Epilepsy 20 Years.

Cured by Dr. Miles' Nervine.

A few years ago, Mr. L. W. Gallaher, was an extensive, successful expert manufacturer of lumber products. Attacked with epilepsy, he was obliged to give up his business. The attacks came upon him most inopportunely. One time falling from a carriage, at another down stairs, and often in the street. Once he fell down a shaft in the mill, his injuries nearly proving fatal. Mr. Gallaher writes from Milwaukee, Feb. 16, '96.

There are none more miserable than epileptics. For 20 years I suffered with epileptic fits, having as high as five in one night. I tried any number of physicians, paying to me alone, a fee of $300.00 and have done nothing for years but search for something to help me, and have taken all the leading remedies, but received no benefit. A year ago my son, Chas. S. Gallaher, druggist at 191 Reed St., Milwaukee, gave me Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, and I tried it with gratifying results. Have had but two fits since I began taking it. I am better now in every way than I have been in 20 years.

Dr. Miles' Remedies are sold by druggists on a positive guarantee that the first bottle will benefit or price refunded. Book on the Heart and Nerves, free. Address, Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

A CANDID GAUBERIE.

How Some Women Would Converse if They Expressed Their Real Feelings for Each Other.

(Being an imaginary conversation between two persons of the softer sex at a period when the conventional insincerities of social intercourse shall have been cast aside and the truth and nothing but the truth be candidly and unabashedly spoken. Scene: In the drawing room of the visited one; an unwelcome visitor is announced.)

The Visitor—"How do you do? I don't in the least care how you are, but I suppose I must make use of the customary salutation."

The Visited—"I am sorry indeed to see you. It would be a perfect mockery to hope you are well, for in my life I never saw any one look quite so soiled as you do at this moment. Your complexion is the color of a mango, while the lines round your eyes put me in mind of Chapham Junction. And so absurdly overdressed! Where did you buy that polychromatic edifice that crowns your latest wig? Blue, green, pink, orange—and with that skin! You look like a practical joke."

The Visitor—"I really had hoped to find you 'not at home,' otherwise I should never have been so foolish as to call. I thought you always went to the Saturday 'Tops.' What could have induced you to remain indoors? But it's just like my luck."

The Visited—"I have a slight cold, so sent my stall to Lady Hauterive. I am perfectly aware that you are dying to know her, but can't, and that is why I mention her name."

The Visitor—"How provoking! And here, I suppose, I must stick for the next quarter of an hour."

The Visited—"Had I anticipated the infliction of a visit from you I should have made a point of going out."

The Visitor—"I never come into your drawing-room without being impressed by a sense of your pitiable ignorance and want of taste. You have contrived to crowd together in this room such a quantity of articles of every description that I always fancy I'm sitting in the midst of a rummage sale. You haven't got one really good piece of china in your whole collection. Your antique furniture is all modern and the only lot that looks genuinely old is—yourself."

The Visited—"I know that you consider yourself an authority on bric-a-brac, and you have certainly converted your house into a veritable museum of curiosities. That, of course, is easy enough when you can afford to bid for your things at Christie's. I can't. My husband is not a rich speculator, like yours—only a poor clerk in the foreign office, so I am obliged to pick up my odds and ends cheap, and I dare say I am very often taken in. After all, I don't see how it benefits you to possess all the artistic treasures you do, when you are obliged to give the right people to come and admire them."

The Visitor—"You always try to make me feel uncomfortable with your solid and distant airs of social superiority, but I must sit it out, I suppose, now I'm in it."

The Visited—"Why you ever come to see me I cannot imagine, considering that I so seldom go near you."

The Visitor—"I am thinking of writing and asking you to dinner. You would prefer to make yourself disagreeable, but I should not regret it. I have reflected on your presence and your name sounds well. I suppose you wouldn't come; you have refused me six times running."

The Visited—"And shall do so again. I dined with you once—that was quite sufficient. I don't mind coming to your concerts, for there I can hear the best singers for nothing and am not obliged to speak to anyone."

The Visitor—"But I've lately moved into one of the largest houses in one of the best squares; I've powdered my footmen, and my chef is first rate."

The Visited—"Which is more than your friends are. I positively decline to meet them. What's the good of a chef to you? Nobody worth knowing ever dines with you; your sauces, I consider, are absolutely thrown away. It's not your fault, I must admit. You have tried to cook yourself into society and signally failed. You're not quite rich enough—it wants thousands a day to do it nowadays."

The Visitor—"Your impertinence is really impayable (I speak French perfectly, while you hardly know one word; that is why I interlard my conversation with it in order to prove my conversational advantages over yourself). How truly unfortunate I was to find you at home! I merely wanted to poke in a card in order to show my new coachman—who lived with the Parisian minister—that my visiting list is not exclusively confined to stock-brokers and artists."

The Visited—"Shall I give you another cup of tea?"

The Visitor—"On no account; I never tasted such nasty wash in my life. It has made me feel perfectly ill. Cheap, I suppose?"

The Visited—"Very, but quite good enough for visitors like you. When I am alone, or with one or two intimate friends, I drink a much better tea. I shall have some of it made directly I get rid of you."

The Visitor—"Now, that on earth am I to say to you next? The only topic left to you is music, but musical people are proverbially lacking in general interest and intelligence, and you are no exception. Therefore, I cannot discuss with you science, literature or art—all of which subjects I have at my fingers' end, for I am a very well-read and well-informed woman. I find it helps me on wonderfully. 'People' again are taboo, for you won't know my friends and I don't know yours, although I would willingly give you one of my diamond stars if you would only invite me to some of your smart parties and give me a chance of meeting with you, you call the 'right' set. You have never even shown me to your husband, so I can't ask for him."

The Visited—"I wonder how much longer you are going to sit here and bore me to death? I can perfectly well see that you are at your wit's end and I am subject to discourtesy, but I am not going to help you by suggesting anything, as I have no desire to lengthen your visitation. How strange! I always understood you to be a clever woman, although such an outsider—I have noticed that outsiders usually are clever; and yet you are apparently struck dumb, without a single idea left in your head. I hope Maggie Hauterive won't come in and find you here. The concert is about to begin. How can I prevail upon you to move? I never saw such pertinacity as you possess for clinging to your seat. It's positively shocking. I wish the chair would break and upset you. I do believe you are really getting under way to depart. Oh, mercy—you're surely never going to begin to chatting again!"

The Visitor—"What dreadful weather we are having!"

The Visited—"Dreadful."

The Visitor—"Such a long continuance of rain."

The Visited—"Continuance of rain. The Visitor—"Never cease."

The Visitor—"And so cold for the time of year."

The Visited—"So cold . . . for the time of year."

The Visitor—"I fancy we shall have an early winter."

The Visited—"Oh, I can't stand this any longer. I'm off!"

FINANCE AND TRADE.

The Features of the Money and Stock Markets.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Money on call at 2 1/2% per cent; last loan 2 per cent; closed at 2 1/2% per cent. Prime mercantile paper 6 1/2 per cent. Sterling exchange firm, with actual business in bankers' bills at $1 85 1/2 for demand and $1 81 1/2 for sixty days. Posted rates $1 82 1/2 for 60 days and $1 86 1/2 for 90 days. Commercial bills $1 85. Bar silver 65c. Silver certificates 65 1/2 c.

The general impression in conservative circles to-day was that the reactionists have been defeated. Influence seemed to favor their position, including the lessened outside interest in the St. Paul earnings for the second week in November showing a decrease in gross of $214,000; the apprehension of renewed rate disturbances in the south, as a result of the failure of the Ryan syndicate to secure control of the seaboard air line and continued moderate account of their securities for foreign exchange, and the fact, however, that the sold-out bull failed to create more than a temporary diversion, owing to the stubborn attitude of holders and owners of stocks. The market opened active and lower with the high-priced specialties bearing the brunt of the attacks. Sugar was hammered in connection with reductions in the prices of the foreign and domestic grades of the product, and the market for unsatisfactory trade conditions. Manhattan gained in the absence of inside support. The market soon lapsed into dullness and some slight recoveries were noted due to supporting orders and covering by shorts. Around 1 o'clock an attack on Tennessee Coal forced that specialty down 1 1/2 per cent, and exerted a sympathetic depressing influence on other stocks. In the late dealings Metropolitan Traction jumped 5 per cent to 114. The general list also exhibited strength, particularly Manhattan and Sugar, which improved 1 1/2 and 1 1/4 per cent respectively. Pacific Mail failed to reflect the dividend declaration, the distribution of 1 per cent, the first in many years having evidently been discounted. The closing was strong at unimportant net changes.

Money bonds were dull and a shade lower in most instances. The sales were $1,255,000. Governments displayed a broadening tendency. The total sales of stocks to-day were 215,340 shares.

Evening Post's London financial cablegram: All the stock markets were lifeless and depressed to-day. Mines were flat. The special settlement in mining shares mentioned yesterday will be finished to-morrow. Two jobbers had to close their accounts to-day, but the matter has been arranged now so that probably no failure will be announced to-morrow.

The other depressing factor is the dearer money market. The market discount is 3 1/2 per cent, there is talk of a rise in the bank rate to-morrow, but no change is really probable. The reason for the rise in money is that London seems more likely to lose gold yet to many quarters with no sign of any influx.

The India council only sold ten Lakhs of drafts to-day. The Indian government is said to be wanting money and to be likely to issue a sterling loan before long.

The Paris bourse was dull, but closed better on the rise in Spanish stocks. The Berlin market was dull.

Breadstuffs and Provisions. CHICAGO—Wheat, opened weak to-day, but closed strong and in an advance of 1 1/2c.
