WHEELING, MARCH 15, 1893.

The Best World's Fair Exhibit.

Before the visitor to the World's Fair sees the exposition grounds he will look upon that great city whose growth is the wonder of the world.

Wonders will gather so fast and thick that he will be ready to admit that the half has not been told.

The visitor will be disposed to see this city thoroughly, by day and by night, and he will want to be safe in his goings and his comings.

Is there to be radical modification of the rule that no former office-holder need apply? This is a question of very great importance.

When you go down to Washington for your office make it right with Lamont first.

It may as well be understood now that unless there shall be evidences of the intention and the power to protect visitors to the World's Fair against the ruffians of that city and those who are ready to descend on it, thousands will stay away who greatly desire to see the fair.

The best exhibit that Chicago can make at the World's Fair, the thing that will contribute most to the success of the great undertaking, is to exhibit to the world an orderly, well governed city.

The modification is made to read that the "rural editor" may apply for the much desired postoffice, for his newspaper will not be suspected of being the organ of the administration.

Now that the banks are letting go the country is seen to be not so poor in gold, after all.

Reports presents Eli Perkins in the awkward predicament of being thrashed by a sleeping car porter.

A new floral effect in bridesmaids' toilets will be seen at some of the Easter weddings.

We have all read of beleaguered capitals. Now we see one. It will be interesting to see how long the garrison can hold out under General Cleveland.

If we may believe what we hear, the President has thought it expedient to modify without loss of time the rule that no editors need apply, since he could not appoint them to office without being charged with an attempt to subsidize the press of his party.

The modification is made to read that the "rural editor" may apply for the much desired postoffice, for his newspaper will not be suspected of being the organ of the administration.

Now what about the other editors, and the other newspaper men who are not editors? Are they to be permitted to apply? and is the application in all such cases to be the end of it?

What the brethren want is the reward of merit. Virtue enough they have, but they object to being obliged to get along with its supposed automatic action.

The dams that have broken loose in the west are nothing to those that are breaking loose in Washington over the little matters of appointment.

Such a rush of West Virginians for office never was known before. What does it mean? What has struck the brethren so suddenly?

which he jumped for the west. This is interesting if true. In the wild west there are fine openings for pushing men.

Now it is all plain enough. Hoke Smith got into the cabinet as a recognition of the "kid" Democracy, or "pony" statesmen of the party, young men who have no Confederate record to help them and nevertheless have become influential in the sunny south.

The eight-hour law is construed by the supreme court to mean that a letter carrier's working day consists of eight hours and no more, and that he must be paid extra for over-time.

MANY ANXIOUS INQUIRERS—No, San Francisco is not the capital of California, although an heterophomous slip in yesterday's INTELLIGENCER did remove it to that city from Sacramento.

A FRENCH COURT of justice is a wonderfully free-and-easy place. Such cat-and-dog goings on as are witnessed in the Panama trial would not be tolerated in an American police court.

Is our friend Col. Tansy, of the Register, desires to be consul at Liverpool, the INTELLIGENCER is for him, whether newspaper men are barred by the administration or not.

A West Virginian Complimented. Mid's Critic.

The distilling and wholesale liquor interests will ever kindly remember the now retiring commissioner of internal revenue, Hon. John W. Mason, as one who, while governing with a firm hand, was ever striving to do what was just and equitable to the best of his understanding.

This Also Applies to Wheeling. New York World.

The threat of cholera, too, lies only a little way ahead of us now. Not all the preparations we can make to bar this pestilence out can so greatly contribute to the city's safety from its ravages as would a thorough cleansing of the town at this time.

Is New York to be cleaned? Or are we to sit still like Arabs and wait in stupid, fatalistic indifference for what may happen?

Investigation First. Philadelphia Record.

It is said that the administration has decided to send a commission to Hawaii. That is the prudent and statesmanlike course.

A Lesson for Texas. New York Free.

Texas, which showed its "personal attachment" to Cleveland by giving him 140,000 plurality, demanded the attorney generalship, and it went to Massachusetts.

A Place for Hoiman. Chicago Tribune.

If President Cleveland can pick out some nice consulship with fat salary attached in a remote part of the globe and persuade Hoiman to take it, he will make his administration memorable for at least one grand achievement in practical statesmanship.

The Haughty Missourian. Kansas City Journal.

Ex-Governor Francis spunkily says that he doesn't want anything of this administration. That's the beauty of a Missourian.

Dead Against It. Cincinnati Times-Star.

The only way to abrogate the law of 1890 would be to substitute a free-coinage law. Mr. Cleveland is dead set against any such proposition.

Good Republican Money. Chicago Inter Ocean.

Chicago says to Uncle Sam: "Here is $3,000,000 of the yellow money, and if you want more say so." Out west they are glad to exchange it for good Republican paper dollars.

Also in Some Other Cities. New York Tribune.

A worse pestilence than cholera, smallpox or yellow fever now ravages this city—the pool room pestilence. It beggars families and breeds thieves in great number.

MORNING SMILES.

Little Boy—"What's a genius?" Fond Mother—"A genius is a very smart person."

Kindly Old Gent—"Well, my little man, that would you like to be when you grow up?"

"Who makes the laws, father?" "Our legislators, my son."

First New Yorker—"I rode down on the elevated this morning."

She—"You are always sneering at women who talk too much; are you hitting at me?"

NEW YORK AND NEW ENGLAND. The Meeting of the Stockholders—President Parson's Report Tabled by a Big Majority.

Boston, Mass., March 14.—The meeting of the New York & New England was called to order at noon.

Mr. Brandeis, counsel for Goldsmith & Co., objected to certain statements in the president's annual report, and asserted that it should not be accepted by the stockholders without ascertaining the truth.

Vice President Charles A. Prince declared that Mr. Brandeis' motion and the entire series of suits of Goldsmith & Co. against the road were inspired for the purpose of crippling the New York & New England in the interest of other roads.

Mr. Brandeis retorted that Mr. Prince spoke for the directors but that the man who made the charges was the one whom Mr. Thompson and his friends had elected president a year ago.

At 1:20 p. m. the polls were closed. W. W. Starbuck moved to proceed to elect nineteen directors, while the vote just cast was being counted.

At its close Mr. James Armstrong moved that President Parson's report and Mr. Brandeis' preamble and motion be laid on the table.

At 2:30 the meeting was again called to order. The vote on the motion to table President Parson's report, Mr. Brandeis' preamble and resolution was declared as follows:
