MASS MEETING

At the Convention—Some Very Entertaining Speeches. MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., June 7.—The mass meeting at convention hall to-night under the auspices of the State League of Republican clubs, was attended by fully 10,000 people, the rainy weather outside appearing not to dampen the ardor of the enthusiastic Republicans.

The meeting surpassed even the convention proceedings of the day in points of enthusiasm and evidence of good feeling. The frequent references to Blaine, Harrison, McKinley, Sherman, Alger and other prominent Republicans of national or world-wide reputation evoked the usual manifestations of approval and admiration.

THURSTON'S SPEECH

The meeting was called to order by John J. Goodenow, president of the Minnesota State League. After a brief speech he introduced John M. Thurston. Mr. Thurston in part said: This assemblage here to-night is not a convention, nor is it proper that we here should voice our individual hopes. This is a mass meeting of Republican electors, and no matter what name may be nearest the heart of another man the name upon the lips of every Republican in the United States day after to-morrow will be the name of the nominee of the Republican convention.

There is no political vendetta within the Republican party. There are no squaring men within the Republican ranks. There will be no halting when the battle is once on, and the flag that represents Republican principles, whatever name may be inscribed upon it, we believe in the Republican party because every star in the Republican flag shines for the protection of every American man.

HORN'S SPEECH

Hon. R. G. Horn, of Michigan, then addressed the audience. "Fellow citizens of the United States," said he, "I like the Republican party because under the great law of the human development it strikes a little higher average than our Democratic brethren can reach. (Applause and laughter.) I like it because it is the party that believes in building up our own country first. (Applause.) The United States of America is the rest of the world afterward. (Applause.) I like it because it has the intelligence to comprehend the great idea of protection to American industry. (Applause.) Our Democratic friends differ from us in the great question. There is no dispute about where we stand on it. A Democrat will tell you right off instantly 'if the tariff which I would enact would do anyone good here in the United States it is unintentional on my part.' (Applause and laughter.) The Republican party believes in helping the people of the United States.

The doctrine of protection, my friends, is the simple doctrine of self protection. That's all it is. It commences with childhood. We protect our children against want, and furnish them the means with which they can do it. It commences with the family. A man's first great duty is to take care of his family and build up his own home and leave the homes of other folks pretty much alone. (Applause.) But in the last year and a half I have had the question asked me a great many times 'What made you Republicans put that wicked duty on the tin plate?' My answer always is: 'We did it on purpose, you know.'

TIN PLATE

We did it for the purpose of manufacturing tin plate here in the United States, and we are going to do it. Why, no, our Democrats say, you don't mean that. Yes I do. Why, you don't really mean we have goods to make tin plate in this country? Yes, why not? what is tin plate anyway? Why, it is a steel or iron plate covered with a little, small amount of tin. Tin is on the free list, we can make iron goods in this country, can't we? Come now, are you making iron goods in the United States? I will ask any Democrat that, why under the protective laws of this nation we manufactured more iron and steel goods last year than any other nation on the face of the globe (applause.) We beat England, herself right here under the American flag, the glory halloojay, as I say. Do you know we are not only going to make tin plate, but we are going to make it cheaper and better than it has ever been bought here for.

TOO LONG GETTING THERE

The trouble of the Democratic party is it takes it too long to get there. I recollect when some of the Democrats did not quite toe the mark on the soldier business. (Laughter.) Why, they met in convention after Gettysburg, after Sherman had started on his march to the sea, and declared the war was a failure. But I have not seen one who thought it a failure for several years. I have a right to talk on this soldier question with such men as Brother Cleveland. He and I belonged to the same brigade during the war. We ought to look at the soldier question alike. But we don't. I recollect how anxious Cleveland and I were to have the boys go at the time when they went. I glory in the fact that the Republican party has always stood by the men that stood by this nation in her great trials.

To Hear New York's Silver-Tongued Orator—He Reviews the Record of the Republican Party and Makes Some Striking Comparisons.

The Republican convention hall, at Minneapolis, of '92 was opened to the general public Monday night with an event long and pleasingly anticipated in local and musical circles—a grand concert by a chorus of 1,000 voices, supported by the Second Regiment Band, of Chicago. A vast audience, numbering over 12,000 people, and filling every seat for distances as far as the eye could reach, surveyed the inspiring scene, which bids fair to become a memorable political battleground. The decorations as prepared for the convention are extremely simple, but very beautiful. At four conspicuous places American flags are fastened under old gold hangings and patriotic effects. The stage was its great military band, its piano, and its thousand voices spreading and filling the entire breadth of the chamber. At 8 o'clock upon the conclusion of the vespertine of the opera of "Rienzi," the audience was well seated and received the opening number with every evidence of delight. Various choruses and solos proceeded the speech of Hon. Chauncey M. Depew, whose coming was hailed with such an uproar as only many thousand persons can make. Mr. Depew said:

Ladies and gentlemen: It has been my privilege to voice the spirit and meaning of the occasion at the dedication of buildings occupied by science, literature, art, industry, education, religion, and philanthropy, and I have spoken at the laying of corner-stones of structures which were to be the homes of mighty newspapers; which were to enlarge the opportunities of education upon the old scholastic basis and upon the new and more practical principle of manual training; which were to concentrate the commercial activities of the continent; which were to provide for suffering humanity; but this is the first time I have ever attempted before a vast audience composed of the members of all parties, to dedicate a hall for the use of one party. I presume that here and there among these twenty thousand auditors will be found a Democrat. I understand that the species is not entirely extinct in the State of Minnesota. But as this is a Republican week, as I am here commissioned by the great State of New York, in conjunction with its other representatives, to nominate the next President of the United States, no man and no woman could be present without expecting that the overwhelming sentiment of the hour should find expression upon this platform. So, if my Democratic friends are here simply as evidence of their presence, or as a protest, or in the spirit of martyrdom, or to find the means of saving grace, I ask them to hear me for my cause, and be silent that they may hear.

ABOUT EIGHTEEN HUNDRED YEARS AGO, when Rome was mistress of the world, Emperor Titus, who was counted the most enlightened and liberal of Caesars, celebrated universal conquest by the dedication of the Coliseum. Within its walls were gathered 80,000 spectators who were to witness a contest of religion and culture of the Roman empire. Thousands of early Christian martyrs, men, women, and children, were mangled, torn, and devoured by wild beasts. Centuries have come and gone, most of them presenting only blood records of strife and sorrow. Millions have died upon the battlefield and upon the scaffold, dynasties have been overthrown, empires disrupted, continents ravaged, and the people kept in a brutish ignorance and slavery; but upon this Western Hemisphere, freedom from caste and tradition, the equality of all men before their maker and the laws, the equal opportunities for everyone to rise to the highest places in the state, and to grasp the largest industrial and commercial prizes, the generous recognition of mutual obligations, open to the other, have created a grander and greater in power, and incalculably better in every attribute of beneficent sovereignty than Rome.

Special Dispatch to the Intelligencer. COLUMBUS, O., June 7.—William Clark, a convict at the Ohio penitentiary to-day made an unsuccessful attempt at suicide. He will serve one and a half years for burglary and larceny.

Peter Jaquet, Salem, N. J., is another witness, who for twenty years suffered with heart disease, was pronounced incurable by physicians, died staring him in the face, could not lie down at night, and was smothering to death. Immediately after using the New Heart Cure he felt better and could lie down and sleep all night, and is now a well man. The New Heart Cure is sold, also free book, by Logan Drug Co.

Woman Suffrage

MINNEAPOLIS, June 7.—No convention is complete in these enlightened days without the woman's suffrage movement coming to the front for agitation, and the tenth Republican national convention is no exception to the rule. A memorial has been presented to the happiness for Rutherford B. Hayes, and whatever may be the outcome of this convention it will put upon record its pride in the wonderfully useful and patriotic administration of Benjamin Harrison.

Our Democratic friends seem to be remarkably deficient in Presidential timber. It is Cleveland or Hill, and nothing beyond. Cleveland and reform, or Hill and reform. That poorest of journalists, Henry Watterson, has recently said that the Democratic party was between the devil and the dark blue sea. By which one of these metaphors he intended to refer to Cleveland and which one to Hill he did not say, but he left the Democratic voters who are seeking light and safety in the condition of the colored convert when the preacher declared that he had hell on one side and damnation on the other. "Then," says he, "dis darkey takes to de woods." But the Republicans

ARE EMBARRASSED WITH RICHES. Ohio, the mother of Presidents and the mistress of offices, has upon this platform admirable qualifications for the chief magistracy in Governor McKinley. She has a statesman whose curative mind has formulated the best legislation of the country and whose name will live forever as one of the greatest of American statesmen—John Sherman. Iowa has the experienced and able Allison; Vermont, Edmunds; Michigan, Alger; Wisconsin, Russ; Illinois, Cullom and Lincoln. I might exhaust your patience before I exhausted the list.

There are two names which at present belong to no state, but to the country. One, that singularly gifted statesman who has contributed so much to the improvements of our industrial possibilities and the glory of American diplomacy—James G. Blaine. The other, that level-headed, wise and eloquent soldier, senator and President, who upon the platform of the people and in the chair of the chief magistrate, has maintained the best traditions of the presidential office—Benjamin Harrison. The Republican party is noted in its policy in every part of the Union, except where here and there the bugle may give a shriller note, because there is more silver in the instrument.

The Democratic party is hopelessly divided upon its industrial policy and on the crucial questions of sound finance and honest currency.

It is eminently fitting and proper that this great hall, which was built to house the products of the factory and the farm of Minnesota should be dedicated to the use of the Republican party. The Republican party has solved the problem of the harmonious activities and mutual prosperity of the farm and factory. It represents that industrial energy and usefully employed capital which is so rapidly developing the resources of our country, with employment and good wages to the laborer, and ever increasing homes to the thrifty and industrious.

THE PERSONAL PASSAGES

of Mr. Depew's speech were accompanied by most magnificent demonstrations. After he had run through the list of "favorite sons," each reciting a scanty measure of applause, he reserving to the last the names of Blaine and Harrison as belonging to no state but to the nation, his point was anticipated. A voice in the gallery cried "Blaine," and such a tumultuous burst of cheering arose that the orator was compelled to halt. After waiting some time for the noise to subside he finally remarked: "I'd like to know who is making this speech." This caused laughter to take the place of cheers and restored silence. Then he delivered his eulogy on Blaine and followed it with an equally graceful panegyric on Harrison as the man on the record of whose administration any candidate must run to win, or be defeated. Once more the cheers broke out in tumultuous volume and it was hard to say which received the greater need of approval.

Mr. Warren D. Wentz of Geneva, N. Y., Tells of His Fearful Sufferings After Gastric Fever and His Cure by Hood's Sarsaparilla

All who know Mr. W. D. Wentz give him the best of recommendations for honesty and integrity. For many years he has worked for Mr. D. P. Wilson, the harness maker and member of the Geneva Board of Health. He says: "I was taken sick last October with gastric fever and my chance for recovery was considered almost hopeless. After 7 weeks the fever slowly left me, but I could not eat the simplest food without terrible distress. It seemed that I had recovered from the fever to die of starvation."

I took peppin compounds, bismuth, charcoal, cod liver oil and malt until my physician confessed that his skill was about exhausted and he did not know who else to try. Every day I took some kind of purgative, but it did me no good. I began to feel better when I took Hood's Sarsaparilla. I had a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla that had been in the house for two or three years, that I found had benefited me previously for dyspepsia. I began taking it and soon began to feel better. I have now taken a little over two bottles and can truthfully say I feel well again and can eat anything without distressing me, even to

Pie and Cheese which I have been unable to touch for years. The English language does not contain words enough to permit me to express the praise I would like to give to Hood's Sarsaparilla. W. D. Wentz, 148 Oak St., Geneva, N. Y.
