

THE TRUE INWARDNESS

Of the Trouble in the Pittsburgh Base Ball Club.

MANAGER BUCKENBERGER TALKS

About the Differences Between Himself and the Management—Misrepresented in the Pittsburgh Press. The Specific Conditions on Which He Will Sign as Manager for Next Year—Jack Glascock, the Champion Shortstop, Adds His Testimony.

The Pittsburgh Times of yesterday has the following oriental story. It will be read with interest, not only in Wheeling, but wherever base ball has a footing and fame. The double jointed article says:

"Director Kerr knows of no reason why Manager Buckenberger should not remain with the Pittsburghs next season. As showing the manager does not agree with him, he sent the following answer from Wheeling to a query from the Times last night:

"My contract with Pittsburgh expires tomorrow. If certain conditions are granted will sign contract. If not will have to look elsewhere."

The conditions Manager Buckenberger refers to are probably the result of differences between himself and a former stockholder. It is understood the latter wishes to have the position of manager. It is also possible that Buckenberger would like to make Glascock captain of the team, a movement which would also clash with the ideas of the stockholder in question. Buckenberger doubtless has offers from other sources, notably Philadelphia. If he consults his own best interests, he will remain with the Pittsburgh club."

BUCK IS SURPRISED.

When Mr. Buckenberger was seen by an INTELLIGENCER reporter yesterday, and was shown the clipping from the Times, he was going to a train to see a reporter for a Pittsburgh paper off. Mr. Buckenberger was calm and collected, as he always is, but he denied with some heat the Pittsburgh Times' report. In the company were Sam Nichols, Jack Glascock and other ball players.

"What does your contract hinge on?" asked the INTELLIGENCER.

"I will tell you: I like Pittsburgh, and I admire the people—there are no better on earth, but recently it came to my ears that Director Temple, who drove out of last year's directorship, had boasted that I would not be manager of the Pittsburgh team of 1894 six weeks. I do not know why Temple should have said this, except that he was not consulted in regard to some changes in the nine that were made under my jurisdiction. And this was at a time when Temple had washed his hands of all the dust that the directors of the club had to brush off their coats."

TEMPLE AND "BUCK" FRIENDS.

"Temple and myself," said Mr. Buckenberger, "were the greatest friends; at least he professed such a relation to me, and often said he would stand by me. Now he has, as I understand, assumed his position as a director, and what his change of front towards me means I am unable to understand."

"What are the conditions that prevent you from signing with Pittsburgh next year?" inquired the reporter.

"Merely," said Mr. Buckenberger, "what I told you before, that Mr. Temple is said to have bet 10 to 1 that I would not be manager for six weeks next season. Naturally I consulted my own interests, and on reception of this news asked that I be guaranteed the management for the full season, and not run the risk of being dumped out of a winning crew at the pleasure of one man, who virtually was master of the ship. Don't you think I am right? As I said before, I like Pittsburgh. Wheeling likes Pittsburgh. Wheeling is my home, and from that fact, and the incident that Glascock played in Pittsburgh last season, not forgetting Jake Stenzel, of the old Wheeling team of 1888, the Nail City and surrounding towns have sent more patrons to the games than the suburbs of Pittsburgh."

OTHER LIES NAILED.

"A Pittsburgh paper says that the trouble originates from the fact that you want to make Glascock captain of the team."

"That is very silly, for the reason that almost every team is allowed to select its own captain, and when they cannot agree the manager decides."

At this point Mr. Glascock spoke up and said: "Why, how can that be? I haven't even signed with Pittsburgh yet. Furthermore, Mr. Buckenberger has not said a word to me, one way or the other. I have no objection to Donavan as captain, and no one ever heard me say a word against that hard working team man."

"No," broke in Mr. Buckenberger, "everybody is wrong about that. I have the utmost confidence in Mr. Donavan, as well as the rest of the team. I am satisfied to be in Pittsburgh next year, but I want some surety that I will be there for the season. Otherwise I will have to look elsewhere."

Glascock said that if he did not play in Pittsburgh next season he would always remember the friends he had made there.

From these talks it appears there is only one hitch—Temple.

After Mr. Buckenberger brought the Pittsburgh team up to the notch it attained without Mr. Temple's advice, it would, it seems at this distance, be very measly meanness for that gentleman to jump into a success and attempt to destroy the author of it.

PRACTICALLY A NEW WORKS.

The West Virginia Glass Works and Its Outlook for Trade.

The West Virginia Glass Works at Martin's Ferry, which resumed in full on Monday, is now one of the busiest industries in the Ohio Valley. This was formerly the Elson Glass Works, and it had been shut down for six months.

Since the reorganization the works has been given a thorough overhauling, and so many changes have been made that one would scarcely recognize the factory. The office has been changed, the packing room and the engraving departments moved from the second to the first floor. The cutting shop has been enlarged and the old packing room is now used for storing goods. The new packing room is lined with corrugated sheet iron so as to make it fireproof. The factory proper and the assorting and cutting departments have all been whitewashed and look quite different from what they did.

Many other changes are noticed and the works are now in better shape for turning out more than ever. Men have been at work on the changes all summer and fall and the work is not yet entirely finished. It will hardly be necessary to make any more general improvements for years.

A new brick nitra house and a new steam house, both separate from the works, have been built.

"Mr. H. E. Waddel, formerly of the United States Glass Co., who was elected general manager and secretary when the company was re-organized, has not only made all of the changes mentioned, but has practically a new working force and is getting out a line of new goods that will surprise the natives. The mold shop has been busy on new things for months and is still running full on these. There are two thoroughly new lines of tableware and many new articles in fancy goods and novelties. These will be made together with some of the old lines in different colors, ruby, stained, cut, etched and engraved, giving the West Virginia a variety of ware that is bound to become popular.

Smith Butler is the factory manager, Percy Beaumont the metal maker and chemist, and Edward Miller has charge of the mold shop. The heads of the departments are all experienced, practical and intelligent glass men, and the workmen are among the best in the United States. Among the latter are several who made glass at the World's Fair, and as glassworkers cannot be beaten anywhere.

Samples of everything made here will be shown at the exchange in Wheeling. Mr. C. B. Ott will travel in the west, and Mr. George B. Fowle in the east, the latter having headquarters in both New York and Boston.

MARTIN'S FERRY.

Haps and Mishaps in the Thriving City Across the River.

The Martin's Ferry foot ball club will meet its equal, if not superior, next Saturday. The Washington-Jefferson club, one of the best in Western Pennsylvania, has written to the Martin's Ferry eleven for a game next Saturday, and Captain Mitchell has accepted the challenge. The game was made last night and the place has not yet been fixed. It will probably be played on the Martin's Ferry grounds and will be for the benefit of the poor of Martin's Ferry.

Mr. E. Lamons Hamilton, formerly secretary of the Martin's Ferry Y. M. C. A., will be married to Miss Genevieve Ackle, of Atone, Alabama, on Wednesday, December 20. Mr. Hamilton has been secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Lawrenceville, Pa., since he left Martin's Ferry.

All Sorts of Local News and Gossip from the Glass City.

The work of street paving was stopped yesterday, on account of the frozen ground, by Civil Engineer Norton, who is in charge. The Gravel Hill work is almost completed, and the contractor will likely be allowed to close the gap, so that there will be continuous paving from the southern to the northern limits of the city. The other work will be suspended till spring.

David Leo, engineer of maintenance of way of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, was in the city yesterday. He has been, with the other officers of that road, over the entire line on the annual tour of inspection, and the Baltimore & Ohio was never before in as good shape as at present. The remarkable record this road made during the World's Fair has won for it a full share of business from the traveling public.

At a meeting of the city board of education the other night it was ordered that the schools close from December 22 till January 8 for the holiday vacation; teachers' salaries to the amount of $1,773 were ordered paid; $855 other bills; Dr. Long, the health officer, asked them to provide for children too poor to pay to be vaccinated, and they took the matter under advisement.

The holiday trade of this year will not amount to one-half what it usually does, and one of the reasons is that little preparation has been made for trade of that kind.
