

AT THE Y. M. C. A. HALL.

Rev. Dr. Zimmerman's Discourse there Yesterday Afternoon.

DARKEST MANHOOD AND WAY OUT.

The Besetting Sins of Men which Young Men should Avoid--Forceful Illustrations of the Points Made Drive them Home to the Hearts of his Hearers--He will Close To-Night.

There was a large attendance of young men at the 4 o'clock meeting yesterday afternoon, at the Y. M. C. A. hall. The services were conducted by Rev. A. H. Zimmerman, the evangelist who did such excellent work during the past week.

He selected for the theme of his talk yesterday "Darkest Manhood and the Way Out." Previous to this a number of hymns were sung by the Y. M. C. A. choir and members, the choir being augmented by Prof. William Myers and Mr. Paull, violinists, Dr. John McClure, cornetist, and Mr. Robert McClure, pianist.

Mr. Zimmerman selected his text from Ecclesiastes, VII: 17, 18, 19; "Be not over much wicked, neither be thou foolish; why shouldst thou die before thy time?"

"It is good that thou shouldst take hold of this; yea, also from this withdraw not thy hand; for he that feareth God shall come forth by them all. Wisdom strengtheneth the wise more than ten mighty men which are in the city."

"So then every one of us shall give an account of himself to God." The speaker delivered an eloquent discourse, and drew an illustration on the black board, showing by diverging lines the path of life from birth, one ascending upwards, when everything is in unison with the good and beautiful, the downward line showing where men had refused to listen to their conscience or the voice of the heart that protested against the breaking of the commandments.

He said the worst things in Darkest Manhood were debauchery, blasphemy, taking God's name in vain, and useless profanity. Those denoted human depravity of the worst kind. He said we were fast becoming a nation of swearers, even the children on the street using profanity. Sabbath breaking and gambling were shown also to be curses to manhood. Licentiousness was also held up as one of the great evils that clip the wings of manhood.

The only way out is the gospel way. Resolutions are pledged I believe in, but even they fail when they leave God out of the account. And the only redeeming way is the purchasing and soul cleaning way, through the path of the Nazarene. During the course of the sermon Mr. Zimmerman used a number of powerful illustrations, showing the terrible results of sin and worldly depravity. A number of young men were reached by the discourse and stood up at the close. This evening the last services will be held by Rev. Mr. Zimmerman. He will remain in the city, however, to attend the meeting on Tuesday night, held for the purpose of raising money for the extension and enlargement of the Y. M. C. A. building, making an address on the subject. State Secretary J. C. Sims will also be present and make an address.

SHERMAN'S MONUMENT. It is Being Delayed by a Strike, But is Not at Westery, R. I., Though Near There. Sr. Louis, Mo., Nov. 20.—With regard to the dispatches stating that there was no monument under construction at Westery, R. I., for General W. T. Sherman's tomb, Father Sherman said: "This is a mistake. The monument for my father's grave is being made somewhere in Massachusetts or in Connecticut, I do not know which, my brother having the matter in hand. My brother informed me that he gave the order for the monument immediately after my father's death, and he knows that the contractors set to work to execute the order, and that the monument was very nearly completed when the granite workers went on a strike. The men who have the order are perfectly willing to complete the work, but the workmen will not allow them to go on with or to remove the piece of granite from the works."

PROVIDENCE, R. I., November 20.—The monument of General Sherman, referred to by Father Sherman in his speech at St. Louis has been found two miles from Westery, in the Chapman Granite Works. The order was placed with them last December, and the work continued smoothly until the lock-out in May of this year, and when the men returned to work on September 19 operations were resumed, and the work was completed Tuesday last. After the monument has been inspected it will be shipped to its destination. The labor organizations did nothing outside of demanding more pay for their work in detaining the monument from its rightful owners.

Total, 16,428. For the same period last year the total number was 54,182.

Alabama Election Returns. MOBILE, Ala., Nov. 20.—Election returns were counted last night. Cleveland received 138,123 votes; Weaver, 85,128; Harrison, 83,875; Bidwell, 239. Cleveland has a plurality over Weaver of 52,998, and a majority over all of 44,300. The delegation to Congress is solidly Democratic.

A BIG THEFT

And Quick Work—Ex-press Messenger Bagley's Abrupt Exit as a Crook.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—Did United States Express Messenger George L. Bagley steal $100,000? Is Bagley under arrest? Chief Detective John Shea, of the Chicago police force, answers yes to both questions. General Manager Shepard, of the United States Express Company, answers both questions no.

One hundred thousand dollars, Mr. Shepard says, was missing for a day by virtue of what circumstances he "can't explain in detail or with any definiteness." Captain Shea says his officers have the man, who says the money, and are now with him on the road working up the details of the robbery.

Bagley's run is between Davenport, Iowa, and Chicago. Captain Shea says he left the train at Davenport at 3 o'clock yesterday morning to arrange for sending some potatoes to his family. He did not return. When the train reached this city it was found that a large package of money was missing. The captain detailed Officers Plunkett and Weaver on the case and they learned that Bagley had a female friend, Mrs. Miller, a dress-maker, at 3110 Michigan avenue. Bagley had not been there. They waited. Soon he appeared, and was promptly placed under arrest.

At police headquarters Bagley told General Agent Wyzant, of the express company. The messenger admitted the robbery, and said the money could be found at Geneseo. Detective Weaver at once started for Geneseo with Bagley and on arriving there found the money. Bagley, the captain says, made false statements concerning his actions, which led up to the securing of a confession. Then, too, his action in buying a ticket to Chicago, when he is the bearer of a pass, is peculiar. Such is Captain Shea's story.

Now for General Manager Shepard's story. "It is not true," said he, when told the captain's story, "that any money had been stolen from this company; that any arrests have been made or will be made."

"Scarcely the story has some foundation?" "Yes, it has. It is true that a package containing $100,000 was missing for some time. I can not explain in detail or with any definiteness just how it occurred, but it has been found, and was not stolen. All I can say is that a package of $100,000, which should have been delivered from a certain office to the express messenger was not found in his iron safe. That it was not delivered was a mistake. Twelve hours later it was delivered, and is now in the hands of the proper persons, those to whom it was consigned."

"You say the money was not in the safe? Was it in any other place on the car?" "No."

"It was not delivered to Bagley?" "No."

"At what station was it held back?" "I can not say."

"It was withheld by mistake?" "Yes."

"Has Bagley been arrested?" "No."

"Will he be arrested?" "No."

"Does the company censure him?" "There's nothing to censure him for."

"Will he be discharged?" "For what?"

"Was he on the car when it arrived in this city?" "No; he missed the train."

"Is not that sufficient reason for his discharge?" "Well, I've nothing more to say."

Bagley is now locked up, at Harrison street station, in this city. He was brought back late this afternoon by Officer Weaver, who says that Bagley told him that he opened the package because of curiosity. Then he became alarmed at what he had done, and determined to keep the money rather than turn in a broken package. He put the money into a sack of potatoes which he was bringing home.

After the train had gone he shouldered the sack and took it home, hiding the money in the hay mow. He took from the bundle $1,000, and taking a train at 5:50 a. m. stopped at Geneseo, where he gave $500 to James Ray, a saloon-keeper, who is a friend of Bagley's. He told Ray that he had stolen $100,000, and wanted him to keep the $500 for a lawyer in case he should be arrested. He came on here and was taken into custody. At once, in company with Superintendent Degong, of the express company, and Officer Weaver, he went to Davenport and turned over the money. The party also stopped at Geneseo and asked Mr. Ray for the $500, which he readily surrendered. Then the party came on to Chicago, and that night Bagley was taken back to Davenport. It is not likely that he will be prosecuted.

DROWNED AT NIAGARA.

Suite of a Young Englishman Who Wasted a Big Fortune.

NIAGARA FALLS, Nov. 20.—The story of a misspent life and the dissipation of $200,000 is told in the bloated, almost unrecognizable remains of William Nettle, an Englishman, which were found in the Niagara recently, and were buried in a pauper's grave.

Seventeen years ago, in smoky old London, a bright-faced young man in his teens was enjoying a lucrative clerkship in a large London banking house. He was a native of Cornwall, England, and was paying court to Miss Marshall, a handsome English girl. Seated one morning at his desk in London he was handed a telegram. It announced the death of a wealthy uncle, and disclosed that he was sole heir to £40,000, or $200,000.

These sudden riches coming on the youngster turned his head. In all the rounds of dissipation which followed he never forgot the sweet English girl to whom he plighted his troth, and whom he loved and who loved him. Finally he pulled himself together, for he realized that he must reform. Soon after they were wedded, and life was happy for a time. Gay companions, however, sought him out, and soon wine, hunting parties, etc., had him in the toils.

A good part of the $200,000 had disappeared, and the rest was melting away under the baneful influence of the fast set and the leeches who were sucking his life's blood out.

To save his wife from what he deemed a valuable farm to her. He came to this country three years ago, yet a young man, and attempted once more to reform, but it was a failure. His last spree was indulged, as usual, among the boon companions he had picked up in the village saloons. He left them after that and was never seen by them again in life.

William Nettle's body was found November 10, in an old raceway. The only trace of him was the word of a boarding housekeeper that the man stopped there and owed him money, and the inscription "William Nettle" on the register on the hotel blotter on October 14. The coroner and the police went to work and cleared up the mystery.

Edward Marshall, of Petrolia, Ont., a brother-in-law of Nettle, arrived here to-day. He settled all bills of the deceased, and secured papers and evidence to forward to the sad-hearted woman way off on her lonely farm in England.

A GREAT FAIR GAME.

"Al" Smith, the Noted New York Gambler, Wins $22,400—Takes a Good Deal of Money at Once.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—"Al" Smith, whose fame as a sporting man is international, made the greatest play of his life last week against faro bank. He won $22,400—$20,000 of it at one sitting—and yet he is not satisfied. In the gambling centres all the sports were talking about "Al's" great play and speculating as to when he would stop.

He started out on the warpath on Monday. For a year he had been abstemious. More as a joke than anything else one of his friends bet him $500 a year ago that he would not abstain from liquor for twelve months. The year expired on Sunday last. Smith pocketed the $500 and in celebration of the event took a drink.

If the stories told at the Coleman House are true he did not stop at one, and by Monday the old spirit to "kick the tiger" was rampant in his breast. He went to the gambling house kept by Dargen & Fitzgerald in West Twenty-eighth, near Fifth avenue, and bought $200 worth of checks. He played all that night and far into the next day, and then, exhausted by the long strain, he took a short sleep. Upon awakening he again went to the faro "layout" and resumed his play.

When hungry or thirsty he ordered sandwiches or champagne and still played on. After two days and two nights of play he was $20,000 winner.

Darden had to go deep into the bank "roll" to cash the checks which Smith passed over the board. Several times the player had all the checks in the rack and the bank had to buy them back. When Smith left the gambling house he was still under the influence of liquor. He carried his winnings to the rooms of his partner and turned them over to him. Then he went to sleep. When he awoke yesterday he took another whirl at the faro bank.

"I just want to win car fare," he said to the dealer.

He was $2,400 winner in an hour and had "cashed in." The man who gave the information and was present part of the time while Smith was playing says he never before saw a man play in such luck.

"He didn't play what a gambler would call a good safe game. He simply laid his money down and trusted to luck. He had one of those phenomenal streaks which a man has once in four or five years, and he got all the money."

"The more he drank the more he bet and the more he won. Darden allowed him to play the limit all the way through. He thought, I suppose, that 'Al's' luck would turn, and that when it did all the money would come back to the house. But it didn't, and I guess poor 'Fitz' (meaning Darden's partner, Fitzgerald) is crippled."

If "Fitz" is "crippled" he didn't show any evidence of it at the Gilsey House last night. He was sitting on one of the great lounges in the lobby, perhaps waiting for Smith to revive and take another "fall out of the tiger."

Fitzgerald is well on in years, and, bespectacled as he was, he looked more like a professor than a gambler. But he is accustomed to the freaks of fortune. He conducted the Washington game, over Eugene Brown's place at Thirty-first street and Sixth avenue, for many years and won and lost many thousands of dollars there. While the loss of $22,400 will make quite a hole in his purse, it is not likely there will be any crape on the door bell of the West Twenty-eighth street place as the result of Smith's streak of luck.

His partners are young "Phil" Daly and a Baltimore gambler named Darden. The latter had an interest last summer in the play of the Pennsylvania Club at Long Branch, run by "Phil" Daly.

ROYAL-IMPERIAL QUARREL.

The King of Saxony Parts from Emperor William in an Unceremonious Manner.

BERLIN, Nov. 20.—A sensation has been caused by the abrupt departure of the King of Saxony from Potsdam, where he had been visiting Emperor William. Members of the diplomatic circle credit a report that the difference arose over the emperor's proposing to prosecute Prince Bismarck, whose latest revelations as to how he precipitated war with France by falsifying the famous Ems dispatch, are felt in official quarters to justify any measure that may be adopted to silence him. The King of Saxony, it is said, not only opposed Prince Bismarck's prosecution, but urged the emperor to make the first advance towards a reconciliation with Bismarck.

Whatever occurred, it is a fact that, after the private conference, which lasted two hours, the King of Saxony cut short his visit, made a brief call on the chancellor, and quitted Berlin without any court official having the usual honor of accompanying him to the railway station. The emperor, who had received him at the station in full uniform, and surrounded by the officers of his household, entirely ignored his departure. The incident will not abate the determination of the King of Saxony to prevent the emperor from prosecuting Bismarck.

Mr. Robert W. Dentler, An Exempt Fireman of Jackson Engine Co., Long Island City, N. In the fall he decided upon a thorough trial of Hood's Sarsaparilla. And by Christmas had a hearty appetite, healthy digestion, and was perfectly well. His cure was due wholly to Hood's Sarsaparilla. HOOD'S PILLS cure liver ill, constipation, biliousness, jaundice, and sick headache. Try them.
