But when her mother had reached the hut she ran up to him and hugged him. While the cattle were being milked he went to look after his things.

"What is it," she asked. "It is a hare." "No, it isn't a hare. A hare is white."

"It is brown in summer. It changes its skin." "Has he two skins, one inside the other?"

Instead of answering he took his knife and cut the hare's skin. "No," he said, "he hasn't got more'n one."

The time came when he had to go to the person to prepare for confirmation. It so happened that she went the same year.

But, though he had a coat now, it was a cast-off one of Jesus Oestruo's, which was much too big for him.

He walked alone from the rest; his ears burned when any one looked at him. But if any one dared to mock him he used a pair of fists which inspired respect.

He was a handsome enough lad and finely made, but his clothes and his frowzy hair made him look ugly.

It was at such a time that Birgit sought him and spoke kindly to him. "You mustn't mind the girls," she said; "they laugh at everything. They don't mean anything by it. It's just a way they have."

"Somebody will come to harm if you ever do it," he answered, fiercely. "That is foolish talk," she recently remonstrated. "I know you too well, Ola. You wouldn't harm me."

"Ah, you don't understand me," he said. "It is no use talking." "Oh, yes, I do understand you, Ola," she replied, with a smile, "and I wish you would let me say one thing to you before I go."

"Say it." "I wish—I wish," she stammered, while a quick blush sprang to her cheeks. "No, I think I won't say it, after all," she finished, and turned to go.

"Yes, say it," he entreated, seizing her hand. "Well, I—I wish you could do as the hare, change your skin."

She drew her hand away from his and ran down the hillside, so that the stones and dry leaves flew about her.

That night he picked a quarrel with Thorger Slotten, who was said to be attentive to Birgit, and he thrashed him. All the following winter he kept watch of her from afar, and picked quarrels with everybody whom she seemed to favor.

"Change my skin," he pondered. "Change my skin, like the hare. How, oh, how can I do it?" This thought followed him day and night. One day, in the spring, an emigrant ship bound for America appeared at the mouth of the river.

"OLD JOHN HENRY."

James Whitcomb Riley. Old John's jest was the commonest stuff—Old John Henry. He's tough, I reckon, no one too tough—"Too tough, though, 's better than not enough!"

He does his best and when his best's had He don't fret none, nor don't get sad—He simply loves it the best he had, Old John Henry.

His doctor's jest of the plainest brand—Old John Henry. "A miller's face and a heavy hand " "A religion 'at all folks understand," Says old John Henry.

He feeds himself when the stock's all fed, Old John Henry. "And sleeps like a babe" when he goes to bed, "And dreams of heaven and home-made bread,"

He sin't refined as he ought to be To fit the statues of poetry, Nor his clothes don't fit him, but he fits me—Old John Henry.

JUST IN TIME. Boston Globe. She followed him all day long like a little dog. If he ran, she ran, full and scrubbed her knees, cried and was lifted up again.

He growled of her, and would have liked to run away from her. But he did not dare, for she was his master's daughter, and he was—well, there was the rub—he did not know who he was.

He woke up one day and found himself alone. The sky was above him, and there would have been earth beneath his feet if he had not pointed them in the wrong direction. He was christened in a random way Ola, and was put on the parish, as they say.

Jesus Oestruo took him as his share of the parish burdens. When he was six years old he could be made useful enough to earn his food and shelter.

Jesus Oestruo then wanted to send him away, but his little daughter Birgit was so fond of him that he decided to keep him.

When Ola was twelve years old he could kick a cap from a nail high above his head. Birgit was so fond of Ola that everything he did seemed admirable.

Once she said a bad word and Ola was whipped for it. So Ola was sent to the mountains; he roamed with his alpine hore over the wide mountain plains, ate berries, caught fish, set traps, and was happy.

He hardly thought once of the little girl down in the valley. One day late in the summer she came up to the dairy with her mother. She was carried up on horseback in a basket.

When she saw him she flung herself down upon the grass and screamed with delight. But when her mother had reached the hut she ran up to him and hugged him.

While the cattle were being milked he went to look after his things. She followed him, proud in the thought that he tolerated her.

"Look here," he cried, lifting up a brown hare, "isn't that a big fellow?" "What is it," she asked. "It is a hare."

"No, it isn't a hare. A hare is white." "It is brown in summer. It changes its skin." "Has he two skins, one inside the other?"

Instead of answering he took his knife and cut the hare's skin. "No," he said, "he hasn't got more'n one."

The time came when he had to go to the person to prepare for confirmation. It so happened that she went the same year.

But, though he had a coat now, it was a cast-off one of Jesus Oestruo's, which was much too big for him. His boots, too, and his trousers had seen better days before they made his acquaintance.

He walked alone from the rest; his ears burned when any one looked at him. But if any one dared to mock him he used a pair of fists which inspired respect.

He was a handsome enough lad and finely made, but his clothes and his frowzy hair made him look ugly. Heavy thoughts came to him, and a fierce, defiant spirit was kindled within him.

It was at such a time that Birgit sought him and spoke kindly to him. "You mustn't mind the girls," she said; "they laugh at everything. They don't mean anything by it. It's just a way they have."

FINANCE AND TRADE.

The Features of the Money and Stock Markets. New York, August 6.—Money on call easy at 1 1/2 to 2 per cent. Last loan 1 1/2 per cent. closed at 1 1/2 per cent.

The stock market still further quieted down to-day, and the industrials, with the exception of general electric, were almost entirely neglected, and except in the first hour, railroad shares were not traded to any extent.

"That was what I went to America for," he answered, laughing. The church lay half way up the hillside. Thorger Ola sat down to rest, for he had walked far and was tired.

A bridal party! Yes, there was the bride, with a shining crown upon her head and shining brooches upon her bosom. The procession came nearer. Now the master of ceremonies opened the church doors wide and went to meet the bride and groom.

Ola sat still like a rock, but a strange numbness came over him. As the party drew near to the gate of the churchyard he arose and stood, tall and grave, in the middle of the road. Then came Birgit Oestruo and Thorger Slotten. She looked pale and sad, he defiant.

"You didn't expect me to your wedding, Birgit Oestruo?" he said, and stared hard at her. She gave a scream; she rushed forward and flung her arms about his neck.

"Now, come," he cried, "whoever dares, and I'll make a merry bridal." Jesus Oestruo stepped forward and spoke. His voice shook with wrath and the veins swelled upon his brow.

"Here I am," he said. "If you want the girl you shall fight for her." "Not with you, old man," retorted Ola; "but with Thorger I'll fight. Let him come forward."

The bridal guests made a ring on the green and the bridegroom came slowly forward. "Hard luck," he said, "to have to fight for your bride on your wedding day."

Fight? Birgit, who in her happiness had been blind and deaf, woke up with a start. She unwound her arms from Ola's neck and stepped up between the two men.

"Oh, do not fight, do not fight!" she entreated, holding out her hands first to one claimant and then to the other. "You know, father, for whom I have waited for these five years? You know whom I have loved since I was a child? But you used force against me and threats. Now he has come back. I am no longer afraid of you."

"Whoever will be my wedding guest let him follow," shouted Ola, "for I have in my hands a royal license to be married to Birgit, Jesus Oestruo's daughter."

"All that money can buy you shall have," he added. "I'll make a wedding the fame of which shall be heard in seven parishes around."

He took the bride's arm and marched boldly into the church. The wedding guests looked at Jesus Oestruo, who was venting his wrath upon the groom.

"You coward!" he yelled, "you let the girl be snatched away before your very nose. I am glad enough to be rid of such a son-in-law. Come, folks; we'll have a wedding yet. A girl belongs to him who can catch her."

With a wrathful snort he stalked in through the open church door, and the wedding guests slowly followed.

MERCURIAL.

Mr. J. C. Jones, of Fulton, Ark., says of S.S.S. "About ten years ago I contracted a severe case of blood poisoning. Leading physicians prescribed medicine after medicine, which I took without any relief. I also tried mercurial and potash remedies, with unsuccessful results, but which brought on an attack of mercurial rheumatism that made my life one of agony. After suffering four years I gave up all remedies and commenced using S. S. S. After taking several bottles, I was entirely cured and able to resume work."

S.S.S. is the greatest medicine for blood poisoning to-day on the market. Treatise on Blood and Skin Diseases mailed free. Swiss Symplic Co., Atlanta, Ga.
