

GOL. KEMPLE SPEAKS

To a Crowded House Before the Clay-Union Republican Club.

THE MOST ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING

Of the Present Campaign For Protection to Industry, Homes and Family. The Speaker Makes a Realistic Contrast Between Bygone Prosperity and the Present Democratic "Hard Times."

The Clay and Union District Republican Club held a large and enthusiastic meeting at their hall on Eighteenth street last night. It was their opening of the campaign of 1894. The spacious hall was crowded and many stood in the yard outside, unable to be seated.

Captain Dunning, president, called the meeting to order. Secretary C. B. Tracy was at the desk. The list of membership was swelled to 162, and a number of prominent Democrats subscribed their names.

The preliminary business concluded, Colonel Jacob Kemple, the speaker of the evening, was introduced and received an enthusiastic ovation, the boys crowding around to shake hands with him as he entered the hall.

The colonel began by saying "This is my home. I am going to talk to home folks in a homelike way. We know our city; let us revive and read its history from 1857 to 1894, what we owe to the protective tariff policy of the Republican party and the blighting effects of Democratic legislation within that period." He then gave a clear, graphic and interesting description of the condition of the industries and business of Wheeling from '57 to '61 under low tariff—then in a powerful argumentative manner he contrasted the difference under protection from 1861 to 1892 the growth of manufacturing, the increase of population and general improvement in every respect.

He gave a brief history of Republican pledges made and kept and Democratic promises made and broken; Republican consistency in all its legislation and Democratic inconsistency in all its attempted legislation. He compared the McKinley bill with the tariff bill just passed, and showed the latter up in all its hideous and sectional deformities, the crippling and ultimate destruction of our glass and pottery industries, protection to southern sugar, rice, peanuts, cotton ties, etc., duty on the iron hoop of the washwoman's tub, free wool for the farmer, and lower wages, lower living and small profits, a leveling down and not up; that the awful mistake of 1892 had cost capital and labor in the past eighteen months, the distress of labor and destruction to commerce and manufacturing.

But, said the speaker, the people have been industriously and emphatically correcting their mistake wherever and whenever they have had a chance to vote.

The colonel closed his splendid speech in an eloquent and pathetic appeal to the voters of this city to vote in defense of the helpless women and children, who were the worst sufferers of the existing conditions, and predicted the election of Dovenor and the whole Republican ticket.

The speech was continuously interrupted with applause; and Colonel Kemple and the meeting may well be proud of each other.

Captain Dovenor will address the club at its next meeting, on Monday night.

The teachers of Wheeling have their institute on September 3. Professor Anderson made an effort to secure the well known Michigan educator, Prof. Richard G. Boone, but was unable to do so. "Ships that Pass in the Night."

In the preface which Miss Harradon has written for the authorized American edition of "Ships that Pass in the Night"—a new edition bearing the Putnam imprint—she says: "The words 'ships that pass in the night,' etc., are to be found in Longfellow's 'Tales of a Wayside Inn,' third evening, theologian's second tale (Elizabeth), fourth part. At the time when the book was written I myself did not know where to discover these lines, and several of my friends searched in vain for them. Numerous letters of inquiry were sent to me by all sorts and conditions of people, and I have to confess it was mortifying to have to plead ignorance. At last one friend, more heroic than the others, found the harbor where these ships were hiding, and it was my wish that the new editions of the book, which were following each other with surprising quickness, should contain the welcome intelligence. But my English publishers felt differently, and I could therefore only put the reference into the papers and patiently continue to answer letters from perplexed seekers.

Down She Comes.

Yesterday morning the first brick was taken out of the walls of that veteran structure, the Pollock flouring mill, at the corner of Fourteenth and Market streets, and it is expected that in about two weeks all the walls except the south one will be leveled to the ground. Then will commence to arise the fine five story building to be occupied on the coming New Year's day by House & Herrmann.

During the summer interim scenic artists, designers and costumers have been busily engaged in preparing new work in their respective lines, and it is safe to predict, when the "Newest Devil's Auction" unfolds its one hundred and one novelties to the public gaze at the Wheeling Opera House this evening, it will be found to exceed all expectations or comparisons in this particular line.

HOME MADE CIRCUS.

The Women's Union Benevolent Society's Novel Scheme to RAISE FUNDS FOR A WORTHY OBJECT

Local Talent Has Been Interested in the Scheme and Will Contribute Liberally—An Effort Will be Made to Interest the Various Secret Societies—A Monster Parade in View—The Scheme in Detail.

The ladies at the head of that worthy charitable organization, the Women's Union Benevolent Society, have decided to undertake something that it is anticipated will take the town by storm as it has not been stormed for many a day. It is nothing more or less than an exhibition of that truly American institution—the circus—by home talent, probably on the state fair grounds on the Island, on a day not yet decided upon the latter part of next month. This scheme was carried to the most brilliant success ever experienced in Ohio's Gem City—Dayton, and the ladies of the local society are confident that its novelty and the inborn liking of Americans for the circus will combine to make possible a duplication of the Dayton success.

The ladies of the society at a meeting decided to go ahead with the idea, and thus far they have met with remarkable success—all who have been spoken to regarding it have cheerfully and with enthusiasm consented to aid the ladies, so that it may now be set down that the home talent circus will take place under the auspices of this society.

Already arrangements for the use of an immense main tent, together with smaller ones for the menagerie and the inevitable side-show, have been completed, and the attention of the ladies is now directed to the parade, which is desired to be made a monster. The plans for the street demonstration include the invitation of all the secret societies of the city and vicinity to take part, and to the merchants to take advantage of this opportunity for a grand trade display. The wheelmen of the city will also be invited to turn out and no doubt the knights of the knickerbockers will report enthusiastically.

The local society is in possession of the plans followed by the Dayton society, and it is the intention to bring in all the successful features of that circus, and with the addition of features that will be successful because of their local origin and significance.

The idea is to have every man, woman and child personally interested in the affair; and with this end in view the mayor will be asked by the ladies to declare the circus day a holiday. The circus will be billed for miles around Wheeling, and no doubt large crowds will flock to the city.

The society will hold a meeting at once when the committee to have charge of the circus will be appointed and the work of preparation for the big event commenced.

In the side show will be seen all the most wonderful freaks of nature ever heard of and many never before heard of. In the menagerie numerous wild animals, birds, etc., are to be imported for the occasion. The circus performance will be given in two rings, and will be a wonder. Fine aerial acts, elegant riding, bareback and otherwise, grand and lofty tumbling and exciting hippodrome races will make up a show never before equalled in Wheeling. Of course the concert that invariably follows the circus performance will also be given, and in it will be seen all the leading lights of Wheeling's talent.

As was the case in Dayton the leading society ladies and gentlemen will sell lemonade and peanuts through the crowd and of course song books and concert tickets.

It will be the greatest thing Wheeling has ever seen and every person should lend a helping hand to make it the splendid success that the object for which it is given deserves.

Work of the Police.

Last evening William Dickson was run in by Officer Carney as a vagr; Thomas Malley by Donovan as a plain drunk; Eoster Merritt, disorderly, by Fitzgerald, and Emma Gesler, for being out after sundown, by Watson. His Honor will act as arbiter of their fates this morning.

NOTES ON NAVIGATION.

Stage of Water and Movements of Boats. The River Interests.

President Cleveland yesterday appointed Frank Ciesdy surveyor of customs for Cairo, Ill.

The river at this point slightly felt the rains in the valley, and last evening was at the nineteen-inch mark and slowly rising.

Captain Henderson says the report telegraphed here in regard to the Andes being placed in the Wheeling and Cincinnati trade is news to him, which put in plain English means that there is no truth in the story.

Secretary Carlisle has not yet confirmed the appointment of William Clark, of Cabell county, as local inspector in the Wheeling district, and many think that the gentleman will be turned down. If something of the kind were not brewing it is affirmed that the confirmation would have been made before this time.

The Jennie George, the Big Sandy light draught packet, brought here by Captain Booth to run in the Clarksburg line, in place of the Liberty, is one of the smallest steamers ever seen in these waters, and only draws ten inches of water. She left yesterday afternoon at 3:30 p. m. for Clarksburg and way points. Captain Booth, her veteran commander, was at the wheel.

The cake walk at the Labor Day picnic will be the greatest ever held here.

NO CHANGE OF SYSTEM.

A Newspaper Gets "Mixed Up" on an Over-the-River Item.

The assertion made in a Wheeling paper that the over-the-river street car line had changed its electrical equipment from the Thompson-Houston system to the Westinghouse system, was a bit of information that was a complete surprise to the officials of the road and caused considerable amusement. To change the electrical equipment of the road would, say the officials, cost about $100,000, and the work could not be completed for several months. The truth of the matter is as follows: The company had five car bodies without equipments, and to avoid changing the bodies from one truck to another they bought five new equipments, so as to have each car complete. The fitting up of these car bodies was bid on by the Thompson-Houston Company and the Westinghouse Company, the latter being the lowest bidder secured the contract. The balance of the seventeen cars are all equipped with Thompson-Houston machines, which are just as good and strong as the others; the only difference is, the Westinghouse machines are somewhat larger.

Wayne's Victory Celebrated.

TOLDO, O., August 20.—About 5,000 people assembled to-day on the battlefield of Fallen Timbers, on the Maumee river, twelve miles above this city, to celebrate the centenary of Wayne's victory of August 20, 1794, over the Wyandotte, Ottawa and Delaware Indians, breaking the power of their confederacy and securing peace to the then north-western frontier.

This horse races, bicycle races and cake walk at the Labor Day picnic, will be the finest money can secure.
