Promise and Performance.

Senator Aldrich puts it squarely at the Democratic party when he recalls the pledge of raw materials and points to dutiable raw materials, "taxed" raw materials the Democrats used to call them, in the tariff bill as it lies before the senate.

No Democrat can deny that free raw material was one of the campaign cries of his party. If the Democrats, having the power, did anything they would place raw materials on the free list. They would do this to help the manufacturers and the wage-earners and to make cheaper commodities for the benefit of consumers.

In their estimation nothing was so raw as coal, iron ore, pig iron and wool. Wool is to go on the free list, of course, for they "have it in for" wool. All the rest of the rawness has gone glimmering. Democratic theory has not changed, but Democrats cannot be held up to vote for the theory.

The great heads will do the best they can for the present, trusting to the future to educate up to their high standard enough Democratic members of Congress to make good the party pledges. This is a decidedly odd feature of the tariff situation. It is the low comedy streak in a tremendous tragedy.

ONLY the other day it was the Commonwealthers who were holding up trousers. Now it is the floods.

Pennsylvania Republican Convention.

Delegates to the Republican convention in Harrisburg are doing their best to get there in spite of the heavy rains and the floods. The first place on the ticket is conceded to General Hastings, but there is a hot fight for the other places and some bad blood has been aroused.

Congressman Robinson, an eastern statesman, complains bitterly that the managers will not allow him to be nominated for lieutenant governor. The real cause of his disgruntlement seems to be that the managers are not for him. Mr. Robinson hears a loud call for his nomination, but the call will not be loud in the convention.

After the nominations are made there will be a solid Republican party to give the other side as sound a drubbing as it has received in years. This is not a good year for a bolting movement in Pennsylvania, and Mr. Robinson is not the man to lead such a movement.

The bottom is out of the coke strike, which has never given promise of success. So many men wanted to work that the others could not stop them.

Devastating Floods.

Disasters on the great lakes are followed by loss of life and property in Pennsylvania, which is flood-swept from the Ohio river to Delaware bay. All the towns and valleys from which we are accustomed to hear in times of high water are once more paying costly tribute to the flood.

Johnstown, almost wiped out five years ago, is swept by flood and flame. Beautiful Williamsport is under water. Lives have been lost in Pittsburgh. Travel is stopped, industries suspended, over a wide area of the state. The money cost of this visitation will be enormous, and it comes at a time when money loss counts.

Bull-shies have not been altogether agreeable, but they have been an assurance of immunity from frost. Just now the growing vegetation is not in need of frost.

Unlike other Anarchists who have been sent to the last account by process of law, those shot in Spain yesterday showed some interest in the future. This opens them to suspicion. The real Anarchist hates man and does not fear

God. He faces death with a blasphemous bravado and goes to his grave with curses on his lips. The Spanish variety is too tame to be genuine.

The Senate Investigation.

Senator Gray, chairman of the senate scandal committee, says there are five honorable men on that committee and the country may rely on their doing their duty and doing it promptly.

It is a pleasure to know that the chairman of the committee thinks well of himself and his associates, but the country would think better of an investigation with open doors. In that case there would be more opportunity to judge whether the committee is doing its full duty, doing all that can be done and doing it without fear or favor.

Where there is secrecy and mystery there is room for suspicion. If the country be not allowed to know it will naturally suspect that something of importance is being held back. This is the last thing that innocent men would desire. As for the guilty, they are entitled to nothing more than a fair trial.

The Commonwealthers are to try their hands at a national organization. After that Congress can hold out no more.

Support of Worn-out Ministers.

From a report submitted to the Presbyterian general assembly it appears that last year the expenditures on account of ministerial relief were $100,000, the receipts $20,000 less. Every congregation is expected to contribute to this fund, yet 3,798 gave nothing. This showing is not creditable to the delinquents.

The worn-out minister who has served faithfully in his days is fairly entitled to be cared for in the evening of his life. Very few ministers are able to provide for a rainy day. We hear of a few big salaries, but most of the salaries are small.

The talk about investigating Attorney General Olney is bosh. Everybody knows where he stands with regard to the trusts. He is their attorney general.

Mr. Powderly's Case.

It may turn out that the expulsion of Mr. Powderly by the executive committee of the Knights of Labor is the straw that is to break the back of the faction in power. There are thousands of members who will resent what some of them already declare to be an unmerited indignity that has been put upon the old leader.

At the next meeting of the general assembly an effort is certain to be made to replace Mr. Powderly at the head of the order and to relegate to the ranks the noisy demagogue who has worked himself into prominence with a jaw that never tires.

"Free trade for all or free trade for none," is Senator Sherman's sound doctrine. The Democratic party declared for free trade for all and has taken good care to give protection to the sugar trust and other pet interests. The people of this country will not stand that sort of tariff policy.

W. K. VANDERBILT, whose yacht has just sailed for home, won $8,000 at Monte Carlo in a single sitting. The founder of the house of Vanderbilt had to have his fun some other way. We are developing a splendid nobility in this country.

It is suggested that sugar stock speculators have worked up the senate bribery investigation, hoping thereby to make still another turn. The known facts are such that even this monstrous thing does not seem too monstrous to be possible.

The signal service gave due warning of the great storm on the lakes, but the warning was not heeded. Vessels put out or remained out as though there was nothing to fear. They would have been wiser to look to the better part of valor.

LILLIAN RUSSELL made so much sport of her husband on the stage that he refused to play any more love scenes with her. The airy fairy Lillian must be trying to drive her new mate to divorce. And so soon!

The Republican league convention this year should be a hummer, and the indications are that it will be. West Virginia Republicans are eager for another shot at their friends the enemy.

WHEELING will have no flood this time, which is cause for general rejoicing. Wheeling can get along very well without any more flood experience. She saw sights enough ten years ago.

Senator HILL has been making another flying trip to New York, but as usual "there's no politics in it." Strange how all the politics has dropped out of New York.

If Senator Lodge has assented to a secret investigation of the tariff scandals he has made a mistake that will cost him something in the public estimation.

A South Dakota judge granted twenty-six divorces in one day. Granted there are persons who think it hard to sever matrimonial ties.

Coxey is already in the past tense. How quickly reputations are made and unmade in this great and growing country.

PERSONAL POINTS.

According to the Boston Herald, Nickok, the weight-thrasher of the Yale athletic team, is a phenomenal fountain of enthusiasm. "He exhorts, implores and threatens by turns; and to those who from their point of view in the crowd are shut out from some of the finishes his face is an announcer enough."

NEGLECTED MERCIES.

For the Intelligencer.

So you wish to gather roses,
 So you wish to have a rose,
 In the path which you are treading?
 Do you know what you can do?

You can take those little stalks
 Yonder, with their perfume sweet,
 And can form them a nosegay.
 That you look toward heaven your feet.

They may make some sad life happy.
 Though they hide themselves so meekly,
 And you'll find by and by others,
 All the roses that you seek.

Often, while upon life's pathway,
 Looking for the rose-scent,
 We forget the humble violet,
 That we tread beneath our feet.

MILLS PRODDER.

By Republicans—Inconsistency of the Democrats Brought out in Bold Relief.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 21.—In pursuance of the order adopted last Friday, the senate met at 10 o'clock to-day with only 12 senators in their seats. In about 10 minutes 43 senators—a quorum—were in the chamber and under the agreement the remaining 15 minutes before 10:30 were spent in the consideration of bills on the calendar. The time was consumed by two bills, both of which were passed. Then the tariff bill was laid before the senate and the metal schedule was taken up. The first amendment was that reported from the finance committee placing a duty of 40 cents per ton on iron ore.

Mr. Aldrich immediately took the floor and drew a graphic picture of the anomalous position in which he claimed the proposed duty on ore placed the Democratic party in New England. For six years he said the Democrats of New England had fought their campaigns on platforms demanding free raw materials. Three years ago, Mr. Mills had made a stumping tour of Massachusetts. Everywhere, he said, Mr. Mills had taken free raw materials as his text. He had held up the glowing promise of free coal and free iron ore when the Democrats obtained control of all branches of the government. He had gone further. He had advocated free bar iron. Why was not Mr. Mills here to champion Massachusetts' cause?

While Mr. Aldrich was speaking Mr. Mills entered the chamber and after some spurring by Republican senators engaged in the discussion.

MILLS EVADIES IT.

Mr. Mills spoke, but briefly. He had long given up all hope of converting his Republican colleagues. Past experience had taught him that after all arguments had been brought to bear they would still believe the lie and be damned. He saw no hope for them.

"Do you see any hope for the conversion of your Democratic associates?" asked Mr. Hoar.

"Oh, I am making fair headway on this side of the chamber," replied Mr. Mills, "but there is too much behind the other side to bulge it."

Mr. Chandler called Mr. Mills' attention to a statement that he had made, in a speech at New Haven, that if the United States had free raw materials her manufacturers would control the markets of the world, and asked why the cotton manufacturers with free cotton were not able to compete in open market with foreign competitors.

Mr. Mills replied that, while cotton was free, the machinery employed in the manufacture of cotton goods was dutiable at 45 per cent, the dyes were all heavily taxed, the coal that generated the steam was taxed; all the collateral elements were taxed. That was why our cotton goods could not compete in the markets of the world.

The debate which followed was participated in by Messrs. Sherman, Lodge, Vest, Butler, Hoar, Gallinger and Dolph. Mr. Peffer (Pop. Kansas) offered an amendment to transfer iron ore to the free list. It was one of the tenets of the Democratic party that raw materials should go on the free list. Why had this not been done? he asked.

WHY THEY SURRENDERED.

Mr. Vest replied that there was no attempt at evasion as far as he was concerned. A large majority on his side favored placing raw materials on the free list.

"A majority did you say?" asked Mr. Allison. "I meant what I said," replied Mr. Vest; "a large majority on this side believe in free raw materials. But the urgency of some tariff legislation rendered it absolutely necessary for the majority to make concessions to the small minority. The alternative was presented of passing this bill with these concessions or not passing it at all."

Mr. Brice (Democrat, Ohio), during the course of the debate that followed became involved for a brief space and immediately became the target for his political antagonists. Mr. Brice denied that there was any dissension on his side or that the proposed duty of 40 cents on iron ore was a protection duty. As he understood it, he said, it was purely a revenue duty.

Mr. Peffer's amendment to transfer iron ore to the free list was lost 4 to 46. The yeas were Allen, Hill, (Dem. New York), Kyle and Peffer.

At 6 o'clock the senate adjourned.

IN THE HOUSE.

There Will Be No More Docking of Sailors—The Resolution Carries.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 21.—Almost immediately upon assembling the house went into a committee of the whole on the legislative appropriation bill. Mr. Hayes (Dem., Iowa) offered an amendment which declared that the section which allowed the docking of members' salaries had been heretofore repealed. Mr. De Armond, of Missouri, made a point of order against the amendment. The chairman (Mr. Richardson) sustained the point of order.

Mr. Hayes appealed from the decision of the chair and the chairman declared the yeas had it. Only a bare quorum voted. Roll call was demanded and the decision of the chair was overruled by a vote of 89 to 112. The question was then put on Mr. Hayes' amendment declaring the statutes repealed which authorized the sergeant-at-arms to deduct from the salary of members for absence. It was agreed to 118 to 84. (Republican applause.)

The speaker and the two Democratic members of the rules committee voted in the negative. Mr. Dockery gave notice that a yeas and nays vote would be demanded on the amendment when the bill was reported to the house. At 5 o'clock the house adjourned.

OUT OF SYMPATHY.

Pullman Employees in Other Places Will Go On Strike.

CHICAGO, May 21.—This afternoon Chairman Heathcote, of the local Pullman strike committee, announced that the workmen in the Ludlow, Ky., Wilmington, Del., and St. Louis shops will go on strike. All the shops of the Pullman company will then have been closed. At St. Louis there are 600 workmen, at Wilmington 500 men, and at Ludlow 350. "The men will strike," said Heathcote, "out of sympathy for us and because of grievances of a similar nature to ours."

THE FIVE SENSES.

Seeing, Hearing, Smelling, Tasting and Feeling—Four of These Senses Are Often Impaired and Even Destroyed by Catarrh.

Drs. Copeland, Bell and Davis are daily brought into contact with many patients suffering from impairment of four of these senses from Catarrh. The eyes are inflamed and ulcerated. The nostrils filled with foul scabs and discharging sores.

MR. JAMES E. MURR, 420 Market Street, city, was unable to work, sleep or eat for two years, with catarrhal complications. The use of left hand and tongue. Two weeks of our treatment was more beneficial than seven months with three doctors.

The ears ulcerated and filled with roaring, buzzing, hissing noises. And the hearing either greatly impaired or entirely destroyed. From this catarrhal inflammation the delicate sense of smell and taste are also either impaired or entirely lost from ulceration of the nasal and oral mucous membranes, extending even to the throat and bronchial tubes. The patients from their continual blowing, hawking and spitting, and cutting food odds become objects of misery to themselves and loathing to their friends and associates. How can sensible men or women be content to become a source of disgust to themselves and loathing to their associates? How can a parent see a child grow up with these senses impaired or destroyed and become an object of misery to itself and loathing to its comrades, when, by the proper treatment at the proper time, all this could be prevented? It is the mission of Drs. Copeland, Bell and Davis to prevent all this suffering and misery. They are treating daily hundreds of such cases with the greatest success, and their rate of treatment is only $1 per month, all medicines included.

HOME TREATMENT.
