THE INCOME TAX.

The Argument Before the United States Supreme Court Closed.

OPINION WILL NOT BE RENDERED

For Some Time—Mr. Choate Closes the Series of Distinguished Speakers on the Case—The Land Tax and a Tax on its Rental Without a Difference—The Court Room Crowded.

WASHINGTON, D. C. March 13.—The corridors about the supreme court room were crowded to-day as the corridors about the senate and house chambers are at times when it is understood that something unusual is likely to occur. The seats inside and outside the bar and all the available standing room were occupied long before the court came in at noon, and many who were unable to gain admission remained standing in the corridors for hours, hoping that ultimately a place might be made for them. A large majority of those inside retaining their places, however, until Mr. Choate had concluded his argument, the last of the illustrious series in the income tax cases. There was no preliminary business before the court and Mr. Choate began his address promptly upon the opening of the day's session.

He took up the thread of his discussion by calling attention to the distribution of the power and the methods of exercising the power of taxation by Congress. He said that the second article of the constitution provided for an apportionment in accordance with the returns of the census. After provision was made as in the eighth article for the exercise of plenary power, which he said, was almost without limitation, but they had added the provision that all duties, excise and imports, should be uniform throughout the United States. This he understood to mean just what it said. He was not among those who attribute heedlessness or carelessness or ignorance to the makers of the constitution, and he believed they meant to cover the entire question. They had known all about the struggles of the English speaking people for the regulation of taxation. Hence they limited and specified what was to be known as direct taxation.

Mr. Choate's argument was largely technical and legal and indicated that with his introduction disposed of he would henceforth confine himself to the construction of the constitution and the presentation of the legal points.

The inevitable income of all accumulated property, whether the rent of land or the interest on lands, is, he claimed, necessarily the subject of direct taxation and of no other. He hoped to establish this fact and to further show that such tax was subject to the rule of apportionment.

Whatever else was not included in the term direct tax, certainly real estate was included. There had been universal assent to this proposition and he would take this as the basis of his first step. He controverted the proposition that this idea was to apply only to unimproved land, but contended that the application was to all property designated as real estate. He followed this argument with the assertion that the income from rent of real estate is indistinguishable from the tax on real estate itself, and combated the position of the attorney general that the income from rent after it enters the pocket is money and is to be considered as such. For that matter, any tax on land was in substance and effect a tax on its rental. "How, under heavens," he exclaimed, "is a tax on land to be paid except from its income—its rental?"

Returning to the position of the attorney general, that the proceeds were not rentals but money in the pocket, he declared it was a distinction without a difference and was a fiction which had been stamped upon by the court with all its might, and quoted precedents to sustain the position. Furthermore, he controverted the right to tax "money in the pocket" as a taxation on personal property.

In the case of United States bonds, which are not subject to taxation, how could the interest on these bonds be separated from the bonds themselves and taxed? Returning to the questions of apportionment and uniformity he reviewed the history of the formation of the constitution, giving especial attention to the compromise on the question of taxation and commerce.

Mr. Choate then took up the contention of the counsel for the appellants that the word uniformity had only a geographical meaning and proceeded to criticize it. Why, he asked, should this limitation as to uniformity in the different states be insisted upon when the tax was to apply to the entire United States. He claimed that the constitutional requirement of uniformity meant to require equal and uniform duties and taxes among citizens throughout the United States. It means approximate equality—the treatment of all alike.

Mr. Choate contended that in exchange for the surrender by the states of power to collect duties, imposts and excises, the general government had necessarily conceded the right of all men in their equality before the law, and the rule of uniformity must be observed. Furthermore, he asserted that this rule had been observed without exception by Congress in all tariff acts.

Mr. Carter had declared that there was no help for it if a mistake had been made in the law, but Mr. Choate contended that the court was here for the purpose of providing help in such cases. He then referred to what he designated as the breaches of the rule of uniformity made by the income tax, taking up first the limitation of the law to incomes in excess of $4,000. Had we come to the point when there was to be no law for the rich and another for the poor? He declared the law to be a deliberate strike on the part of the men who had voted for it, at the really rich. No wonder, he said, the President after ten days' deliberation had refused to put his name to the bill. No wonder the President and the secretary of the treasury refuse to endorse it.

Continuing his argument Mr. Choate said the refusal to make the exemption in the case of corporations was in the nature of a penalty which was not levied on others, and it was an entering upon a policy which Congress should have refrained from.

Referring to the other exemptions he said that Mr. Vanderbilt or Mr. Astor would put all his money into a savings bank and thus escape taxation under the law. Mr. Choate quoted from official records to show the amount of the business done by the initial companies, declaring that there were no institutions in the land which were more noted grabbers and for hoarding of money than these mutual companies. It was 3 o'clock when Mr. Choate, after having spoken three hours to-day and forty minutes yesterday, reached his peroration. Mr. Choate stopped so suddenly that the audience did not at first appear to realize that the argument in the famous case had reached a finality, and that nothing remained to determine the validity of the income tax except the decision of the court, which could not of course be then expected.

QUIET AT NEW ORLEANS.

The Colored Levee Laborers Stayed at Home Yesterday, and the Trouble is Thought to be Over.

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 13.—The levee presented a peaceful aspect. The police did not wait until actual shooting began before they took action. Word was sent to all precinct commanders last night to have their forces on the river front at daylight this morning. Consequently the police were on hand in large numbers to prevent a repetition of yesterday's bloody affair.

The police were under the impression that the rioters would again commit deeds of violence, but this belief did not pan out.

Every colored man whose business calls him to the river front took a day off and kept at home. The various agents who have up to yesterday been working negro scrowmen told their men to remain at home until they were sent for. At a meeting of the agents held last night they decided it would be bad policy to attempt to work their colored labor. The result was that all ships which are being loaded by agents employing colored labor are undisturbed to-day. There are, however, a dozen or more ships receiving their cargoes, but they are handled by white men and not being bothered at all. From present appearances all trouble on the levee is over and unless something unusual happens there will be no repetition of yesterday's rioting.

Satisfied With the Local Authorities.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 13.—Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British ambassador, has directed the British consul at New Orleans, Mr. St. John, to apply to the local authorities for such special protection as may be necessary during the race riots. The ambassador has laid before the state department the consul's statement as to the shooting of Parker Bain. No further steps are contemplated, as the ambassador is satisfied that the local authorities will deal with the uprising in such way as to give British subjects the same protection as that afforded to Americans.

THE COAL STRIKE.

The Changes of the Day Favor the Miners. A General Resumption Anticipated.

PITTSBURGH, March 13.—There are but few changes in the condition of the miners' strike and they are in favor of the strikers. The Banksville mines, employing 600 men, are at work to-day at the sixty-nine-cent rate, as are also the Bending mines on the Panhandle road. The latter employ about 600 men. This, according to the figures of the miners' officials, makes a total of fully 17,000 men at work at the union rates, out of 22,000 miners in the entire district. The Charleroi Coal Company has agreed to grant their men the sixty-nine-cent rate, but there are a few minor details in the scale upon which a resumption of work depends. It is expected that these will soon be amicably adjusted and that the mines will be at work in a few days. The miners consider the fight won and are only waiting for the remainder of the railroad operators to fall into line as it seems they must do to protect their trade.

Mining Case Decided.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 13.—Secretary Smith has rendered a decision in the Last Chance Mining Company vs. the Tyler Mining Company, being a claim made by the former company for the Tyler lode in the Coeur d'Alene mining country, Idaho. A portion of the Tyler claim overlapped the Last Chance claim. The Tyler company in an application for patent waived all the right to the overlapping portion, but the Last Chance company asked that no patent be issued while there was pending in the supreme court a case affecting the title of the property. Secretary Smith holds that as the overlapping tract has been waived by the Tyler company patent shall issue for its claim.

Admiral Meade's Squadron.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 13.—Admiral Meade's squadron sailed last night from Port of Spain, Trinidad, for La Guayra, Venezuela. In case of trouble there the United States will have three fine warships, the New York, Minneapolis and Cincinnati, ready to protect American interests. It was the intention of the department to have the squadron stop at Curacao on the way, but owing to an outbreak of smallpox at that port this part of the programme was abandoned.

Secretary King's Condition.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 13.—Myron D. King, the governor's private secretary, who was injured in the riot at the house of representatives Monday night, is no better to-day. Early this morning he had a fainting spell. The physician was hastily summoned and applied restoratives and expressed the opinion that the faint resulted from the effects of medicines. The doctor says the chief danger of his patient will be in the event of inflammation.
