central School House. Triadelphia—Triadelphia.

The primaries will be held at the same places and in Madison district at the Island Hose House and in Triadelphia district at Robinson's, Elm Grove and Toll Gate.

By order of the Ohio County Republican Executive Committee.

T. C. MOFFAT, Chairman.

H. C. RICHARDS, Secretary.

The approaching contest is rendered especially important by reason of the industrial and financial policies of the Government being at stake. The popular decision on these issues is of great moment and will be of far-reaching consequence.

A Bundle of Inconsistencies.

The free coinage resolution adopted by the Weston convention does not reflect the sentiment of a majority of the Democratic party in the First West Virginia district. That it was not stricken from the platform by vote of the convention, was because no delegate attached enough importance to the whole set of resolutions to object to the railroad process by which they were shoved through.

They are a bundle of inconsistencies, endorsing, as they do, the candidacy of Grover Cleveland in one paragraph and in another favoring the passage of a bill which Mr. Cleveland would veto were he in the executive chair.

Their silver resolution has also placed the Democrats of the First district in the ridiculous light of favoring a fallacy which hundreds of them have denounced, and which is likely to be repudiated in the national and state platforms.

Not only this, but the tariff resolutions go farther than any Democratic First district convention has ever before dared to go. It demands English free trade, pure and simple. It does not speak for "a tariff for revenue, so adjusted as to afford ample protection," or "a tariff for revenue, with incidental protection," or "equalized taxation," but declares that the only true tariff reform would be a "tariff for revenue only," which is just the kind of tariff England has.

Heretofore the Democratic leaders and organs of this district have indignantly refuted the accusation that they favored free trade, or a British tariff, and have always declared that they believed in the principle of protection, though not that of the Republican kind. If the Democrats of West Virginia believe in a tariff for revenue only, why is it that they are opposed to the wiping out of the duties on their coal, their iron and their manufactured products? If revenue is the sole object, why concern themselves as to whether it is raised by duties on articles that compete with their own products, or not?

It is clearly apparent that the Weston resolutions regarding both the tariff and the silver questions were insincere and passed during a wave of enthusiasm caused by the eloquent manner in which they were presented, and without a moment's thought of their significance, or of the more than probable fact that both the national and state platforms will take a very much different stand on those questions.

The manner in which these resolutions were passed is easily explained. Hon. John J. Davis, of Clarksburg, has been for many years a radical free trader. He has never taken a conservative ground, but years ago, when his party in this district was sending protectionists to Congress, he stood by his free trade theories. Nominating conventions have been shy of him. It has been an unwritten law of Democratic conventions that Mr. Davis' extreme free trade views rendered it impolitic that he should be sent to Congress, notwithstanding the fact that he is the ablest Democrat in the district.

Mr. Davis was chairman of the committee on resolutions at Weston. He had succeeded in getting his own county of Harrison committed to the free coinage only idea, and presented the Harrison county "platform" to the committee. Some of the members opposed it. It was too much for them to swallow, but his eloquence prevailed. There was talk of a minority report, but so quickly was the platform rushed into and through the convention that the minority had not time to collect their thoughts.

Mr. Davis had at last succeeded in getting the First district Democrats to commit themselves on paper to a principle they have long denounced as too extreme for a manufacturing district.

The absurdity of the whole situation will be more apparent when our Democratic friends find out the foolishness of making platforms before the national and state organizations lay down the lines upon which they desire the contest to be fought. It will be curious to note the style of campaign in this district, on the Democratic side. The question to be answered is, will our friends fight the national issues on the platform on which their candidates will be nominated, or will they stand by the principles they adopted at Weston?

The Milk in the Coconut.

The Chicago Tribune exhibits the milk in the free coinage coconut when it points out that there is more silver in circulation now in the form of standard silver dollars and certificates represented by silver in the treasury, than there would have been under free silver resumption, but this does not satisfy the free silver cranks for the reason that it still circulates at par with gold, that it has yet 100 cents of purchasing power, that it is not "cheap," that it has not depreciated to its bullion value of two-thirds of a gold dollar.

Those who are the most ardent advocates of free coinage, outside of the silver mine owners, are so because it will depreciate silver money down to its bullion value. This may be deemed a strange statement, but it is true. These advocates are the "Cheap Johns" and they howl for free coinage because, as the Tribune says, they believe it they can secure it, the money of the United States will be debased 50 per cent, enabling dishonest men to cheat their creditors.

The movement is not an honest one in any respect and those innocent people who have been caught by it are the unsuspecting tools of silver owners who want to make the United States treasury the dumping ground of the product of their mines, or of designing Cheap Johns who have actually dishonest motives back of them.

The Fetching Bait.

The New York Herald propounds this interesting question:

There seems to be a deal of good stuff in this country, notwithstanding what Mr. Kipling and others of his peculiar elevation of thought say about us. And this appreciation seems to prevail in England, by men who have made the United Kingdom a commercial empire. Else why should there be so much doing by syndicates, why should our breweries and our railways and now our potteries at Trenton prove to be such fetching bait?

This question may find an answer, perhaps, in another. If, as our free trade friends contend, protection is a bad thing for our industries, and the English tariff policy, is such a glorious thing, why are British manufacturers coming to America with their capital to invest in our protected industries, such as potteries, for instance? Isn't it possible that the "fetching bait" the Herald inquires about, is the fact that such investments are regarded as much safer in America than in England, and that under American laws these industries are fostered?

Protection not only invites capital to invest in our industries, but thereby increases the amount of employment to the wage worker.

What are We Doing?

The smallpox has broken out in most virulent form at Pomeroy, Ohio, to which the INTELLIGENCER called attention yesterday. Parkersburg has already enforced a rigid quarantine against all points infected. Now it turns out that several bad cases have been discovered in Pittsburgh. What are the health authorities of this city doing toward guarding against the possible introduction of the disease in our midst? A stitch in time, gentlemen, etc.

The good work done by the Republican clubs throughout the country in 1888 has not been underestimated. They contributed much to the success of the great battle for protection. The contest this year will be fought on the old lines and the protection clubs must again be placed on a war footing. Let the splendid organizations in Ohio county be revived and organized for the work. The preliminary steps will be taken to-night at the hall in the Busby building and it is hoped that there will be a good attendance of earnest Republicans to set the ball rolling.

The Register says the Democratic party is "the party that has made this country the grandest on earth." This is a surprising bit of news in view of the fact that the Democratic party has not had complete control of the government for more than thirty years, during which time the country has grown very great and very powerful, and also during which time the Republican party from the seat of government at Washington prevented the country from being disrupted by Democratic leaders.

UNTIL the Democratic party produces a bigger and broader man—not in weight and girth—the Republican party cannot afford to resent the slurs that attempt to belittle President Harrison.

Wrote the arrival of the big leaders at Minneapolis Blaine and Harrison stock both go up, according to who does the talking. All sides can find encouragement in the press dispatches.

INTERESTING ITEMS.

A freak, in the shape of an ear of corn, has been found in Georgia. The ear is like most ears of corn in length and size, but at the butt end there are six other little ears—resembling human fingers, giving the appearance of an ear of corn grasped in the hand of a man.

Mr. Hiram Tompkins, the old time Saratoga hotel proprietor, says that he anticipates the largest attendance at that resort this summer that it has ever experienced. He estimates the number of persons who will spend a week or more at the springs at over 125,000.

A lobster measuring thirty-four inches in length and weighing nineteen and one-half pounds was taken from a trap in St. Andrew's bay, near Robbinston, Me., last week. The specimen will be prepared by a taxidermist for exhibition at the World's Fair.

A COWARDLY POLICY.

The "Register" Advises West Virginia Congressmen to Straddle the Silver Issue.

Wheeler Register. We believe the West Virginia delegation will do their party a great service and themselves credit by voting to-morrow to postpone the consideration of the bill at this time. Such a vote would not commit them for or against free coinage. It would simply put them on record of placing the question on the shelf for the present, and where it belongs until more vital and important legislation is considered.
