QUARANTINE RAISED

By the Health Authorities of Bridgeport Last Evening.

BELLAIRE SOON FOLLOWS SUIT.

The Condition of Affairs in the City Brighter Every Day—Official Statement by the Health Officer—No new Cases Yesterday and the Old Cases Rapidly Disappearing.

The smallpox situation grows brighter every day. Health Officer Jepson's official statement, issued yesterday afternoon, showed that two "suspects" had been discharged as free from the disease. Two patients have been discharged as cured, and nine others are well but not yet released for prudential reasons. There remain in the city but seventeen patients, and in the smallpox hospital two, all doing well.

Last evening the health authorities of Bridgeport met and raised the quarantine against Wheeling, to take effect immediately. The only condition made was that persons must not move into that town from infected parts of Wheeling, and that rag gatherers and pack peddlers must not make their rounds. Bridgeport was the last Ohio town to quarantine and the first to raise it. She should be kindly remembered.

Later Bellaire's health board met and also raised the quarantine. There was much dissatisfaction there over the way it was enforced. This left Martin's Ferry only, where smallpox still exists, quarantined against Wheeling.

The Martin's Ferry Times had to "eat crow" last evening by printing the following communication, signed by such prominent business men of that place as William Mann, L. Spence, J. W. Inglebright, S. Huskins, the Belmont Brewing Company, per William Lipphardt, President; Spence, Baggs & Co., Martin's Ferry Keg and Barrel Works, by Thomas Meares, and Matt McDermott:

"The article in the Evening Times of Martin's Ferry, O., headed 'A Flat Failure,' is a gross misrepresentation of the facts. It stated that half a dozen business men, half of them from Wheeling, either in person or by proxy, and actuated by Wheeling parties, had got together for the purpose of petitioning an abrogation of the quarantine. Now the fact is that the meeting was not prompted by a Wheeling man, and but one of the half dozen, the number stated by it, which is also a misstatement, is a resident of the island, and he is as loyal to the interests of Martin's Ferry as any member of the Times' staff, and that not a single firm of Martin's Ferry, or elsewhere, was represented by proxy.

"The Martin's Ferry board of health must admit that the quarantine established by it is a 'Flat Failure,' and works unnecessary hardship to a large number of our citizens, and the nearby farming community."

It has leaked out that one of the quarantine guards at the upper end of Bellaire narrowly escaped being shot by exercising his authority without letting the people know his purpose. Two young men by the name of Nesbitt, who live west of town had been delivering books up the river and making collections. The boys were returning in the evening and didn't know anything about the quarantine. When they crossed the railroad at Schramm's crossing some one called out "halt!" but the boys drove on. Presently a fellow ran out and grabbed the horse. The Nesbitt boys at once jumped to the conclusion that it was some one bent on robbing them, and as they had considerable money they shot at the guard. Then the one with the money jumped out of the buggy and made his way into town, leaving his brother in the buggy in charge of the guard. They drove to Gravel Hill where the Nesbitt boy was still of the opinion the fellow in the buggy with him was a robber, but after explanations the matter was hushed up.

In the reference in yesterday morning's INTELLIGENCER, to the fact of the Belmont Brewing Company's wagon coming to Wheeling, while the Wheeling merchants are denied access to Martin's Ferry, no injustice to the Belmont people was intended. The brewery company is not one of the firms who advocated the present foolish quarantine, now in effect on the Ohio side of the river. On the contrary they have made strenuous efforts to have the embargo lifted, as their business has suffered equally with that of the Wheeling manufacturers. The company says that Wheeling beer wagons have been allowed in Martin's Ferry without interruption, and that they are injured by the notice published, as many people think they were instrumental in declaring the quarantine.

A case of smallpox developed yesterday at Barton Station, back of Bridgeport. It is supposed that the minor caught it while attending the West Virginia state fair.

The Steubenville Gazette of last evening says: "The quarantine is on and the officers are kept busy. Passengers are met at all trains from Wheeling and are either sent back or go on through. Where they change trains the officers accompany them and see them out of town. The kissing chewing gum man was caught on a train from Wheeling the other night and the health officer saw him go back, but the next day he turned up at one of our hotels. A Miss Brooks who came on a Wheeling train last night, was allowed to stay here at her home all night, but to-day was sent back, the authorities purchasing a ticket for her. This seems to be pushing the quarantine to the limit."

A PASTOR CHOSEN.

The First Baptist Congregation Chooses Mr. Troy's Successor.

Last night the First Baptist church congregation held a remarkably well attended meeting at the church, corner Twelfth and Byron streets, for the purpose of selecting a new pastor to succeed Rev. I. J. Troy, who resigned last summer. There were two applicants, Rev. W. J. McCutcheon, of Virginia, and Rev. Mr. Cramer, of Cleveland, Ohio. Four ballots were taken, and the fourth resulted in the selection of Mr. McCutcheon, by a vote of 33 to 24 for Mr. Cramer. The election was made unanimous. Mr. McCutcheon will take charge of the church early this fall.

OHIO RIVER CHANGES.

The Additional Train will be Well Received by the Patrons.

The exclusive announcement in yesterday's INTELLIGENCER of the improved train service that will be given by the Ohio River railroad in the course of the next three or four weeks was well received by the patrons of the road here yesterday. The proposal to send out No. 1, the fast through train, an hour later than on the present schedule is especially pleasing and will allow passengers from above on the Pennsylvania to make close connections with the Ohio River. With the advent of new oil fields down the river this is an important consideration.

It is further learned that the Ohio River will make another important change. Heretofore this road has used central standard time, an hour slower than the eastern standard, which is used in every important town on their road, including Wheeling, Parkersburg and Huntington.

The two chair cars ordered recently by the Ohio River will arrive in a week or two. It is said that one will be used on train No. 2 and the other on No. 3, though this is not definitely settled by the management of the road.
