A FIGHT ON THE FERRY

Growing Out of the One That Last Saturday Evening.

PILOT CILLES AND MR. GLASSCOCK

Have a Rough and Tumble Fight in the Cabin and on the Deck—Eye-Witnesses Uniformly Condemn Cilles, Who Had Been Laid Off For His Part in Saturday Night's Row.

There was another fight on the Island ferry boat Charleston yesterday afternoon. It grew indirectly out of the fight between Pilot William Armstrong and Collector Harry Trimble, on the same boat Saturday evening. As a result of that racket Manager Thomas Glasscock was instructed by the directors to lay off the entire night crew for a month. Yesterday Casper Cilles got on the boat, and Glasscock told him he was laid off. He replied that he had nothing to do with the fight, and Mr. Glasscock said he could not help that; he was simply acting on orders.

After some pretty angry talk the two men became involved in a fight in the cabin. At length Glasscock downed Cilles and was giving him a "good body-beating," when Casper yelled "enough." Glasscock asked if he would assault him again if he let him up, and Cilles promised he would not. Then Glasscock said he was willing to let it drop on that basis, and went to attend to his duties.

As he was drawing the guard bar Cilles went up behind him and struck him two severe blows with the knob of an umbrella. A second fight was then begun when passengers interfered and parted the men.

The boat had been delayed some time by this altercation, and the delay was increased by James McDonald, the pilot on watch, quitting the wheel out of sympathy for Cilles. A young man who could handle the boat was induced to take her over on one trip, and Ben Goodwin then took the wheel for the rest of the day.

Both of the men were very bloody. Cilles went to police headquarters and gave himself up. J. T. Stone, who was a passenger, had a few words with Cilles, and afterwards swore out a warrant for him. Cilles also swore out a warrant for Glasscock, which was served on him on the boat. Both were let go on their own recognizance for their appearance in police court this morning.

Mr. Glasscock is a man of about 60 years. All the eye-witnesses condemned Cilles emphatically. Mr. Glasscock is said to be the best manager for the ferry company that has ever had charge of the boat. Unless some one man is in authority the ferry cannot be run satisfactorily. The frequent quarrels have caused much criticism and no doubt injured the company's business.

THE LAUGHLIN WILL RESUME

The Big Plant Getting Ready to go to Work Next Monday.

The Laughlin Nail Works will resume next Monday after a shut down of five months. The large department will go on to-morrow. Orders were given yesterday by the management to get everything in readiness at once. The stock of nails in the warehouse is small. This will be good news for the many employes at the large works and the people of Martin's Ferry and the community generally as well. The Laughlin mill is a big thing for Martin's Ferry and it is hoped that the condition of trade will justify the management in running the plant steadily. The stoppage of this great plant makes a wonderful difference in the business of Martin's Ferry.

In the two factories there are two hundred and twelve machines and it is a sight to visit the mill when in full operation.

Work on the big tin plant of this company is being pushed forward as vigorously as possible, a large number of men being employed in its construction.

The Hudson takes the Scotia's day in the Cincinnati-Pittsburgh trade until the latter's shaft is repaired, probably two or three weeks.

The river reached 5 feet 6 inches at 9 a. m. yesterday and then commenced to recede very slowly, the marks registering 5 feet 3 inches at 6 p. m. It is expected that the present general rains will bring up the river to a good navigable stage.

PITTSBURGH, May 14.—The fine of the towboat Rescue collapsed about 10 o'clock this morning, while the vessel was going up the Monongahela river, and Engineer George McKinnis and Fireman Samuel Schoomover were fatally scalded. The damage to the boat was not large.

CINCINNATI, May 14.—The Scotia, en route to this city from Pittsburgh, broke her shaft early yesterday morning while nearing Portsmouth, O. There were over 100 passengers on board, mostly round-trippers. The Hudson left last night in her place, taking all the Scotia's passengers back. The captain of the Scotia telegraphed to this port for a tug.

ONLY ONE IN THE BUSINESS.

Barnum & Bailey's Latest Novelty is a Woman Clown.

The new woman has invaded the circus and will come to Wheeling with the Barnum & Bailey show. The newest woman with the circus is the female clown, Evetta on the bills, Miss Matthews in private life, a plump young Englishwoman, whom Mr. Bailey's agent found in London and persuaded to come to America. Miss Matthews is an acrobat, and she indulges in odd antics and burlesque feats of skill, as well as in the pantomime and knock-about tricks of circus clowns. She has proved a great favorite with audiences in New York City.

With the female clown and the female ring-master (or ring-mistress), who cracks a whip just like a man, keeps the equestrienne's horse at its proper gait, and acts as a foil to the clown. Mlle. Castroni, who is an expert horsewoman, has added the ring-master's act to the list of accomplishments that have made her valuable to the Barnum & Bailey show. Of course, the woman clown and the ring-mistress go into the ring with a woman rider, making a "woman's number." Josie Ashton is the equestrienne of this female trio. There are plenty of lady riders with the Barnum & Bailey show this season. There are the three Menas sisters, dainty and skillful—Rose, Marie and Oulka—and a serpentine dance on horseback is one of their numbers. Trilby on horseback is another, while they make a pretty finish, after riding separate horses, by doing a double act on a single steed.

The big show, with its equestrian feature, the great aerial acts of the Dunbars and Dillons, the hippodrome track, the trained animal arena, the three-ring circus, the zoological collection, the ethnological congress, and the grand water carnival, will be exhibited at the Island Park on Thursday, May 23.

CONCERT POSTPONED!

The Concert at Mozart Park is postponed until TUESDAY, May 21, on account of the bad weather. The tickets can be used on that day without any changes.
