A British View of the American Tariff.

The promoters of the McKinley tariff meant it to push forward the policy of America for the Americans.

IN 1890 it was a conflict of predictions; now our adversaries must face facts.

READERS of the Intelligencer going out of town for the summer can have the Intelligencer mailed to them for sixty-five cents per month, postage free.

At It Again.

It is an old theory of the Register's that "stolen fruits are sweetest," and from time to time as the fleeting years go by it becomes the painful duty of the INTELLIGENCER to show our neighbor with his hands in some other fellow's pockets.

This time it is an editorial article from the Buffalo Courier, in which it appeared on August 23. Just three days later it made its bow in the Wheeling Register, again as an editorial article, this time on its mission to fire the heart of the West Virginia Democracy against the so-called "force" bill.

It seems that the "force" bill is to be made odious if all the similar editorial articles in all the Democratic newspapers of the country have to be fished and republished as the Register's own original productions laboriously and patriotically thought out through endless burning of the midnight oil.

Sometimes our neighbor eases up the work of the day by merely appropriating an idea and working it over. This, it must be admitted, has some advantages from the Register's point of view, but it requires a little more thought than the other way and doesn't look so well after it is done.

The phenomenon revealed by the "deadly parallel" may of course be scientifically explained by saying that the Buffalo article smuggled itself into the Register's editorial columns; or that two remarkable minds thought on the same line and in the same words and with the same marks of punctuation; or that the Buffalo Courier had got wind of what the Register intended to say and meanly took advantage by saying it three days before the Register was ready to take the floor.

It will be interesting to see how the Register will go about convincing its readers that it has not insulted them by doing a thing which no reputable newspaper ever does and no publication fit to be called a newspaper has need to do.

The editorial articles of a newspaper are supposed to be its own, and the newspaper which plays on its readers as the Register is in the habit of doing in this regard falls below the level of the curbstone dodger.

A Labor Leader's Views.

Of all the good addresses at yesterday's meeting of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers that of Grand Chief Engineer Arthur was the most notable.

Mr. Arthur went straight to the point. There was no mincing of words, no concealment of honest convictions because they might not be well received, no appeal to passion or to prejudice.

If all labor organizations were led as this one is, and if all labor leaders of his grade had the intelligent, reasoning and reasonable following that Mr. Arthur has we should be much nearer to the day when all differences between employers and employes shall be settled in the high court of reason.

Mr. Arthur, speaking for his order, believes in arbitration, and he takes the ground that the side which "has nothing to arbitrate" makes confession of a moral wrong.

In a sense it is the right of every employer and of every wage-earner to cut short all relations with the other side, to refuse to discuss and to let results take care of themselves.

Arbitration is not perfection, but it has never wrecked an industry and never will set society by the ears.

EVERYWHERE the people want to hear Governor McKinley on the tariff. They like the man and they like his work.

It is very well to tell American readers, as some newspapers are doing, that more attention is paid to sanitation now than in those years when cholera visited this country, and that consequently we have less to fear.

OBSERVE that the European health authorities are strongly recommending, in Russia requiring, the boiling of water before drinking it.

PART of the Democratic scheme in West Virginia is to keep Democrats away from Republican meetings.

All, there, Mr. Register! At the same old tricks? Do you write your free trade articles as you do your "force" bill productions, with your very able scissors reinforced by your highly talented paste-pot?

THE business of the railroads does not show that the country generally is going to the bow-wow.

When the Brothers of Locomotive Engineers wants to be sure of a sincere welcome it has only to take the lightning express for Wheeling, where it has made a deep and altogether favorable impression.

If the Register has any more second-hand indignation to let loose on the "force" bill now is the time while the thing is warm.

NORTH CAROLINA is about to hang a man for burglary. In earlier times men were hanged for lighter offenses.

ME CLEVELAND has this in his favor this time, it is nearly four years since he vetoed a pension bill.

Why She is Handsome. Fairmont West Virginia.

The Wheeling INTELLIGENCER was forty years old on Wednesday. She may now be termed an old lady, but she doesn't look it, being altogether as frisky and sprightly as she was when only sweet sixteen.

BREAKFAST BUDGET.

A Captain Blondell, of Oxford, Ala., offered $25 to any one who would get into a boat and allow it to be blown up with dynamite, so that Blondell might show his life-saving methods.

The shortest will on record in Luzerne county, Pa., was filed on Saturday. The will is on a piece of paper six inches square and is as follows: "Mr. Bankers: Give all my money to Mike Walkie."

Numerous experiments to determine the best fire-resisting materials for the construction of doors proved that wood covered with tin resisted the fire better than an iron door.

UNION MEETING.

From the Programme of Yesterday's Meeting. As down the vale of life we go, In measured tread together,

Mid summer's sun and winter's snow, In fair and stormy weather, We watch some moments now and then For true fraternal greeting,

And mingle with our fellow men At every union meeting.

When brain and brawn together meet In social pleasures surety, Of care and duty on flying feet, With features set demurely, Employment takes possession strong Of every noble and lowly being, Whose heart exults in joyous song, Beyond his power to smother.

Oh, brave and noble men who stand Midst foremost ranks of danger, On every road throughout the land, And all to fear a stranger;

Oh, heroes of the foot-board all, Be true to one another, And swear to nobly stand or fall, In each and every emergency, For universal brotherhood At every union meeting.

Let critics stand beside me when I gaze in upward ecstasies, And note the crowd of honest men Who wear skilled labor's traces; They'll see a better world being—Prized more for brains than beauty—Who nobly fill throughout the land The honored post of duty.

Oh! heroes of the foot-board all, Be true to one another, And swear to nobly stand or fall, In each and every emergency, For universal brotherhood At every union meeting.
