FINANCIAL REVIEW.

Henry Clewa's Weekly Letter on the Business Situation.

MAIN FEATURES OF THE PAST WEEK

The Bull Element in the Ascendant on Wall Street-Waiting the Action of Congress on the Tariff and Currency-Hopes that the Worst Effect Have Already Been Felt.

Special Correspondence of the Intelligenets.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25,-The main fea ture of the past week's business in Wall street has been a reaction against the oversold condition in which the "bears' have involved themselves. There has been no special stimulus from any quarter, and London's present disposition to sell rather than buy has been a slightly adverse element. The fact that, under such circumstances, the "bears" should have hurriedly covered their short sales and thereby caused an advance in prices is significant of a mistake in their estimate of the temper and underlying strength of the market.

The "buil" element is plainly in the ascendant, and it is steadily gaining in numbers and force. It has behind it not only a majority of the outside operators, but also the powerful capitalist class connected with corporate enterprises and who have increased their priess and was have increased in holdings of securities during the late panic. This latter class have faith in their holdings, because they foresee a reasonable prospect of an improvement in the value of their properties as the in the value of their properties as the recovery of business progresses towards normal conditions. Nor have they lost confidence in the ultimate revival of the European demand for our securities; which, so soon as the impending legislation upon the currency and tariff questions is completed, can scarcely fail to respend to the fact that our investments will henceforth rest upon a gold basic as gold as that of the most gold basis as solid as that of the most conservative nations of the Old World. They appreciate the fact that political-ly, as well as in the convictions of a vast majority of the people, the silver sentiment has been defeated and up-rooted, and so effectually that there is no prospect of its future revival. This is a factor in the status of our invest-is a factor in the status of our investments which none more fully appreciate than the men who stand behind our great aggregate of corporate enterprises.

It is not easy to over-estimate the importance, to the future of the market,
of the backing of this important class.

This support is more to be depended upon, because it is likely to be weakenupon, because it is likely to be weakened (at least for some time to come) through the competition of new enterprises. The misfortunes that, have lately befallen industrial and trading corporations are against the creation of new undertakings of that character.
And although there has been an unusually long comparative cessation of new railroad construction, there are no signs of an early expansion in that line of en-terprise; and this fact has an important bearing upon the value of existing railbearing upon the value of existing rair-road properties, as it sofar insures them against the bad effects of reckless com-petition for traffic. Capitalists of this class can do nothing better than to stick to their present large holdings unstick to their present large holdings until the whole country has recovered to a condition of healthy activity, when they may desire to realize in order to undertake new enterprises. We therefore conclude that the Stock Market will have the support of this important class for aconsiderable time ahead. For so long as that state of things continues, the "bears" may be expected to be of little use except to serve as the daily little use except to serve as the daily ailment for the lusty "bulls"; and, no unforseen adverse accidents happening, the latter are likely to have a roystering time. The prospective money market must have an important bearing on the future have an important bearing on the future of prices. It is not easy to take in at one glance the full meaning of an accumulation of $365,500,000 of surplus reserve in the New York banks, concurrently with a large like increase in the banks of the country at large. It is true that this unprecedented abundance of money reflects a continuance of the depression of business that resulted from the activities and the second control of the control of the second contro from the panic; but it is not less true that it also signifies a vast amount of dislodged capital awaiting reinvestment. It is also true that it means a forthcoming anxiety, on the part of the banks and other lenders, to put out their funds for such temporary use as Wall street is always ready to accept. And it further means future exceptionally it further means future exceptionally low rates of interest, not only on "call" loans but also on the "time" loans which large stock exchange operations require. The situation thus insures, in an exceptionally large degree, all the conditions essential to a "bull" campaign of unusual proportions.

At this moment, Wall street is waiting the action of Congress upon the currency and the tariff. This attitude, however, is due more to a disposition to take a brief respite for rest and observation, than to any apprehension to take a brief respite for rest and observation, than to any apprehension that the settlement of these questions may disturb public confidence. As to currency legislation, it is felt that, in any event, the present relative abundance of currency will take care of all monetary wants for some time to come; while all the symptoms forthcoming from the Washington committees indicate a favorable prospect that ways will be found for supplying a sound and elastic form of bank currency in such measure as the business of the country may require. On this point there is at measure as the business of the country may require. On this point there is at least no disturbing misgiving.

The general tener of the tariff bill to be reported by the committee on ways and means at the opening of Congress is now very generally understood. Its purport has certainly not tended to confirm the lears that had previously confirm the lears that had previously been entertained among manufacturers. In respect to raw materials, it makes important transfers from the dutiable to the Iree list; which can only be regarded as a valuable gain to certain large industries. Contrary to common general expectation, the chauges of duty on manufactures express a liberal interpretation of President Cleveland's regulactions in favor of mederate reduty on manufactures express a liberal interpretation of President Cleveland's predilections in favor of moderate reductions, and the extravagant demands of the Democratic doctrinaires are for the most part disregarded. The element of protection in the tariff is certainly reduced, but it still, as a rule, seems to remain protective; except possibly to a class of manufacturers who are not well equipped for competing with home producers even. It is true, there are intimations that this unexpected moderation has been adopted as part and parcel of a policy of eliminating the protective elements through a series of successive reductions of duty; but it is needless to borrow trouble from that contingency; for in the first place it is remote, and in the next common sense of the people may be left to decide what shall or shall not be done after this experiment. So far, therefore, as the tariff issue is an element affecting confidence, it seems reament affecting confidence, it seems reasonable to hope that we have probably alreany seen the worst effect it is calculated to produce. HENRY CLEWS.

The Wool Trade.

Trade shows a fair amount of activity sales being quite liberal, although trans-actions hardly reach the volume of last week. The fact that woolen mills are week. The fact that woolen mills are being started up induces manufacturers to get a little of the raw material on hand, and this has resulted in tiberal sales. Fleece wools are firm all along the line, with offerings in sight consid-erably reduced. Values in the interior are held above a parity with castern markets, causing supplies to come forward slowly. Territory grades have met with the best movement, purchases of this grade during the week being 2,000,000 pounds. While prices for this grade can be quoted no higher, the sale of 5,000,000 pounds during the past two weeks has tended to bolster up weak spots. Australian wools are duit.

How to Tella Good Whiskey.

How many people can tell a good whiskey from an inferior one? Can you? If you can, then you already know the merits of Klein's Silver Age, Duquesne and Bear Creek Ryes, and if you cannot, then you must be governed by the testimonials of physicians, superintendents of hospitals and connoisseurs, who all unite in declaring that the whiskies bottled by Max Klein of Allegheny, Pa., are absolutely pure, old and mellow. A reliable stimulant in the house at this time of the year is an absolute necessity, and why not get the absolute necessity, and why not get the best in the country?
