FOR STATE SENATOR—FIRST DISTRICT. N. E. WHITAKER, FOR HOUSE OF DELEGATES. JOSEPH C. BRADY, ABRAHAM STAMM, ALEX. R. CAMPBELL, S. G. SMITH, FOR JUDGE OF THE CRIMINAL COURT. T. J. HUGUS, FOR COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS. JAMES C. LEWIS.

Talking the Coal Miners.

The confidential letter of J. J. Joy to Chairman McGraw, of Mr. William London Wilson's campaign committee, published in the INTELLIGENCER of yesterday, comes under the head of "mighty entertainin' readin'." This Joy is brought into this state from Pennsylvania to do what he can among the coal miners of the Second district to stay the strong tide against Mr. Wilson and Democratic policy.

Mr. Joy is announced as an organizer of the United Mine Workers, as he may be. Whatever else may be said of him it cannot be said that he is neglecting the work for which he was brought to West Virginia. He is doing his best to make votes for Mr. Wilson. He tells Chairman McGraw that "he must work slow and be careful and not spring the subject too quick on them." That, of course, would not do, for the miners might take fright and get away before he could draw them into the Wilson net.

Work of this kind must be done cautiously so that the victims may not suspect. Also work of the kind committed to Mr. Joy requires money, and the object of the letter to Chairman McGraw is to get more of the root of all evil to keep the wheels moving. Not only are the miners to be looked after, but there are some Swedes whom Mr. Joy thinks he can handle if he has the money to do it. "I must have money," he says, "to get men to work among these fellows and to keep them at it until after election."

There is no trouble on the score of money. The importers have supplied the Wilson committee with funds to prove the strong hold Mr. Wilson has on his district, and if necessary they will furnish more. Mr. Wilson is their champion and they do not intend that he shall be wiped out if money will save him.

This is what his friends mean when they say that Mr. Wilson has too much national prominence to be defeated. They mean the same thing when they say that the local pride of his people will see him through. So far as money goes Mr. Joy and Chairman McGraw will have a joyous time of it, but there are some things which money cannot accomplish. It cannot buy honest men.

"Instructions to voters," to be found on another page, is worth every voter's attention. It is worth every voter's while to know just how to prepare his ballot and cast it in order to comply with the law and have his ballot counted.

The Free Trade Theory.

Mr. John K. Cowen, of Baltimore, who came into West Virginia to help the party of free trade, is quoted in the Baltimore American as saying in a speech at home: "I saw in the American the other day that the tin plate industry at Locust Point had broken down under the Democratic tariff. If it is so weak it should have gone down."

That is to say, if a thing is not strong enough to stand up against a murderous assault it ought to be killed. Yet this weak thing was of moment to Baltimore and to the country. The American says it supported two hundred men at good wages. It distributed more than $100,000 in payment of labor. It put that money in circulation in Baltimore and in the United States instead of in Wales.

The Welsh manufacturers and their employees agree with Mr. Cowen. They want the tin plate works at Locust Point and all the other tin plate works in this country to go down and to stay down. Every pound of tin plate made in this country has displaced a pound of Welsh tin plate, and this is why the tin plate makers of Wales were so sore over the McKinley law and are rejoicing over its repeal.

Mr. Cowen is not worse than other free traders, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Howard, Mr. Alderson and Mr. Harvey. It is the free trade theory that if any home industry cannot stand on its own bottom against all the world it should go down. This means that if Americans do not wish to work for foreign wages it serves them right to be thrown out of employment to take their chances in idleness. This is brutal, but it is the free trade doctrine.

Mr. HOWARD should not allow his mind to be disturbed by the white house dream. It was only a nightmare.

The Fall in Wool Prices.

Messrs. D. Loewen & Co., of St. Louis, write to the Globe-Democrat of that city to say that they see in a Democratic newspaper "that some man in West Virginia sold some wool at 21 cents, for which he was offered 15 cents six months ago; and also, that other parties are very active in gathering up wools and holding them for a further rise of 6 cents to 8 cents a pound."

The comment of Messrs. Loewen & Co. on this statement is that "whoever wrote it either knew nothing of what he was talking about or he deliberately falsified for political purposes." These dealers offer to sell to anybody 1,000,000 pounds of wool at 2 cents a pound less than it was worth six months ago, and the buyer may take any kind of wool he wants.

Wool has dropped everywhere except in the political departments of the Democratic newspapers and in Democratic campaign literature generally. It has dropped in the market reports of the Democratic newspapers, but this makes no impression on their political departments. It makes an impression on the farmer, who by this time has discovered that there is a free trade conspiracy to trick him into supporting the party of free trade.

The farmer cannot be fooled on this question. If he has wool to sell all he has to do is to offer it in the market, and he knows very soon what the market price is. If he has already sold his wool he can easily learn what his neighbors are getting for theirs. No newspaper, Democratic or Republican, can fix the price of wool. That is done between the buyer and the seller, and neither party to the transaction can be deceived by any newspaper. This is what makes so absurd the Democratic effort to deceive.

It may be that wool will bring a better price before the end of this year or before the end of next year or at some other time. The price depends on a variety of conditions. The fact of interest to-day is that since the passage of the Wilson-Gorman tariff bill wool has fallen in price until it has reached the lowest point of which there is any record. Democratic tariff legislation has done it.

Mr. WILSON and Mr. Cocker and Mr. Cowen should come to Wheeling some more and talk some more nonsense. It all helps the cause of protection.

Mr. Wilson on American Shipping. In his speech in this city Mr. William L. Wilson spoke, as he has done in other speeches, of the decline of American shipping. According to the Register report this is what he said on this subject:

I remember reading an extract from Gladstone, in which he says that when he was a boy fourth of the commerce of the world was carried in American ships, manned by American seamen. Now, fellow citizens, that was a great industry, giving employment to millions of American workmen in building ships, in manning them, in handling freight—taken out of existence in order to increase the profits of protected manufacturers of this country.

Any part of Mr. Gladstone's boyhood must go back at least seventy years ago. At that time the entire population of this country was about 10,000,000 men, women and children, black and white. There were then no millions of American workmen engaged in building ships, in manning them, in handling the freight, and Mr. Wilson knows there were not. Nor is it true that four-fifths of the commerce of the world was carried in American ships, and Mr. Wilson knows it is not true.

The clipper ship gave this country a considerable prestige on the seas, but the clipper came along when Mr. Gladstone was a grown man taking an active part in public affairs. We had the timber, know how to build wooden ships and made ourselves felt through them. In the late 60's the iron ship began the revolution of the carrying trade. England was prepared to build it and we were not.

Very soon came our civil war, in which Mr. Wilson took part on the wrong side, and England was prepared to furnish to Mr. Wilson's cause armed cruisers to destroy our commerce. We have not yet recovered from that blow, but when Mr. Wilson's party came into power the recovery had begun.

Efforts are being made to organize a steel trust. What! Under a Democratic tariff!

A Chance for Chinese Labor. The Portland Oregonian tells of a shipment of lumber from Vancouver, British Columbia, for San Francisco, "the first cargo of lumber shipped from British Columbia to America coast points." Lumber on the free list makes the shipment possible. The Oregonian remarks that "the policy of the Democratic party is doing its work."

The British lumber mills can turn out their product at lower cost than the American, and that is the milk in the cocoanut. The British mills out in that region do their work largely with Chinese labor, which is now given the advantage over American labor in the American market.

The Wilson managers in the Second district can't get away from the Joy letter. How will they explain it to the miners, whom they have tried to dupe through Joy's manipulation?

The coal miners of the Second district who have been toyed with by National Organizer Joy, of the United Mine Workers, had their eyes opened when they read yesterday's INTELLIGENCER. They saw the game that Mr. Joy was playing on them in the interest of Highest of all in Leavening Power.—Latest U. S. Gov't Report.

Mr. William London Wilson, Mr. Joy's confidential letter to Chairman McGraw establishes the connection and exposes the hand. Mr. Joy wanted more money to do more of the work which he was brought into the district to do.

Prof. ZACHARIN, the czar's physician until recently, is in hard luck. Charged with making a wrong diagnosis and afterwards neglecting his patient, he is in danger of being hanged as soon as the czar dies. The probability is that no medical skill could have saved the autocrat of all the Russias.

RANDOM POLITICAL NOTES.

Both parties have had innings during the week in this city, and to the honor of each he said the affairs were creditable in point of enthusiasm and crowds, showing that the election is not going by default on either side. The Republicans have much the best of it, however, because the tide of sentiment among the people appears to be in their favor.

The magnificent popular reception tendered Governor McKinley Tuesday night was of a character that augurs well for the success of Republicanism in Ohio county. The dense mass of humanity which packed the available space about the McClure House, and listened attentively to the words that fell from the great champion of American industries, was composed almost entirely of the wage working class which two years ago had been appealed to with success by the Democracy to vote for a change. Their faces, as well as their shouts of approval of McKinley's eloquent remarks; as he reviewed the results of that change, showed plainly how anxious they are for a chance to undo the work of that fatal day in November, 1892.

The Democratic performance was more on the spectacular order. Entering town on a special train which had been heralded for days, containing all the equipments of a hippodrome display, musicians, gorgeously attired in scarlet, guards of honor, and a trio of distinguished orators, it came with a blare of trumpets, introducing to the people of Wheeling, in a manner smacking somewhat of a foreign flavor, a gentleman fresh from being feasted and eulogized in the banquet hall of the Chamber of Commerce of our chief commercial rivals, because of the fight he is conducting to open our markets to their products by tearing down the tariff defenses which have surrounded American workmen. The night display was more democratic, but the speeches were a repetition of the same old theories, the same old claims unsupported by practical facts, the same old repeated assertions, and more promises for the future.

In an industrial city where workmen, since the advent of Democratic tariff tinkering, have been reduced to the point of starvation, or have been forced to have their wages scaled down to most tariff reductions on their products, they were told of the beauties of a Democratic tariff policy. In the meantime the object lessons those same workmen have witnessed, and are witnessing, were in their minds and could not be reconciled with the theoretical statements of the speakers. The tin plate worker who interrupted one speaker in the Grand Opera House to ask him to explain why, under the "beneficent" Democratic tariff, his wages had been reduced 33 1/2 per cent (receiving no answer but an order that he be ejected from the meeting), only gave voice to a question that is in the minds of hundreds of Wheeling workmen. This is a point all of the speakers steered clear of. The wage reductions all over the country, except in a very few cases not touched by the tariff, are what are bothering the Democratic orators. And yet it is the point that has a great deal to do with the issue, and will be an important factor in the elections.

A few squares, away at a Republican ward meeting, fifteen hundred hardy sons of toil were at the same hour wildly cheering Captain Doyener, the Republican candidate for Congress. The spectacular affair in the centre of the city had no attractions for them. They had audered the consequences of the mere threat to carry out the policy the display represented and had witnessed some of the results of its practical application. Chairman McGraw's brilliant display arranged at an enormous expense for the expressed purpose of over-awing the opposition and stirring up the apathetic Democracy, may have had some effect in other places, though no evidence is at hand that it did, but the workmen of Wheeling, and the business men of Wheeling could not be deceived by the clamour or brilliancy of his expensive hippodrome get-up, which no himself characterizes as "Eloquence on Wheels."

In the light of the experience of the past nineteen months, and in the light of the free-traders' declaration that the assault on our industrial system has only begun, how could they be deceived by such an effort?

The chances for Republican success in the state at large are brightening every day. There has been no cessation of enthusiasm for the cause of protection anywhere. The attendance at Republican meetings at all points in the state continues to be unprecedented. It is this fact that has driven the Democratic managers to desperation, and forced them to resort to the expenditure of vast sums of money in this attempt to stem the Republican tide. Never before in the history of the state has such an enormous fund been placed in the hands of a local committee as that which is at the disposal of Wilson's managers in the Second district, and never before has such a quantity of money produced so small a result. Dayton's chances of election have not been materially affected. The talk about Republican enthusiasm in the state generally has not been exaggerated. Governor McKinley, who has just completed a tour of the west, which was remarkable for the enormous crowds that greeted him everywhere, ought to have some idea of numbers, when massed in his presence, from that experience. He estimated while here that during his journey from Point Pleasant to this city last Tuesday the number of people he addressed enroute aggregated thirty thousand, including the Wheeling audience. Add to these the more than ten thousand who greeted him at Bridgeport, Ohio, opposite Wheeling, the same evening, and you get an idea of the way the people are aroused this year. Those who accompanied the governor, including newspaper representatives of both parties, declared his estimate was conservative. Contrast this with the Register's own report of Mr. Wilson's tour on Wednesday from Keyser to Wheeling—about the same distance as that from Point Pleasant to Wheeling. According to the Register, which of course made liberal estimates, less than 8,000 people listened to speeches in the two hundred miles, including the two Wheeling audiences. This may or may not be regarded as a straw.

But all this should not make Republicans over-confident. The Democratic managers will not give up their desperate effort to rally the forces until the sun goes down on election day. Every method that their combined geniuses can contrive, or that money can buy, will be resorted to in every part of the state to save West Virginia from slipping from their grasp. To meet these efforts the Republicans have only the righteousness of the cause of American markets and their own personal efforts. They have no vast fund with which to charter railroad trains to run free excursions or to carry aggregations of eloquence and music over the state; no assistance from New York importers, nor money squeezed from federal officeholders. We shall see whether British gold or the votes of honest workmen will win in the fight for home industries. It looks very much as if the people of this state are not going to surrender to the influence of money and the power of an un-American administration.

The Register has had a great deal to say of late about Mr. Elkins and Governor McKinley going over the country in private cars on their speaking tours, and has contrasted their modern methods of traveling with "Mr. Wilson's modest style." Now that Mr. Wilson has come to Wheeling and general riding in Senator Camden's sumptuous palanquin on wheels, and accompanied by go boys brass bands, carried for hundreds of miles, I submit that it is in order for the Register to apologize to both Governor McKinley and Mr. Elkins. When the Register resorts to cheap demagoguery to prejudice voters it should be more careful, lest its own invention prove a boomerang.

The New York Evening Post is regarded as a pretty good Democratic authority. It is, in fact, the chief free trade organ in New York, being supported by the importers. It gives an interesting summary of the Democratic situation in Michigan, in which Republicans may find some encouragement. The Democratic Post says:

Nowhere in the country are the Democrats more thoroughly demoralized than in Michigan. Two members of the state committee have resigned their places and retired from the campaign on the ground that their candidate for governor has made a bargain with the A. P. A., and is to receive the vote of that organization for a consideration. Another prominent politician has also written letters in the common part in the campaign on the same ground, and he cites evidence which appears conclusive of the truth of the charges. To make matters worse, the Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor has declined the nomination, and announces that he purposes to support the Republican party. Moreover, the Democrats have never recovered from the bitter odium which they incurred four years ago, when they got control of the legislature, by passing a law changing the system of choosing Presidential electors from the traditional and elsewhere universal one of a state ticket to the district system. In order that they might secure in 1892, as they did, some votes for their candidate, although the Republicans have won in the commonwealth. They have been "too smart," and they deserve no sympathy now that they have fallen into difficulties.

It seems that the Democrats of Michigan have dug their own grave by their infamous gerrymander of the state, in addition to the other deals referred to. Honest voters will not tolerate such trickery. We have a Democratic "arrangement" of senatorial districts in this state, on which honest voters will place the stamp of their disapproval. G. A. D.

A Strange Contrast.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—A dispatch to the Pall Mall Gazette from Yalta says that symbols of joy and sorrow jostle each other everywhere in that neighborhood. State carriages and regiments of troops for the imperial marriage arrived at the same time as the mourning coaches and liveries of woe, which will be required in the event of the czar's death.
