If you want bookcase curtains there are plenty of new materials to select from, but it always seems rather a pity to have them at all. Perhaps they are necessary on open shelves, but if you have a bookcase with glass doors do let the books be seen through them. Nothing furnishes a room like books. The backs of your favorite books are like friends' faces. Even shut up and standing on a shelf when you haven't time to read them they are company. Besides, curtains give a whimsical suggestion that they are intended to hide not the books, but the lack of them. If you want bookcase curtains there

Rernhardt's Health Preservative.

Mme. Bernhardt is one of the popular advocates of fresh air and outdoor exercise. She says: "I live in the open air. From early morning I am up, some days spending the entire day in hunting or driving, to get glimpses of new country. Plenty of fresh air! That gives vigor. Experies! Walking out of doors—in the sunshine invariably. There is no such thing as genuine health without it." without it.'

Que en Victoria's Chickens.

Queen Victoria's Chickens.

When Queen Victoria was a little girl, before thoughts of the English throne had ever entered her baby head, she was the owner of a fine coop of Cochin China fowls. There were very large white roosters, beautiful, plump hens and downy chicks by the dozen, for the coop was a very large one. But the pet of all the pets was a big rooster, who had learned to know his little mistress and follow her around the encloswho had learned to know his little mis-tress and follow her around the enclos-ure where he was kept. Many photo-graphs were taken of the Cochin China fowls, and later, when the little Vic-toria grew to be a woman and was called to the English throne, she took her Cochin China fowls with her and had them installed at Grasse, and for a gen-eration the queen's children and granderation the queen's children and grand-children have played with them and admired them. Last summer little Lady Alexandra Duff, the queen's little great-granddaughter, was taken to Grasse, and one day her nurse led her out to where there was a coop of beau-tiful Cochin China hens and chickens, all descended from the ones the baby Victoria played with sixty years are Victoria played with sixty years ago.

Fruit and Health.

Lemons, grapes and tomatoes are most valuable from a medicinal point of view, and if the uses of such fruits and their juices were persevered in there is every reason to believe that not only cancer, but many other diseases of a similar nature with which the skill of the surgeon and physician are unable to cope, might be actually cured, or so much alleviated as scarcely to shorten

The Author of "Uncle Tom."

The Author of "Uncle Tom."

Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe seldom fails to visit Mrs. John Hooker, Mrs. Charles Dudley Warner or some other friend in the daily walk she takes in the vicinity of her home on Asylum Hill, Hartford. She is especially fond of music, and greatly enjoys the singing of her sister, Mrs. Hooker. Mrs. Stowe's physical health is apparently as good as it was ten years ago, and her mental condition remains about the same. Her mind seems incapable of any sustained effort. She is happy and cheerful, and at times there are flashes of her former vivacity. The occasional of her former vivacity. The occasional notes she writes to triends give no hint of mental decadence.

Fran Wagner's Tyranny.

Frau Cosima Wagner, widow of the great composer Wagner, wady of the great composer Wagner, is a tyrant autocrat at Bayreuth. She has been be-coming more and more eccentric and tyrannical year by year, much to the chagrin and inconvenience of those who come to listen to her husband's music. Her last decree is that neither performers nor audience shall be allowed to ers nor audience snail be allowed to bring into the audience-room bag or bundle, purse, wrap or any portable ar-ticle. Nor are they allowed to wear lose wraps. Mmc. Wagner enforces her decrees, too.

Garniture for Ball Dresses.

Ribbons, feathers and flowers are all used as garniture for dancing dresses. Ribbon is sometimes applied in the form of enormous bows on the bottom of the skirt, but more frequently in full rosettes or choux or windmill bows with floating ends. Indeed, the floating ends should never be omitted, as they add so materially to the lightness of the dancing dress.

Helps for Housewives,

Milk is much improved by boiling for puddings, pies, etc. The best oil for softening leather and making it pliable is castor oil. It is also good for greasing vehicles. One of the first requisites of good carving is to have the meat dish of good size. It is almost impossible to handle a piece of meat acceptably upon a platter that is even a degree too small.

A little borax put in water in which scarlet napkins and red-bordered towels are to be washed will prevent them from fading.

Literary Notes.

Mrs. Frances Hodgson Furnest Acils in the February instalment of her articles now running in Scribner's Mayasine about the original of Joan Lowrie, the heroine of "That Lass o' Lowries." She was a factory girl who Mrs. Burnett says "did not look like a back-street girl at all, though she had clogs on. Somehow she was different." Her father was a drunken brute, but his daughter Mrs. Burnett describes as absolutely fearless, though his habit was to "dance on his wife with his clogs when depressed or irritated." Admirers of the novel will understand it the botter after reading Mrs. Burnett's account of this girl.

The author shows how the Krupps have improved the material condition of their laborers, by building houses, establishing co-operative stores, founding hospitals, and establishing insurance funds, savings banks, etc. He then takes up the educational work they have done in the way of opening common schools for the children, apprentice schools for the children, apprentice schools for the girls.

prentice schools for the boys and house-keeping schools for the girls.

The wide scope of the social experiments made by the Krupps is realized when it is considered that they employ 25,200 men, who, with their families, amount to 87,900 persons.

The latest publication issued by the American Academy of Political and Social Science is a monograph by Prof. Conrad Bornhak, of the University of Berlin, on the "Local Government of Country Communities in Prussia." This paper will prove interesting and valuable to all students of government and political science. Prof. Bornhak examines from an historical and a political point of view the character of the reforms which were brought about in Prussia by the passage, in 1891, of in Prussa by the passage, in 1891, of two local government acts. It was these acts which put an end to the last re-mains of the feudal system in Prussia.

The stock market to-day was active but extremely irregular, feverish and in the main weak. Considerable liquidation of long accounts resulted, though these were generally for small speculators only. There was a marked absence of support, however, and the bears were again active and asgressive, and succeeded by concentrating their efforts on the Industrials, and one or two other stocks, in bringing about material declines. The Distiltera lost 1½ per cent, Cotton Oil a like amount, but Cordage and General Electric showed weakness, talk of the last named being especially bearish. Sugar showed a loss, closing at its lowest figure. Special weakness was seen in the railroad list only in New England and Omaha, and as these stocks have of late bean specially strong their declines occasion ospecial surprise. Omaha closed with a loss of 1½ per cent and New England with one of 3 per cent. Riehmond & West Point stocks were lound particularly weak, and the preferred reliaway 2 per cent.
