WHEELING, JUNE 19, 1893.

Sunday at the Fair.

It is now reasonably certain that the World's Fair will continue to be open on Sundays until its final close. The decision of the United States court of appeals, the judicial body next to the supreme court of the United States, in an opinion by the chief justice holds that the local corporation is in control.

The local corporation, backed strongly by local sentiment and a general sentiment throughout the country, is determined that the fair shall be open to the public on Sunday. Though the case be taken up on appeal it is not probable that a decision can be reached during the life of the fair. There was no consideration by the court of the moral side of the question. The court had to do only with the question of jurisdiction.

Another question, of course, comes up, and that is the appropriation conditional on the closing of the fair on Sunday. Of this appropriation $600,000 remains in the treasury and is not likely to be paid unless so ordered by the United States court. More than this, steps may be taken to recover the money already paid, on the ground that one of the conditions has not been complied with.

It has already been said by the fair management that it would forego what is yet due under the appropriation by Congress and restore all that has been received, nearly $2,000,000, rather than close the fair on Sunday. The Sunday receipts will be much greater than the amount of the appropriation.

What will be lost by the non-attendance of those who have declared their intention to boycott the fair in the event of Sunday opening, is another question. The loss on that account is not likely to be equal to the gain; for many who oppose Sunday opening will not carry their resentment to the point of absenting themselves altogether. They will do about it as they do about railroad travel and other similar things, go when they think it is right to go, do as they think it is right to do, and let others do the same.

Now we shall have a chance to see whether the working man was in earnest about having the fair open on Sunday for his convenience.

Col. McElowney for Congress. Col. Bob McElowney, having been suggested as about the right man for Democratic nominee for Congress in the First District, rises to remark that the office wouldn't suit him and he wouldn't quit the office. He has no yearning to become the purveyor of small offices to the hungry.

The Republicans of the district would be glad to have so gallant an opponent as Col. McElowney and they would undertake to relieve him of the cares of the office. The Republican who goes to Congress from the first district this time will have no patronage to dispense in his first term; which will make it pleasant for him and should remove Col. McElowney's objections to accepting the nomination which he would bear so proudly.

In this view of the case won't Col. McElowney change his mind? Other able men have done that.

Most people who go to the fair for a week or more will be glad to take one day of rest out of the seven, and if they don't they will have reason to regret it. It would require the strength of an ox to keep up the round of sight-seeing every day.

Bad for the University.

The row at the university is bad for that institution. No matter what the merits of the personal controversy may be the people will take most note of the fact that there is a row on and that they will resent.

Parents will be less disposed to send their boys where there is a condition of chronic bickering. Young men, old enough to plan for themselves, will conclude that they cannot get the most benefit where so much attention is given by the faculty to family fights, where somebody has to be "downed" that somebody else may fly higher.

If this state of affairs is to continue we shall have a legislature one of these days that will refuse to appropriate the public money to an institution devoted largely to waging a war of private grievances.

No Wool Market to Speak of.

The wool market is an object lesson to wool-growers who voted the Democratic ticket under promise that a Democratic triumph would bring them better prices for their wool. With the Democratic threat of free wool staring them in the face buyers are willing to let producers carry their own risk unless the wool can be had at a price that seems to be an insurance against possible loss. The result is practically no wool market at all.

The INTELLIGENCER hears of an eastern buyer in Marshall county taking some wool at twenty cents a pound. At the same time comes information that another and a large buyer is not eager to take wool at eighteen cents and has called his men in to await developments.

Growers are being told that the low state of the market is the result of a combination among wool buyers to beat down the price. On the contrary it is the result of causes well understood and which might have been foreseen. If the duty is to be taken off wool the price of that commodity in the American market must fall.

Dealers do not intend to be caught with heavy stocks of the raw material nor of the manufactured products, and so everybody buys from hand to mouth. The merchant tailor, the large clothing concerns, everybody who deals in manufactures of wool, will await the action of Congress, meanwhile supplying only temporary needs. This uncertainty is reflected on the manufacturer and soon finds its way to the farm.

This is the situation that to-day confronts the wool-growers of the United States. The situation is made by the threat of the Democratic party to put wool on the free list.

In Congress were at work now getting the silver business in good shape this country would feel very much better and things would move more smoothly.

Missed the Signal.

The collision between two freight trains on the Baltimore & Ohio last Saturday was one of the casualties against which no skill or carelessness of a railroad company can provide. One of the poor fellows who lost their lives did not see the signal which told that another section of the passing freight was coming. This seems to be the whole story.

The signal was there. Why the engineer, who should have been looking for it did not see it, does not appear to be capable of explanation. Not seeing the signal, he concluded that the last section of the passing train had gone by, leaving him a clear track. The resulting obstruction of the road, inconvenient as it was to travelers, is a small matter in comparison with the loss of three lives cut short without warning.

It is a fortunate thing that the colliding trains were freight and not passenger trains, and this is another reminder that it is a rare thing for a passenger to be killed on the Baltimore & Ohio.

The French people like to be joked with, or they would not look with such amazing indifference on the wind-up of the Panama prosecutions. The affair has been a great sell from beginning to end, the end as much so as the beginning.

Solid, Steady Going Wheeling.

If the Messrs. Sweeney had been content with "slow and sure" in Wheeling their concern might have been in different shape to-day. Old Wheeling is a pretty good place to do business in, after all, and old Wheeling business ways are pretty safe.

The attraction of free site and a bonus has come near catching some Wheeling concerns which now have great reason to be thankful that they stuck by the old landmarks.

It will take the best of the boom towns a long while before it can match Wheeling's record for safety and continuous prosperity. Wheelings are not made with a wave of the magician's hand.

It may be observed, to the credit of Wheeling, that this burg is getting ready to give Christopher Columbus and Uncle Sam a Fourth of July reception that will make them think highly of themselves.

The People Getting Tired.

The Democrats have the university management all their own way, as they have had for years, and yet there is not harmony by a long shot. There is hair-pulling all the time, undermining, contention, heart-burning.

Much of the time that should be devoted to the education of the students, being paid for by the people for that specific purpose, is devoted to civil strife of a decidedly uncivil character. The people are getting tired of this monkey business.

The black stocking must go to give way to the white. English royalty decries it and every snob of us must don the white. The black looks much better. It has been said in its behalf that it can be worn a whole year without becoming soiled, although there are persons who make at least two changes a year.

BREAKFAST BUDGET.

The Queen of Denmark is, after Queen Victoria, the most remarkable of European queens. Three of her children are either occupying thrones or will do so in the near future. Though she is nearly eighty, she still retains much of her youthful appearance and vigor. She was married at the age of twenty-three. All her six children are living, and every one of them has proved a credit to her. Her favorite child is the King of Greece, but her special affection for him in no way lessens her fondness for the others. The Princess of Wales and the Empress of Russia inherit their remarkable personal beauty from her.

The venerable Robert C. Winthrop, who, everything considered, is the most distinguished citizen of Massachusetts, is one of the summer cottagers at Nahant. Commenting on the fine old man's sprightliness at eighty-four, a Boston journal says: "The man who takes the hand of Mr. William Wordsworth grasped, that was shaken by Samuel Rogers, and that found its way with acceptance into the hands of the Duke of Wellington. Of what other American can the same be said?"

J. M. Start, of Montgomery county, Kansas, seems to have broken the record for the greatest amount of wool obtained from a single sheep. A sheep owned by him weighed 198 pounds before it was divested of its fleece. After shearing it weighed only 140 pounds, showing a net wool product of fifty-eight pounds. All sheep which cannot lay it over Mr. Start's big wether are requested to remain dumb before their shearers.

In Boston, Washington, Philadelphia and San Francisco the Irish outnumber the Germans. In New York, Chicago, Brooklyn, St. Louis, Baltimore, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Buffalo, New Orleans, Pittsburgh, Detroit and Milwaukee the Germans outnumber the Irish. There are 3,500 natives of Ireland to 55,000 Germans in Milwaukee. In Boston there are 10,000 Germans to 71,000 Irish.

John A. Calvo, who died recently in New York, was the eldest son of the celebrated Italian painter, Niccolino Calvo, who died in 1835. He was educated at the Academy of Naples, and was connected at times as scenic artist with many of the New York theatres. He was proficient in all the branches of his art, and was a remarkable linguist.

A remarkable character of Barnardston, Mass., is Arnold Scott, a blind letter carrier 67 years old, whose eyesight was lost forty-six years ago. He has a long route, which he traverses twice a day, and rarely makes a mistake in the delivery of letters. Mr. Scott's knowledge of the neighborhood is perfect and he has never been known to get lost.

One of those statisticians who find out what others cannot asserts that girls with retreating noses marry sooner than young ladies with Greek or Roman noses. This indicates that marriageable Mewbers are numerous.

An entire family rode on bicycles the other day from Cottonwood Falls to Emporia in three hours. The distance is twenty-two miles, and there are no half-way houses along the road.

MORNING SMILES.

Dorothea—After all what's in a name?

Polly (stitching industriously on her wedding trousseau)—About $15,000 a year, my dear.—Judge.

PERSONAL POINTS.

John D. Rockefeller is to visit Chicago next month to inspect the university which he founded and so liberally endowed, will be accompanied by his family, and will occupy for about a month the house of President Harper, who will be absent at Chautauque.

Rudolph E. Kelker, of Harrisburg, Pa., owns Bibles printed by John Montz, Strasburg, 1466; Eggestown, Strasburg, 1469; Koberger, Nuremberg, 1477; another 1480; a Latin Bible, Venice, 1486, and a German Bible, 1470-3.

Captain Andersen, of the Norwegian Viking ship, and his officers are to be officially received by Mayor Gilroy, of New York, to-day under the escort of Prof. Boyesen, of Columbia college.

Says the Salt Lake Herald: Veragua, as Columbus' descendant, has failed to cut very wide swath in America, but Eulalia has proved a regular McCormick's reaper of a daisy cutter.

Judge W. W. Howe, of New Orleans, is to begin a series of summer lectures this month before the law school of Swannee University, Tennessee.

B. W. Stone, secretary of the South Georgia Pear Growers' Association, says the yield in that section this year will be over 20,000 barrels.

Wilson Barrett, the actor, was a passenger on the steamer Majestic, which sailed from New York for Liverpool on Wednesday.

Twelve different kinds of theology are preached in four languages in eight churches at Wahoo, Neb.

Governor McConnell, of Idaho, and his staff will visit the World's Fair in the early part of August.

IN OTHER CANTONMENTS.

Won't Cry "Wolf" Now.

Cleveland Leader.

The Democrats howled calamity last year when there was no calamity, and now that business and financial depression have resulted from a fear that the Democratic promises made a year ago in Chicago will be fulfilled by Congress, the Bourbon editors declare that the Republicans must remain silent. This is characteristically Democratic, but the Republicans will scarcely heed the advice given.

An Able Confession.

A BOWER OF BEAUTY.

The Apollinaris Company's Display in the German Exhibit at the World's Fair.

Chicago Inter-Ocean.

A bower of beauty was the scene offered by the Apollinaris company when their exhibit was presented to the German commissioner. Pyramids of Apollinaris water, bottled in the individual tables of twenty different nationalities, formed the outer circle around the space which they occupy, and inside the booth the decorations are of the highest artistic order. One piece of statuary that has been purchased by the company to adorn their headquarters is a "Flora" by the American sculptor, William Cooper. It is a beautiful thing, for which the Apollinaris company recently paid $5,000 for the purpose of placing it in their World's Fair headquarters. Hilmar Stephany, Francis Drax and Charles Jay Miller were a very capable reception committee for the Apollinaris and Pomeroy Sec companies, whose interests are allied in all countries. They dispensed the hospitality of the firms they represent in a charming manner, and after the celebration at the agricultural building they assisted in the entertainment of the guests who had been invited to attend the banquet in the German castle, Midway Plaisance.
