Silver and State Bank Issues.
Southern men are saying that they would gladly help to repeal the silver act if by so doing they could bring about the repeal of the tax on state bank issues. They are indifferent as to silver but want more money and rely on state bank issues to give it to them. They say that the people of the south are debt-ridden and must have relief. This is the historic cry of more-money advocates. They seek an easy way to pay debts. If they can pay off a dollar of indebtedness with something worth less than a dollar they gain the difference. They think more of the profit than of the dishonesty of the transaction, and they do not look to consequences.

It is assumed that the state banks would turn out their paper as fast as the presses could print it, and give less heed to the security for their loans than now; in which presumption there is some reason. They argue further that most of these issues would remain at home, providing a plentiful circulation. Here again there is reason.

In West Virginia, for example, we could know nothing of the assets back of a Georgia note, the liabilities of the bank of issue and the honesty and capability of its administration. We would lack confidence in the Georgia note and that would be bad for it in West Virginia. Under the present system we do not look to see where the note was issued. The government of the United States is back of it, and that is enough.

We have had state bank issues in lavish profusion, and we are able to compare their day with this. Thousands of people lost millions of money through the state bank issues. Never a man, woman or child has lost a cent through the present currency system. This note issued by the most obscure national bank is as good everywhere as the note of the best known and richest in the market under its own shadow.

Experience has been thought to teach the desirability of a dollar absolutely good everywhere. Our southern friends give the preference to a dollar, so-called, of uncertain value and worth most at home because it is not wanted elsewhere.

The Democratic party is committed to this kind of money and may give the country a new experience with it. The south is a powerful factor in the Democratic party.

SUSAN B. ANTHONY may think it a little late for her to become accustomed to the divided skirt, but she ought to drop into the procession and give it her moral support.

Princess Eulalia's Reception.
The matter of a suitable reception to Infanta Eulalia should give nobody the headache and cause no scandal. She comes as the personal representative of the queen regent of Spain. In her person we are to honor the head of a friendly power to which circumstances give special prominence in this Columbian year. She is of the reigning royal family, and she represents a sovereign.

In this country we have no royal trappings and cannot give a royal reception as royalty understands it. We are not up in those things. Our experience has been on different lines. If Eulalia be a sensible woman, as probably she is, she appreciates the situation, knows that she is coming to a republic and will look for no silly aping of the customs of a monarchy.

If we receive her with the cordiality of a true American welcome she is likely to be impressed with its novelty and pleased with its warmth. We have done this thing well in receiving royalty and can do it again. After all royalty is human and so are we republicans.

THERE must have been money in cordage, or the gentle Jim Keene could not have cleaned up $1,500,000 out of its wreck. It is a mistake to think that James sleeps without a break.

Believe in the Fourth of July.
In Pittsburgh they believe in the Fourth of July and are now preparing for another "old-fashioned Fourth" on the line of their previous successes. The mayor says that this year's celebration should distance them all, for this is Columbian year.

The mayor goes further and suggests that the city council should appropriate every year $5,000 for this purpose to insure a celebration in keeping with the occasion. He thinks the lesson in patriotism well worth all the cost.

It looks as though we are having a revival of the Fourth of July spirit in this country.

The Fourth of July, 1876, was a momentous day in the world's history.

Executing the Chinese Law.
It is estimated that at least $6,000,000 would be required to execute the Chinese exclusion law. For this purpose there is available but $10,000 appropriated by Congress. Obviously it would be impossible to deport $6,000,000 worth of Chinese with $10,000. The best the government could do on this line would be to go the length of its tether and await further instructions from Congress.

The talk about the President being liable to impeachment for not enforcing the act is of course absurd. The law does not require impossibilities. If Congress passes an act requiring money to execute it must provide the money or accept the responsibility. Certainly the responsibility is not on the executive branch.

If Congress enacted this measure blindly, taking no thought of the cost of giving it effect; or if it passed the bill after the fashion of the demagogue and purposely left the executive power unprovided with money to execute it, the fault is not with the President. The President does not raise revenue nor say how it shall be applied.

The estimated cost of enforcing the law is based on the assumption that all the Chinese in the country will submit to deportation rather than comply with the easy requirements of the law. The probability is that if the Chinese be convinced that the government is in earnest very few of them would refuse to fall into line and ask to be allowed to remain at the cost of registering. The sum available might accomplish this and leave a margin.

The best the President can do is to do the best he can under the circumstances to enforce the law. There his responsibility ends.

If the session of the Pennsylvania legislature were transferred to the World's Fair it would be a striking addition to the exhibits and might stimulate the statesmen.

He Who Runs May Read.
Of the many banks that have failed recently most have been state banks. Nobody is bothering about their notes, for the law prevented their issue. Neither has anybody been uneasy about the issue of the collapsed national banks, for the United States treasury takes care of every one of them.

Here we have an impressive object lesson. If the state banks had been banks of issue there would have been a different story to tell. In that case people would have been looking into their wallets to see how hard they had been hit.

Mrs. DOMINIS, otherwise the ex-queen, is thought to be one of the owners of the Hawaii Holomua. She may now be expected to age very fast.

A Threatened Boycott.
If General Secretary Baer of the Christian endeavor society speaks for his society, his society is wrong. He threatens that a million and a half members will boycott the World's Fair and do what they can to make it a financial failure if the exhibition be opened on Sunday.

It is highly probable that thousands of these men and women visit on week days theatres that give Sunday performances. A more reasonable view would be for those to remain away on Sunday who do not wish to visit the fair on that day. The boycott is not a nice thing.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND is thought to be contemplating a further application of civil service rules. The fairness of the move will depend to some extent upon what may happen between now and then. If he waits until there has been a general clearing out of Republicans and installation of Democrats, the reform will be too lop-sided to be genuine.

The police have got down to a fine anarchist burrow on Long Island. The elaborate devilry of the preparations for wholesale slaughter will impress any jury of fair-minded men. This country is not so free that men who want to reform it with dynamite are to be looked on as public benefactors.

SENATOR HILL took pains to show his good feeling for President Cleveland by trying to draw out of Dr. Senner, commissioner of immigration, the politics in his appointment. Mr. Cleveland will appreciate this and "recognize" Senator Hill and his friends accordingly.

MR. MURAT HALSTEAD says it will be the proper thing for the President to meet Infanta Eulalia at the railway station with two carriages and kiss her royal hand. Why not let Private Secretary Thurber go in four carriages and do the hand-kissing act?

MR. POON, the new commissioner of customs, has a mustache like a floor mop and an eye like a locomotive headlight. This we infer from the counterfeited presentment in the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette, which is likely to be informed.

ONE got the commission of customs, which our own Mr. Handlan desired, and now she gets the solicitorship of the internal revenue bureau, both within two days. Is Ohio regaining her lost grip?

ESTIMATES of the winnings of Diabolo's owner vary from $70,000 to $700,000. At least he raked in enough to see the World's Fair on.

HIGH water is doing mischief enough elsewhere. In this locality we can get along very well without it.

ALL the weather clerks have combined. What is the use of repining?

THE Pacific coast is not giving manifestations of great joy over the declaration affirming the constitutionality of the Chinese exclusion act. Can it be that the people out there agree with Senator Stanford that the Chinese are necessary? This would be a radical change of public sentiment.

BREAKFAST BUDGET.
Three new professorships have been established at Dartmouth, viz., biology, history and social sciences. The chair of biology will remain unfilled until commencement. The chair of history was filled by Herbert H. Foster, a graduate of Dartmouth in the class of '85, and that of social sciences by Professor D. C. Wells, professor of history and political economy at Bowdoin College.

The old time May anniversaries have become obsolete. Except as a society meets, mainly for an annual election of officers, their voice is no longer heard in the land. It is difficult to realize now that at one time these May anniversaries which came in anniversary week were prepared for and looked forward to almost a year ahead.—New York Herald.

PERSONAL POINTS.
President Cleveland, it is reported, is seriously contemplating placing fourth-class postmasters within the rules of the classified service and requiring them to undergo civil service examinations as to fitness for the positions. He is confident that such intention, if it is ever carried out, will cause a revolution in the politics of the country.

POLITICAL COMMENT.
Lincoln's Principles.
New York Advertiser (Rep.)
Below is a copy of the first and shortest speech President Lincoln ever made. It was delivered at Pappysville, Sangamon county, Illinois, 1832. Mr. Lincoln was then only about twenty-three years old, and was a candidate for the legislature:
"GENTLEMEN, FELLOW CITIZENS:—I presume you all know who I am. I am Abraham Lincoln. I have been solicited by many friends to become a candidate for the legislature. My politics are short and sweet, like 'an old woman's dance.' I am in favor of a national bank. I am in favor of the internal improvement system, and a high protective tariff. These are my sentiments and my political principles. If elected I shall be thankful; if not it will be all the same."

Quite Different.
New York Advertiser (Rep.)
Tammany Hall is preparing to take a great deal of glory unto itself in consequence of the proposed visit of the survivors of the Tammany regiment to Gettysburg in July. That regiment—the Forty-second New York—was raised and sent to the field by the Tammany society. The society is a very different organization from the political institution known as Tammany Hall. The society was founded by patriotic men.

The Cost of Democracy.
New York Press (Rep.)
It is estimated by competent authorities that the loss of the people in shrinkage in the values of securities since March 4 amounts at least to two hundred and fifty millions of dollars. This enormous depreciation of the people's savings was inaugurated by the vacillating, unpatriotic financial policy of the Cleveland administration.

A Mugwump Grunt.
New York Evening Post (Mag.)
The report comes from Washington that Secretary Gresham has asked for the resignation of W. E. Curtis, chief of the "Bureau of American Republics." The resignation of Curtis will naturally be a benefit to the country, but the abolishment of the bureau would be a greater one. There is nothing in this bureau that might not be done by the bureau of statistics.

An Ill-Advised Governor.
Chicago Times (Dem.)
Governor Fishback, of Arkansas, has offered a big reward for the detection of persons participating in lynchings. If the governor persists in this course he is likely to not only lose popularity in Arkansas, but to officiate as the central figure in one of the very functions he is so anxious to suppress.

Those Misanthrope Kansans.
Washington Post (A. L.)
President Cleveland might adopt the plan of Carter Harrison and set fire to the whiskers of the office-seekers. This would enable him to dispose of the Kansas crowd in short order.

A Reason to Hope.
New York World (Dem.)
President Cleveland has good reason for hoping that the unpleasant events and experiences of the present year will tend to secure remedial legislation by Congress.

STOPPED AT THE DOOR.
A West Virginia Office-Seeking Crank Husted Off to Jail.
Washington Post.
Frederick W. Bauer, a young farmer, residing at Junction, Hampshire county, West Virginia, arrived in this city yesterday afternoon about 2 o'clock, and at once proceeded to create a sensation at the white house. Bauer has a rapidly revolving merry-go-round in his head, and imagines himself to be a detective of renowned ability. He came to this city for the purpose of securing from President an appointment as a government detective.

He rushed in the gate of the executive mansion and up the long walk as if the bearer of important dispatches upon which depended the safety of the nation, and he appeared greatly disappointed when informed that he could not see the President.

"I will answer just as well," said Sergeant Conney as he took charge of the young Virginian and hustled him off to the police station. Bauer was locked up in the first precinct, and will be held until his relatives can be heard from.

Bauer was in an asylum about a year ago, but has since been employed on a farm. He claims that his parents do not know where he is, as he left home suddenly and expected to secure his appointment and get home in a few hours.

J. FITZGERALD MOLLOY.
Mr. Fitzgerald Molloy has done excellent work as a Novelist, Dramatist, Journalist, Historian and Literateur. It is not quite ten years since he published his first story, "Merry Play," which ran through a popular magazine. Though a first novel, it met with considerable success; but the publication of "Court Life Below Stairs," more than a year later, once gained him popularity. In less than three weeks the first edition was out of print, and three months afterwards a second edition was exhausted. This success was followed by a sequel, "Court Life Below Stairs, or London Under the Georges," which was read with equal eagerness. These volumes have now reached a seventh edition. The following is a list of his works: "Merry Play," "Court Life Below Stairs," "Court Life Below Stairs, or London Under the Georges," "Royalty Restored, or London Under Charles II.," which the leading journals of the day united in praising for its accuracy of details, charm of style and brilliancy of portraiture. "Famous Plays," and "The Life and Adventures of Edmund Kean," two books concerning the stage succeeded; and subsequently this prolific writer produced "A Modern Magician," a romance dealing with the mysticism now fashionable in London and New York; and later, "That Villain Romeo." Again our author turned his attention to social history, and wrote, "Royalty Restored, or London Under Charles II.," which the leading journals of the day united in praising for its accuracy of details, charm of style and brilliancy of portraiture. ON WHEELS OF FIRE.
Our new story opens with a glimpse of an English village, and the love-making of a young aristocrat and Stella Selwyn, the local beauty. There are rivals for her hand, but the stranger wins the day, and marries the young lady after a very brief courtship. While on their honeymoon he receives word that his elder brother has committed suicide, and he has succeeded to his title and enormous estates. The change in his position produces a change in his feelings towards his bride, and in his thoughts and views for the future. He renounces his marriage with the young wife, who has placed her future in the hands of her husband without sufficient knowledge of his prospects and position. He is devoted to Stella, but she is not so true. She discards her husband and appears on the scene in public and challenged to meet his enemy in a duel on French soil. The wife's bravery and loyalty frustrate this step, and interest is diverted into new channels by further unexpected developments in the story.

$50 REWARD.
The attention of all interested is called to the organization of the Pan-Handle Game and Fish Protective Association, recently formed in this city. The object of this association, as its name implies, is to protect game and fish in this state—to prevent the killing of the first mentioned out of season and the catching of the latter by seine, or killing them by dynamite or other explosives. Parties on Buffalo, Wheeling and Fish creeks are specially warned that all violations of the law (embodied in chapter 62 of the code) it will be our effort to discover, and when discovered prosecution of the perpetrators will follow and the penalty provided will be rigidly enforced. This war-lar is intended for all persons.
To the furtherance of this end we offer $50 Reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of and person killing quail, woodcock or pheasants out of season, drawing a seine or using dynamite or any other explosive to capture or kill fish in the creeks named above. Persons giving information to any of the undersigned such information will be regarded as confidential, and the informant will not be exposed or used as witness.
