A PHENOMENON.

Little Melina Cyr, the Strongest Child in the World.

HER MANY MARVELLOUS FEATS.

Childish Pastimes Which Often Awe He Young Playmates-Wonderful Strength the | crita e of Generations of Paternal Ancestors - Carries an Adult Visitor About in Her Arms as if He were a Doll.

CHICAGO, March 10 .- A female Hercules in a pinafore! It seems a paradox. None the less 'tis true. A sevenyear-old girl, who scorns dolls and takes to dumbbells and weight lifting, is an anomaly. But pretty Melina Cyr does just that sort of thing, and in her play furnishes amazement to her play-mates and much childish delight to herself.

This child phenomenon, within whose

This child phenomenon, within whose slender frame lies hidden a strength that baffles all effort to solve, is, to all outward appearance, the ordinary child of her years. An oval face, franded in a wealth of yellow hair, big blue eyes, and slender frame of average height—these give no indication of abnormal muscular development. To the view Melina is a pretty child and nothing more.

ing more.

And so the marvelous stories of her prowess caused smiles of incredulity to spread over the faces of doubting listeners.

"She's one of these magnetic freaks, that's what she is," said the wise young

"She's one of these magnetic freaks, that's what she is," said the wise young, man.

"They aint no seven-year-old girl can life 206 pounds. If dey can I'll quit," added another.

The conversation took place in the office of a down-town theatrical agency, where a representative of The Tribune had gone to obtain information of the whereabouts of strong man Cyr and his wonder-working daughter.

The seeker for the marvelous was directed to the French church of St. Louis of Fullman. An hour later (he knocked at the good priest's door, and was ushered into the parior to await the coming of Louis Cyr, who, with his wife and daughter, was the guest of the fathers at the parish house.

In a few moments the door of the room opened, and Mrs. Cyr and Melina entered. The mother was below the average height, and looked to weigh rather less than the 105 pounds she claimed. She greeted her caller pleasantly, and said:

"Louis will be down in; a moment. This is little Melina. She doean't speak much French.

antiy, and se greeted her caller pleas"Louis will be down in a moment.
This is little Melina. She doesn't speak much French. She hasn't traveled with us enough yet."
"But." said the astounded visitor.
"you don't mean that haby is the girl who does the lifting? She doesn't look as though she could put a good sized doil to bed."
Just here Louis Comments.

Just here Louis Cyr entered. The man who a few nights before at the Chicago Athletic club raised, without harness, 5,674 pounds of humanity conveniently arranged on a platform, looked more like an overfed glant than the ideal strong man. He is strong, however, and after the visitor had shifted his pencil to his left hand and made a sling for the one the glant had just grasped, genially joined in a conversation.

a sling for the one the giant had just grasped, geninly joined in a conversation.

"Mr. Cyr, I called to see this little girl, of whom I have heard much. Is it true she can lift 300 pounds of iron with no artificial aid?"

"O, yes," was the reply. "She can do all we claim for her and more."

"But where does she keep her strength? I can understand how a man weighing 346 pounds, with a chest like an ice bin and arms like Armour's prige hams, could lift anything he took hold of, but that child-how does she do it?"
The giant laughed and said:

"You don't look very close. See here," and, lifting the girl's hair, which fell about her shoulders, he showed a width of bone that before was not noticeable.

The girl was one mass of muscle about the upper chest. The questioner saw and wondered. But it was only after seeing her feats of lifting he fully realized he had just witnessed an exhibition of strength without recorded parallel on the face of the earth.

Among the special efforts of little Melina may be mentioned lifting a ninety-pound anvil by a ring, through which she passes the middle finger of her right hand. This she holds in a steady position long enough to secure a photograph. Another is the raising at arm's length and then lowering to half arm's length and then lowering to con-bell.

A final and conclusive test of both her strength and indifference to conventionalities was her grasping her visitor about his knees, lifting him clear of the floor, and carrying him across he recommend.

An astonished young man sought his chair for breath and seized his hat.
"That'll de for me. What you say 'goes' about the child's strength," he gasped, and little Melina laughed with glee.

lice.
The girl evidently has inherited her maxing strength from her father. Her maxing is in no sense athletic, but on The girl evidently has inherited her amazing strength from her father. Her mother is in no sense athletic, but on the father's side the super-strength runs back several generations. Louis Cyr's mother, it is claimed, could lift a barrel of flour from the wagon and carry it to the second floor of her house. And he, at the present time, holds a world's record of 4,300 pounds lifted without harness.

Melina has received no special training, it is said, save such hints and suggestions as her father has given her during the last year. She was born in Montreal in the fall of 1883 and so is not yet eight years old.

Benjamin Milliken's Trial.

Benjamin Miliken's Trial.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 10.—
Benjamin H. Miliken, a well known young Tennessean, will be placed on trial here Thursday on the charge of house breaking with intent to commit a criminal assault on a daughter of exSolicitor General Phillips. Wideapread interest has been taken in the case.
The trial originally was set for yesterday, but was deferred at the request of the counsel for the defense. The defendant's brother, Judge Millken, law clerk of the post office department, is among the counsel. The trial may develop some sensational testimony. The offense involves an extreme penalty of fifteen years imprisonment.

Prime mercantile paper 566 per cent. Sterling exchange firm, with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.884.894 for demand and $4.8764.874, for sixty days. Posted rates $1.874.674.88 and $4.80. Commercial bills $4.884. Bar silver 6856. Silver certificates 696.694c. To-day's stock market fell slightly below yesterday's record in point of activity and was a purely professional affair. The debate at Washington overhung the speculation and the sharp talk by several of the senators had a disturbing influence in Wall street. Apart from the Washington war talk another important consuderation is responsible for the continued indisposition of the outside public to make ventures in the stock market. This is the informed banking circles as to the immediate ocurse of the money and exchange markets. It is claimed that the rates for call funds if continued will have the inevitable effect of advancing change rates to the gold shipping point. There is reason to believe that to preclude such a development the treasury department will call a sufficient amount due to bond account now lying in the government bond depositories to stiffen he money market. This, of course, would immediately affect exchange rates. The present speculation in Wall street is being conducted almost entirely on call loans. Incidentally these conditions react on the market for commercial paper. The industrial shares practically monopolized the attention of the trade and as usual the movements in these mercurial securities were erratic. Tobacco was again the star performer and displayed exceptional activity and altrength on buying for both accounts. It closed at a net loss of 1% per cent. The general market opened firm and fulry active. London quotations were slightly higher although the business in Americans at that centre is at a minimum advance of ½c in posted rates for sixty days sterling bills. This failed to influence the market and smart reactional advances occurred.

The late dealings were quite irregular as was the closing tone. Final figures show

$1,22,000.
Government bonds were firm on a fairly large business, the total sales were $125,900.
State bonds were quit. The dealings consisted of $5,000 in Tennessee settlement is and Virginia Centuries.

CHICAGO—A government report is never inducive to activity in the specutative grain markets and to-day being one of them, business was quiet. That, however, did not prevent a decline of \(\frac{1}{2}\) or per bushel in the price of wheat. Corn and oats made scarcely any change in price.
