Net receipts.....$72 61

Which is not at all bad.

Out in the World.

Yesterday at Bridgeport three young boys from Columbus were arrested and held to await the arrival of their parents, who were expected last night. Their names were Dunn, Walz and Plinkhard, and they had been "out in the world" for five days, their conveyance being a horse and buggy belonging to the father of one of them. In the buggy were their provisions—an immense lot of canned goods.

Tube Workers to Meet.

The Riverside tube workers were to have met Tuesday afternoon to take united action relative to the recent cut in their wages of 10 per cent, but for several reasons the meeting was not held, and the men will not come together until Saturday evening, when they will probably assemble at Alert hall, on the South Side. The men are still divided—some favoring an acceptance of the wage scale offered, while others would refuse to accept it.

A. A. K. P. Feast.

At midnight the feast of the Alpha-Alpha-Kappa-Phi fraternity opened at the Hotel Windsor, H. M. Strong presiding as toast-master. Plates were laid for thirty, and an ideal college crowd surrounded the board. A conspicuous feature was the presence of a grinning skull and cross-bones in the center of the table. After the banquet, toasts, stories and songs were indulged in until 3:30 this morning, when the festive Greeks departed.

Transfers Recorded.

Clerk Hook yesterday admitted to record transfers of real estate as follows:

January 30, by Anton Reyman and wife to Rodney Rush Swope and Lawrence E. Sands, for $3,000, lot 23 in square 20 of Sprigg & Ritchie's addition, on Jacob street in the Eighth ward, (the South Side Turner's hall.)

February 7, by L. F. Stifel and wife to Lizzie Denniston, for $100, two lots at Roney's Point.

February 5, by Julius Jansen and wife to Margaret E. wife of Robert F. Ross, for $300, the west twenty-five feet of lot 14 B in division J1 of the Joseph Caldwell estate.

Through a Platelass.

Yesterday afternoon a meat delivery wagon belonging to Wenzel Bros, the East Wheeling butchers, to which was hitched a skittish horse, was involved in a wreck that attracted a big crowd of people in front of Frank Stanton's book store on Market street. The rig came out of the alley above the City bank building, and the horse became frightened at something and dashed across the street, and raising his fore-feet in the air smashed into the lower show window and shattered the big plate glass into a thousand and one pieces. Almost miraculously the animal escaped serious injury, being cut only slightly on the fore legs. The accident attracted a big crowd. The damage was retraced last evening, less than three hours after the accident.

In the Circuit Court.

In the circuit court yesterday, an order of distribution was entered in the chancery cause of Catherine Burley's administrator vs. James L. Burley.

In the case of Bowers vs. Shephard a decree was entered, referring the issue to Judge Boyd.

In the matter of the petition of Margaret S. William's executor for leave to arbitrate a certain controversy, permission was granted.

In the case of Ernestine H. Otto vs. Charles F. Otto the defendant was restrained from interfering in any manner with the plaintiff's personal liberty, and the plaintiff was given the custody of the infant Mary A. Otto, the defendant was also ordered to pay her $50 and $25 a month for her support, and to enable her to carry on her suit.

In the case of the Wheeling Bridge Co. vs. William P. Hubbard et al., the demurrors of the defendants were allowed to be withdrawn and the case set for a hearing on the pleadings as they now are on February 10.

ADJUSTED AT LAST.

The Insurance on the Whittaker Mill Settled last Night.

AND IT WILL BE REBUILT AT ONCE.

The Figures are not Given out, but both Parties Express Themselves as Satisfied with the Decision Arrived at—A Modern Structure to take the Place of the Old Works—Other Industrial News.

The loss on the burned Whittaker Iron Company's plant was finally adjusted last evening at a conference between the representatives of the companies which had risks on the property and Messrs. N. E. Whittaker and Albert Whittaker. The gentlemen were together at the McLure house until a late hour, and when they separated a reporter saw several of those interested, but they all declined to say on what basis the settlement was made, farther than that it was gratifying to both parties to have the matter off their hands.

The total insurance on the mill, offices, etc., was $79,500. It was estimated at the time of the fire that one-third of the insured property escaped damage, and it is understood that Mr. Whittaker's claim was in the neighborhood of two-thirds of the total amount he was insured for, but that this was scaled somewhat before an agreement was finally reached. It was accepted finally mainly to escape the delay and annoyance of litigation.

The fire occurred on November 12, so that it would be exactly three months next Monday. The delay in the adjustment was explained by an insurance man last night, who said it was desirable to make up the statements at the first of the year with as many losses as possible marked as "losses awaiting further proof."

Mr. Whittaker was seen by an Intelligencer man, and asked what the prospect was for rebuilding the mill. He said work would be commenced at once to clear away the debris preparatory to rebuilding. Presumably the order of the employees to assist in the work still holds good, and their knowledge of the mill and the machinery will make their labor much more efficient than that of common workmen.

Mr. Whittaker estimates that the mill can be rebuilt in three months. He would like to be ready to resume operations by May 1. An iron structure of modern design will take the place of the old wooden mill, and the equipment will also be the latest out. The company has already about adopted the designs for the buildings, and by the time they are ready for occupancy the machinery can also be ready to go to work. This will give steady employment to about 500 men, to say nothing of miners and incidental labor.

Mr. Whittaker says he has been paying on an average $2,000 or over a year in insurance premiums for over thirty years in Wheeling, so that he has paid the companies in all much more than he now gets from them for their burned plant.

Wages at Bellaire.

The management of the Bellaire Nail works and the workmen had a conference yesterday, and in the afternoon the Workmen held a meeting in their hall. No reduction in wages had been asked, because the present scale does not expire until the last of June, but some facts were presented and the men were asked if they could stand it to work any cheaper. No conclusion was reached as the workmen thought they ought to have a specific proposition. The men at this mill have exhibited rare good judgement in the consideration of the vexed questions of the past year.

This is True.

Bellaire Independent.

Wheeling again tells of starting a project to revive the glass industry in that town. They want it done now on the co-operative plan. They ought to be able to get up better than the average co-operative company in that city at this time.

Industrial Notes.
