CLOTHES

DON'T MAKE THE MAN!

Or boy either, for that matter, but they go a pretty good distance in giving him a presentable appearance, and while you're buying you might as well come and get

FIRST-CLASS, HIGH ART

Clothing at the same price you'll pay for the common run of readymade Clothing. We can say, without exaggeration, that the goods we offer this spring will fairly vie with good, merchant tailor garments. It is not only the quality and excellence of these goods we wish to call your attention, but the EXTREMELY LOW PRICES.

The efforts made by us this season have been the most strenuous, and have placed us in the position to show you the most magnificent line of Clothing ever brought to this city.

We are showing an extensive line of

DRESS SUITINGS—GEO. E. STIFEL & CO

A GENTLE REMINDER AT A SEASONABLE TIME FROM A RELIABLE SOURCE

TO THE WISE

IS WORTH MUCH.

* Think of the days passing by, each one carrying some of those elegant Dress Suitings (as far as your possessing it) out of sight. If you do see it again some one else will be the owner, and you can only say, "It might have been." How many will then be up and about before more gems are lost? Certainly there are others, but you should be ready to appear Easter with your new outfit. There are special Easter offerings all this week in every line. Saturday we received another lot of Black and Colored Crepons, and Black Satins and Taffeta Silks. Come in, hear our prices, see the goods. If they are not big bargains, don't buy.

Striped, Checked and Figured Silks and Satins for Shirt Waists. Some are washable, come are not, but in either we have hundreds of pieces, and we know out of this lot one, if not more, will suit you. Our made-up Shirt Waists are up to date in style and finish, perfect fit, and a class of goods that speak for themselves. See the line for 45c each.

They are using trimmings, and lots of them. That's why we have such a variety. You buy a dress from us you are sure to find a suitable trimming for it right here, be it Band, Point or Buckle, in Jet, Steel, or Jeweled. Buttons are also playing some important parts on dresses. All sizes of pearl, cut steel and gilt. Also Painted Novelties that will improve any suit.

Ladies' Blouse Sets, Studs, Collar and Cuff Buttons. A great variety in Plated Ware from 25c per set up. Sterling Silver, warranted sets, at 50c each.

JEWEL, That's the name given a bar of soap that makes half the labor of housecleaning turn into joy. Leaves your carpet bright and new, not ripped or shrank up. It's only 20c a bar. If you are wise you will try it.

TWO SUDDEN DEATHS.

Frederick Gruber, a Well Known Citizen, Drops Dead

SITTING AT THE DINNER TABLE.

Mrs. James Sadtler Also Expires at her Home in North Wheeling—Mr. Gruber's Long Career in Wheeling as a Musician and Business Man.

About half past 12 o'clock yesterday, Mr. Fred Gruber died suddenly at his home on the north end of the Island. He was at the dinner table at the time, and was apparently in his usual good health and spirits, when he fell forward upon the table. The family at once summoned a physician, but before he arrived life was extinct. The doctor pronounced paralysis of the heart the cause of death.

Mr. Gruber was about among his friends as usual yesterday forenoon. He was always a man of good humor, genial and popular. He visited his son's home in the forenoon and went home to dinner. He showed no signs of illness until he fell.

Mr. Gruber was nearly sixty-eight years of age. He was born in Kusel, Germany, but came to this country when a young man and settled in Philadelphia. He visited Wheeling, and here met and married Miss Barbara Biles, who survives him, with four of their five children, one daughter having died. The living children are Miss Mary, William, the cigar manufacturer, Edward and Harry.

Mr. Gruber was the oldest living member of the Knights of Pythias order in West Virginia, being a member of Baltimore lodge No. 6. His was the first death of a member of the local musicians' union. He had played the cymbals in several bands ever since he came to Wheeling to live, in 1870, lately in the Opera House and Meyers' bands. He was a shoe maker by trade, and an artist in his business, having few superiors in the country. He had amassed a competency by industry and thrift. He was respected by all who knew his many good qualities, and his death caused general regret.

The funeral will take place Wednesday afternoon. The Knights of Pythias will attend in a body, and the musicians' union talks of forming one big band and leading the funeral procession, if the family does not object.

MRS. SADLER'S DEATH.

She Expires in a Few Seconds—Death Due To Heart Trouble.

Last evening Mrs. Josephine Sadler died at her home on North Market street. Her death was shockingly sudden. She was to all appearances in her usual health up to a few minutes before she died. She walked into the kitchen and was about to speak, when she turned pale and fell to the floor. Before a physician could reach her she was dead.

County Coroner Schultz was notified and made an inquiry, the result of which was the decision that she died from heart trouble.

Mrs. Sadler was the widow of James Sadler, the painter who was killed some time ago by the fall of a scaffold while he was painting Harper Bros.' hat store, on Main street.

THE BISHOP'S SERMON

At the Cathedral Yesterday—A Large Congregation was present—Observance of Palm Sunday—The Services at St. Matthew's Church.

Yesterday was Palm Sunday, the last Sunday before Easter. The palms were distributed in all Catholic churches in token of Christ's entry into Jerusalem, when the people strewed palms in his way. The faithful wore the palms in their coat lapels after leaving the church. Palms left over are burned and the ashes saved for use on Ash Wednesday next year.

Bishop Donahue preached the sixth sermon of the Lenten series, last evening, in the Cathedral, to the usual overflowing congregation. The subject for treatment was "The Wounds of Christ's Soul," as a sequel to his sermon of one week before on "The Wounds of Christ's Body."

The right reverend preacher took as his text the following from the Epistle to the Galatians: "Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us." (Galatians III 13); and the supplementary text: "He put on cursing like a garment, and it went in like water into his entrails and like oil in his bones." (Psalm 108 v. 18). He dwelt on the various commemorations of the instruments of the Sacred Passion, and then the loving turning of the church to our blessed mother, in her Seven Dolors, after which she winds the purple veil about the sacred form of Christ, there to be had till Good Friday. But we may lovingly in our meditations take off that veil; nay, going deeper still, we must probe more searchingly than thorn, or nail, or spear, and try to gaze upon the wounds of his soul. At the very root of the facility of meditating upon the purely physical aspects of the Sacred Passion lies the danger of injuring Christ's real passion.

The preacher, before entering upon the main theme, laid down some propositions bearing upon the divinity and humanity of Jesus Christ. He had a man's heart, a man's sensibilities, a man's shrinking from pain. He had a human will—not consciously merged in the divine will, but separate, though harmonious. He had, of course, a man's soul—a fact which most of us lose sight of in the blinding splendors of His divinity, as we think the sky above is starless at high noon. At times, just as the Divine could raise the mere human nature, so it could, in some way that we cannot fathom, hurl its infinite weight upon the poor, frail body and beating heart. Then, too, from the instant of the incarnation the union of the Divine and human natures was indissoluble—what he once assumed he never laid down. The human nature was, temporarily at least, in some dread way, overpowered and overwhelmed by the Divine.

In the development of these considerations lies the awfulness of the wounds of Christ's soul! He foresaw, as God, He knew sin as God, with infinite knowledge and infinite honor, but He suffered as man. He came a curse for us, the victim of all sins of all the world, with all their dread, all their sorrow, all their sense of guilt, all their remorse. This feeling of universal victim, this becoming a curse that we might be delivered from the curse of law, is meant by St. Paul in his energetic language. Its searching nature, going to the very vitals of his humanity, to the very citadel and sanctuary of his soul is expressed by the Psalmist. He put on cursing like a garment, and it went in like water into his entrails and like oil in his bones. In the light of these tests and principles the preacher took up the agony in the garden, with the temporary recoil of the human will, the kiss of Judas, the meeting with His mother, the three hours on the cross, and especially the awful sense of guilt and dereliction which made the dying human lips cry out in horror to His Eternal Father.

From each he drew practical lessons of conformity to God's holy will, no matter how bitter the struggle of union with our dear Lord in times of sorrow and gloom, and especially in that lonely hour of all when our fluttering soul shall tremble upon eternity; that is the time to remember the agonizing cry, to feel that He was and is our elder brother, who has tasted the bitterness of that death, and ten thousand times more bitterly than we shall ever have to taste.

AT ST. MATTHEW'S CHURCH.

Last night at St. Matthew's church one of the largest congregations seen there for a year gathered to hear the special services. The church was literally packed to the outer doors. In addition to the usual services there was a very attractive and impressive feature, the rendition by the vested choir of the cantata, "The Crucifixion," by Sir John Stumm. Mrs. Flora Williams and Mr. Hughes also sang with the choir, while Prof. J. A. Raynes, the director, presided at the organ. The service was one of the most memorable given at St. Matthew's in a long time. The Easter services next Sunday, especially the music, will also be more impressive than any former celebration of the day there.

A Wheeling Man at the Helm.

The Washington, D. C., Post of Saturday says:

The Columbiad, the new college paper which is to be issued by the students of Columbian University, seems to be already assured of success. A large number of subscriptions have been secured and a respectable amount of advertising patronage has thus far been promised. It will make its initial bow to the public about commencement time as a handsome magazine, but with the commencement of the next scholastic year will appear as a college weekly. The senior law class held an enthusiastic meeting last night and after a spirited election selected W. P. Robinson, of Wheeling, W. Va., as one of the editors of the new publication. Mr. Robinson is one of the founders of the Wheeling Evening and Sunday News.

THE LAKE CANAL SCHEME

Considered at a Meeting of the Chamber of Commerce Committee Saturday Afternoon.

Saturday afternoon the special committee of the chamber of commerce appointed to consider the proposal of Col. G. A. Karwiese for a canal to a point in Tascaraus county, O., to connect with the existing canal to the lake, met at the chamber, Messrs. Anton Roymann, Hulihan Quarrier, C. R. Hubbard, W. H. Tallman and Henry Baer, of the committee, being present, with several other members of the chamber and Col. Karwiese.

The latter outlined a new way of propelling boats by a large screw at the bow of the boat, instead of the usual propeller, and also gave some ideas of electrical power as applied to canal boats. When asked what he desired he said the first thing for the Wheeling interest to do was to form a company to forward the canal scheme. He would have a bill prepared for presentation to the next Ohio legislature providing for the control by such a corporation of that part of the existing canal necessary to carrying out the project. He conveyed to those present the idea that no money need be paid up here, and that the financial part of the project would be easily arranged.

The Connelleville railroad matter was incidentally bronched, and Col. Karwiese seemed to think its success would be an important prerequisite to the success of the canal scheme. The committee will meet again to-morrow evening to consider the whole matter referred to it.
