WHEELING, NOVEMBER 13, 1893.

The Great State of West Virginia.

Gov. McKinley, in his striking reply to the address of the West Virginia delegation which called on him last Saturday, spoke of "the great state of West Virginia."

It has been the fashion to speak of West Virginia as one of the small states of the Union. The West Virginia orators turn many a period with "our little mountain state."

In this day no state having less than a million of people can be called great in population; but a state which has twice the area of Maryland, which nobody thinks of as a little state, and nearly four times the population of Connecticut and Delaware put together, is not a little state.

West Virginia is great in her wealth of natural resources, the solid foundation of a numerous peopled and powerful commonwealth. This is what Governor McKinley had in mind, and this he made clear when he spoke prophetically of the time when West Virginia "shall record itself for Republican principles and policies, the success of which is the success of your rich industrial state."

There is not a West Virginian who reads these words that will not be impressed with their absolute truth. The governor of West Virginia has declared the force of the protectionist policy with regard to coal. He knows it is protection which has made West Virginia the fourth coal producing state in the Union; and if he had not felt strongly moved by the threat of his party to throw open our ports to the free importation of bituminous coal, he would not have begged his party's representatives in Congress to spare this one great industry of his state.

Governor McKinley champions a policy which looks to the defense of all the industries of West Virginia and of all the states, and he is an eminent representative of a political party which will consent to nothing less.

Nothing can be clearer than that all the interests of West Virginia are with the party of protection to American industries. It is strange that any sane West Virginian can be found to oppose that policy. Stranger still that the free trade leader in the house of representatives is a West Virginian. No West Virginian trembled for the industries of her state when William McKinley held the place now filled by Wm. L. Wilson.

"When Governor McKinley takes a man by the hand," said one of his Wheeling visitors, "the other man doesn't want to let go." McKinley is a winning man; there is no doubt about that.

Resurrecting a Dead Monarchy.

Secretary Gresham's report to the President on the Hawaiian question bears date October 18. It was not given to the press until November 10. Congress was in session at the date of the report and later, but no communication went to the senate touching this subject.

The report was held back until after the elections were over, the administration fearing that Democratic nominees might feel the sharp edge of the public resentment. In view of all that happened on election day the report might as well have been given out as soon as it was ready. It could hardly have made things worse for the Democratic party.

Secretary Gresham uses one man, "My Special Commissioner Blount" to discredit Minister Stevens, the dead commander of the Boston, and the five Hawaiian commissioners to this country. He uses Mr. Blount's findings, although without giving them, to wipe out all the testimony on the other side. He concludes that the provisional government was set up by force and fraud and suggests that the monarchy be restored and the deposed queen be put back on the throne.

The monarchy was not even respectable opera-buffe. The queen represented as vulgar a farce of royalty as could be picked up in the wilds of Africa. The intelligence and property of the islands upset that whole thing very neatly and has since been represented by a government that has been able to maintain itself with dignity.

President Cleveland himself recognized this provisional government when he sent his commissioner, Blount. There can be no question that he recognized the provisional government when he accredited Commissioner Blount as minister; and so it was when he sent Mr. Willis to succeed Mr.

Blount as minister. There is no other government in Hawaii, and this it is now proposed to overthrow so that the monarchy may take its place.

This is without exception the most remarkable proposition ever made in behalf of the American people. We are not only to decline to incorporate these islands into the United States, but we are to force on the substantial and progressive element of the population a form of government which that element abolished for the welfare of all the people. This would be indeed a ridiculous conclusion of the Hawaiian episode in our diplomacy.

It would at the same time be the beginning of troubles which this country, under a broader and more patriotic administration, might have to compose on the basis of the original proposition of the provisional government and under circumstances much less favorable than when the little country first offered itself to us.

It is, of course, uncertain what the President will do. It is reasonable to suppose, at least, that if he had not approved the tone of Secretary Gresham's report that document would not have been given to the public.

The landslide makes it much harder to cook up a tariff bill that can become a law. The Democratic party has been put in a bad fix.

Speaker of the Ohio House.

The Wheeling visitors to Columbus on Saturday ran against a considerable boom for Representative J. C. Heinlein, of Belmont county, for speaker of the house of representatives. Mr. Heinlein has made so good a record in the legislature and is so well liked personally that he is looked on as very promising material for the speakership.

Mr. Heinlein is not known to have resolved to enter the race, but he is being urged to "go in and win." This handsome recognition of the bright young member from Belmont would be very gratifying to his friends in this vicinity.

HAWAII will figure in the next elections. The American people will express themselves on that subject among other things.

Crescent Mill Disaster.

The burning of the Crescent mill comes at a particularly unfortunate time. It was giving employment to about three hundred men, who must now see what they can find elsewhere or wait for the rebuilding of the mill.

In the absence of N. E. Whitaker, the head of the concern, there is no authority to say what will be done, but it is probable that the vigor which has heretofore characterized the management of these works will not be wanting now.

The Crescent is one of Wheeling's important industries, and no harm can come to it that will not be felt through the community.

Crescent Lodge of the Amalgamated Association calls a meeting so that a hundred of its members may volunteer to work for a week clearing away the fire wreck at the mill. The good feeling shown in this will doubtless be more gratifying to the company than the money value of the service to be rendered.

SENATOR MORGAN is a Democrat, but he is unable to see the Hawaiian matter as the administration sees it. Mr. Morgan's long connection with the foreign committee of the senate has given him a keener perception of the question than the administration has been able to get through Mr. Blount's eyes.

WEST VIRGINIA protectionists have the honor of being first to get in person to thank Governor McKinley for his services and his success in behalf of our home industries. Appropriately enough, the friendly visit was the happy thought of a business man, not a politician.

BREAKFAST BUDGET.

The Steinbeck prize, aggregating in value $1,500, was on Monday awarded to C. B. Boestwick, '95, of New York city. The prize is payable in three annual installments of $500, and is the largest offered by any American educational institution.

From the first annual report of the Iowa geological survey it appears that coal is found within the state on lands embracing an area of 20,000 square miles, over half of which may be considered as underlain by workable coal.

The first Canadian city to erect a monument to the memory of Sir John A. Macdonald, the distinguished statesman, is Hamilton, Ontario. The statue is of bronze and was made by George C. Wade, a London sculptor.

Americus, Georgia, has an enterprising resident who follows the vocation of peddler under a free license granted wounded Confederate soldiers by the state, and at the same time draws a pension as an ex-union soldier.

PERSONAL POINTS.

A hitherto unfamiliar remark of Abraham Lincoln, and which is good enough to go into the school books, is this one, which Senator Palmer, of Illinois, says Lincoln made to him: "I have simply tried to do my duty every day, hoping that when to-morrow came I would be equal to it."

Noah Raby, an inmate of the poor farm near Stelton, N. J., claims to be 121 years old. He often relates of having heard George Washington deliver a speech at Yorktown. Raby was not compelled to use glasses, he says, until he had reached his 100th birthday.

Henry M. Stanley has been sued by G. W. Appleton on an agreement by Stanley to pay the plaintiff 10 per cent commission on all lectures procured for him in America. Stanley admitted the agreement, but said it had been soon rescinded, and the plaintiff lost.

MORNING SMILES.

The celebrated Signora Howlinski was in the middle of her solo, when little Johnny Fizzleton, referring to the conductor of the orchestra, asked: "Why does that man hit at the woman with his stick?" He is not hitting at her. Keep quiet. "Well, then, what does she holler so for?"—Yankee Blade.

A teacher, questioning little boys on the graduation in the scale of intelligence, asked: "What comes next to man?" Whereupon one little shaver, who was evidently smarting under a sense of previous defeat, immediately distanced all his competitors, by promptly shouting: "His flannel shirt, ma'am!"—London Tid-Bits.

Ethel—How did he make all his money? Charlie—Smoking! He was the greatest smoker in America. Ethel—Nonsense, Charlie; you can't make money by smoking. Charlie—He did. He smoked ham!—Boston Budget.

"Say," said the office boy, "I think the boss ought to gimme a half bono extra this week, but I guess he won't." "What for?" asked the bookkeeper. "For overtime. I wuz dreamin' about me work all las' night!"—Indianapolis Journal.

Jones—Well, Smith, did you propose to Miss Alices last night? Smith—Yes, and her answer was very ambiguous and contradictory. Jones—Why, what did she say? Smith—She gave me a positive negative.—Yankee Blade.

He—No, we don't go to the theatre to-day. Operas of this class are not meant for elderly people. She—That is quite true, and I really see no reason why you should accompany me.—Kauz.

"You called that man doctor?" "Yes." "He doesn't look much like a physician. What's his specialty?" "He's a ward healer."—Boston Gazette.

Visitor—That painting is by an old master, I see. Mrs. McShoddie (apologetically)—Yes, but the frame is new.—New York Weekly.

AN INTERCEPTED DISPATCH.

Philadelphia Press. (Air-Grover, Grover, four more years, etc.) With apologies to the immortal bard, Thomas Moore. From an Envy Extraordinary to His Satanic Majesty.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8, 1893. Great Sir, having just had the good luck to catch an official young demon preparing to go, Ready hotted and spurred, with a special dispatch from the headquarters here to our Hades below.

I write these few lines to Your Highness Satanic. Having given us help at the national elections. With the aid of the Democrats I've brought about a pause. Thus following out your infernal directions.

Well knowing how dear are dull times to your soul. When no one will lend a red cent to his brother. Thus coming below such a saving in coal. From all coming down ready gruffed by each other.

I thought we could easily, those good times revive. (There are some with help from your highness would try.) And thus keeps tabs for your mystic alive, by raising a tariff for revenue cry.

So, having sent down for the original notes of the chorus, as sung by your majesty's choir. With a few pints of lava to gargle the throat of myself and Sam Joseph, who sing it with fervor.

Such then were my hopes, but with sorrow, your highness, will be the cause what it will. Whether feignness of voices, or hoarseness or shy-ness. Our revenue chorus has gone off but ill.

The truth is that none of us know the right key. The Democratic pitch pipe of late is so various. And certain good members who sang it with rapture. At the national election, now think it precarious.

Even some of the Mugwumps might have been warmer. The three or two capital rovers we had, Friend Mills, as you know, is a charming performer. And some of the old rebel yell were not bad.

Together, however, the thing is not hearty. Even Grover allows we got on but so-so. What chance we attempt an anti-taxation party. We must, please your highness, recruit from below.

But hark, the young demon is cracking his whip. Excuse me, Great Sir, I've no time to be civil. Ails, for the slip 'twixt the cup and the lip. In sorrow I sign myself. Duffal Devil.

Washington, Del. G. H. K.

THE HAWAIIAN QUESTION.

An Inexplicable Outrage. New York Press. (Rep.)

The administration's outrageous course will be overwhelmingly condemned by the American people. Grover Cleveland and his policy, already emphatically repudiated by the voting millions last Tuesday, will be doubly repudiated when this infamy becomes known. The nation whose loyal sons bled on battle-fields from Gettysburg to the Rio Grande that a government of the people, for the people and by the people should not perish from the earth will never sanction the restoration of a justly deposed and degraded monarchy over the sons of Americans in Hawaii.

An Extraordinary Document. Chicago Inter Ocean. (Rep.)

The report of Secretary Gresham, recommending the restoration of the monarchy in Hawaii, is an extraordinary document. This report is a humiliation to the American people and a rebuke to those aspiring residents of Hawaii who have done more for the advancement of the Hawaiian islands than all the kings and queens that ever ruled there. If the President act on this recommendation there will be fierce and cruel war on the islands, and the Democratic administration will be responsible.

A Humiliating Fact. New York Advertiser. (Rep.)

The country has, practically, the recommendation of the President of the United States that the machinery of the republic shall be used to compel the restoration of a monarchy. Time must be allowed the people to fairly assimilate this startling fact, than which nothing could more forcibly illustrate the temper, views and predilections of the Calhounists who surround and influence the official head of the Democratic party to-day.

Against the Intelligence and the Prosperity Philadelphia Press. (Rep.)

The idea seems to be to surrender the control of the islands to the native population and protect the latter against the whites, who are the more wealthy, intelligent and aggressive portion of that mixed population. They desire to be brought under the flag and laws of the United States, but they will never get there if Secretary Gresham can prevent it.

ASTONISHING AND DICTATORIAL. Pittsburgh Dispatch. (Ind.)

The astounding nature of the unauthorized acts of United States Minister Stevens should not be matched by the even more astounding and dictatorial course of the democratic government of this country, asserting of its own motion the doctrine of divine right implied in the restoration of Liliuokalani.

A Heavy Responsibility. Washington Star. (Ind.)

Responsibility for the destruction of American interests and influence in Hawaii and for bloodshed and loss of life, which may result from this effort of the great republic to bolster up a rotten English monarchy will be upon the administration of President Cleveland. And the burden will be heavy.

A Mugwump Opinion. New York Times. (Mo.)

The more the course of the President is studied and understood, and particularly the more its essential justice and its practical wisdom are tested by experience, the firmer will be the conviction of the American people that it is sagacious and honorable.

How It Would Look. New York Tribune. (Rep.)

What is certain is that there is no business in which the United States would appear to greater disadvantage than in using its bayonets to prop up a broken down throne—especially the throne of such a queen as Liliuokalani.

PRESIDENT W. P. THOMPSON,

Of the Lead Trust, believes the Democratic Free Trade Pledge Will Be Carried Out. NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—President W. P. Thompson, of the National Lead Company, who has made a study of the tariff, gives the following interview on the tariff situation:

"I think it a clear proposition that the country will not allow the administration to depart from a fair remodeling of the tariff. The ways and means committee has not the slightest thought of proposing any radical or drastic measure looking toward the special injury of any particular industry or industries. It is probable that the free list on raw material will be materially enlarged, and that every real interest which has heretofore been aided by the tariff will receive fair consideration. I make this exception that where the tariff approaches prohibition, it will be reduced to a point justifying imports whenever prices in this country are made in excess and beyond a reasonable cost of the difference in labor and a fair profit. It is perfectly safe to say in a general way that the new tariff will not be more radical in its changes than that proposed in the Mills bill, and that there will be many modifications favorable to the home producer.

It is probable that the key note of the tariff reform measure will be cheaper raw material. Iron will naturally be affected. However, I believe that it is so wonderfully located as regards transportation that it will not suffer as seriously as is generally feared.

The readjustment of business on a new tariff basis will, I believe, be very speedy, for the reason that business interests have already begun to discount a change. In addition, the panic has so curtailed operations that stocks of both raw material and finished product have been reduced to the minimum.
