Text of the Act Passed by the Last Legislature.

AN OVERSIGHT IS APPARENT.

No Provision Made Requiring the Carrying of Lamps at Night-Pine of $30 for Riding Without an Alarm Bell-Penalty for Throwing Glass, Natls, Tacks, Etc., on the Streets.

Below is the text of the bicycle law passed at the last session of the legis-haure. It was introduced by Hon. T. M. Garvin, of this city, at the request of the League of American Wheelmen. To will be observed that there is no erovision requiring the use of lamps at night, although most of the cities and towns have such an ordinance. This may be a clerical error, as neither the author of the bill nor any legislator likely desired to abolish the use of lamps. It is suggested that the origi-nal intention was to insert in section one the word "lamp" after the words "suitable alarm bell," in regulating the bicycle after sunset. Following is the law in full:

Section 1. "Whoever, without the permit provided for in section three of this act, ridea in a street, square or park, in an incorporated city containing five thousand inhabitants or more, a bicycle at the ratis of speed exceedmarchine on a sidewalk, or rides such machine in the streets, squares or parks, of any city when the same is not provided with a suitable alarm bed ainpited to use by the rider, or after sunser rides the same in any highway, square or park, whether without or within the limits of the city, when such machine is not provided with such suitable alarm bed, shall be punished by the not exceeding twenty dollars for each offense, and he shall be further liable for all damages occasioned to any person by such lawful act."

Section 2. The term "sidewalk," as used in this act, shall mean any sidewalk laid out and maintained as such by a city or town for the use of pederitains. It shall not include cross walks nor shall it include footpaths on portions of public highways outside of the hickly settled parts of cities and towns, which art worn only by travel and not improved by such cities or towns or by abutters. The term "blocycle" as used in this act, shall be deemed to include all vehicles propelled by the person riding the same, by and for a fown or city having power to make regulations relative to such spaces, and this set shall not in any way abridge the powers of such commissioners, board or department.

Section 2. The mayor or council, of a city or town may in his or its discretion, upon any special parts department of a town or city having power or make regulations relative to such spaces, and this set shall not in any way abridge the powers of such commissioners, board or department.

Section 3. The mayor or council, of a city or town may labo, under such machines, during a specified time, upon specified portions of the council of a city or town may also, under such conditions as they deem proper, permit the use of velocipedes or other similar machines by children on any sidewa

ition 8. No person except as aution 8. No person except as autionated by ordinance, order, regulations or permit of the council of city or town within, or the county without such city or town, and without such city or town, and court without such city or town, and for some public purpose or use, shall drop, place or throw and suffer to remain or cause to be dropped, placed or thrown and suffer to remain upon any highway, coad, street, alley, lane.square or other public place, any glass, scrap fron, nails, tacks, wire, paper or offensive matter of any kind.

Section 7, Whosoever violates any provision of this act shall be liable to a penalty of not more than twenty dollars for each and every offense.

Section 8, This act shall take effect ninety days after its passage.

An Interesting Conversation

From Answers: Sir A. Sullivan went to see Rubinstein at his hotel in London. The Russian composer asked him to step out on the balcony and smoke a

HOW MUCH WAS HE OUT !

A Counterfett Dollar that Droven Bank Almost to tusanity.

Chicago Record: Sometimes mathematics fall utterly of helping one to arrive at a conclusion in which figures and calculations have a part. There is a young man employed in a Chicago bank who can tell you off-hand what will be the interest-earning ability of a second mortgage on a piece of prop-ecty which has been twice sold for special taxes, and which is tled up in litigation concerning minor heirs; and with his left hand tied behind him he can promptly discover the profits aris-ing out of the disposal of a promissory call promptly discover the profits arising out of the disposal of a promissory note for which a carload of grindstones were given in exchange, before the grindstones were given in exchange, before the grindstone man went into the hands of a receiver; but he cannot for the life of him tell how much he is out on that counterteit dollar.

The dollar came to him in the ordinary course of business, and he, being engrossed at the time in considering whether he would have wood or steel handle-hars put on, accepted it as sound money, and was later called upout to make good. Then the coin lay around on the desk for two or three months, being used as a paper-weight, a souvenir and a horrible example. It began to get blue and moldy looking, and the goddess of liberty assumed an unhealthy cast of countenance. The young man finally sickened of its mourful presence and determined to add it to the world's circulation. He scorned to do anything dishonest, and so one day he spoke to a street-car conductor about the matter.

"I'm going to give you a bum dollar," he said, speculatively, wondering how "I'll only give you forty cents change. The preliminary negotiations being thus successfully passed over, the passenger handed in his pewer dollar and received his forty cents and his transfer slip.

Two weeks afterward, returning in a talk to the girl.

The next morning he found among his other pocket contents a familiar face. It was the face of the spoiled soudcess of liberty, her complexion having been rubbed up a bit with some kind of menti pollsh flut she was the same old goddess. Then the bank clerk sat down and tried to discover just where he stood in the matter of profit and loss taking the coin from the where he stood in the matter of profit and loss taking the coin from the start. At first he thought he was out 31 %. Then he decided that it was fifty-five cents, then he called in help, and for two hours that morning work was suspended in the bank so that his fellow-employes might calculate the thing for him. After a time the cashier was told of it, and, being a man of large financial affairs, he sneered at the sheet of figures which showed a loss of $1.16, and said he would run it over in his mad and tell which showed a loss of $1.10, and said he would run it over in his mnd and tell the result in ten seconds. Half an hour afterward the cashier and the vice president closed their desks and went out walking in the open air to ease the baffling brain fas which had come upout them. That afternoon the cashier ridd the young clerk he would have to discharge him. His dollar problem had ro disconcerted and disorganized affairs in the bank that none of the employes or officials was fit for duty, and his presence would be a constant reviver of that vexatious puzzle.

The next day the cashier sent a messenger after the clerk and summoned him back to his desk. Said he had worried all night over that matter and had had no sleep and would like to have another statement of the affair, with such additional details concerning the stature and weight of the conductor as the clerk could give. He ought to reduce the clerk's wages, he said, and thought he would. But the clerk represented that such action would inject another arithmetical proposition into the question, and they would have to figure the reduction of salary into the net loss on the dollar. The cashier sighed and said that was so and perhaps they would better let it go. But every little while during the day he would wander over to the clerk's desk, armed with a new sheet of figures, and ask some other questions and go away, looking gloomy.

They have not yet settled the matter to their satisfaction, but it has been set aside for the time. The board of directors, noting the cashier's distrait and absent-minded manner, and, fearing it would be observed by the depositors, and might cause a rush on the bank, insisted that he take a vacation for three months and give the matter of the bogus dollar and its profit and loss to the young clerk time to sink into a sort of oblivion.

So Prophesies Crawtord's "Mr. Isaacs."
Queen to Outlive Wales.

Marion Crawford's "Mr, Isaacs" is a character quite as interesting in life as in fiction. His real name is Alexander Jacobs, and he is a rich jeweler in Sinda, India, and somewhat avaricious, by reputation at least, though his trial for stealing deposit money from the Nizam of Hyderabad, five years ago, resuited in his acquittal. The diamond for which this deposit money was the for which this deposit money was the first payment has been stolen fom the Nizam recently. Nobody knows how a paste diamond came to be in the place of the magnificent "Imperial" gem bought of Mr. Jacobs.

Jacobs is man of great amart-Mr. Jacobs is man of great smartness. He is not only a clever merchant, but a prophet. So many of his predictions have come true that many eminent people in India believe in his prophetic gift. He has lately delivered himself of three prophecies—(1) that Queen Victoria will live until 1911: (2) that the Prince of Wales never will be king, because he will die in 1907; (3) that in August, 1898, Sir William Harcourt will become prime minister. In the course of business with an English client, resident in your city, I discovered among some old papers a curious document, which was written in the

Upon my return to England I expect to have an opportunity to examine some similar documents by the same author and of learning something of his identity and history. I will be giad to acquaint you with any particulars worth the knowing that may come to my knowledge.

At first flush the paper presented a rather formidable appearance. What I took to be cipher was presented to me in the following form:

After applying the usual keys in vain it occured to me that the letters might be transposed. Acting upon this idea. I soon had my puzzle in this form:

Ctz mpabl tefrtl gniskwinss veyr magram. Mdyt rale bdzefr tebeyr skrt kptren skizn fmeyr frise. Cyr dsgz wzen dfinsegnist brithins nimt kwatisk wchyrepra. Strt intefe rithenedit elkebrdi at! Hehw brachback predegovent lieyend. Gdespdey rkliseld kundem tea.

The rest was simple, and the following translation was evolved without much difficulty:

It is impossible to foretell the consequences of your indiscretion. The immediate result blds fair to be your secret capture and exclusion from your friends. Your disguise was no defense against Bernham's intimate acquaintance with your person. Start to-night for the north and do not slack bridle until—is in sight. Rest but long enough to procure food at some cottage—ride east on the pike five miles and await a friend. He had started across the country an hour since. Shun post houses; make across fields: speak to none. He who beats this will provide you with all you need. God speed you, reckless lad! Commend me to A.

In these days of phonography the translation is quite easy, but at the time the dispatch was written it might well have served the purpose of a cipher message. It will be noticed that the letter "c" is not used in the composition of words, but to separate some and to disquise others whose form appeared to be too transparent. The word "the" is omitted entirely. The letter "z" is put to a somewhat elastic use, as in "disguise" and "seclusion."

John It possibly arose from a natural association of ideas, as t remarks, "Sinjun," as it is pro-Hazlett remarks. "Sinjun." as it is pro-nounced, would readily suggest "singe 'um," and so "burn 'em." I find this old document intensely interesting from the startling fact that here we have pho-nography in practice nearly a century before Pitman's birth, and in the vowel points referred to before the nucleus of his short hand system. Truly there is nothing new under the sun. After a careful examination of the remainder of these curious phonetic documents I hope to persuade my client to deposit them in some museum, where they will be pre-served, as, to the best of my knowledge, they are the earliest specimens of soun writing.

You can't expect, dear, that what will care one man is a remedy for all, but this is how I dealt with Robert Despite all protests he had been staying out very late, but one night came home before 12. I kept the door double-locked and bolted and always let him in. This night I asked him who was there and he answered brusquely enough. "You're mistaken, I replied. When the wzgon was there and quite a crowd had collected, he came up as though he had been pushed for time, eagerly inquired wha was the matter and congratulated me on getting rid of the untimely caller. Even after we were in the house he had the audacity to keep up the fiction of a strange man at he door, but he had the grace to say that his business was so arranged that he would not be detained at night sny more and would be home to pro! ct me. It was a brazen pretense he hade, but he has kept his word."

BE AGREEABLE.

That Is all Good Society will Ask of You.

"Of course I know that I am poor," said a very popular although an impecunious society woman, relates the New York Tribune, "but, some way or ther, I cannot feel poor,"

That is the reason you are such a success," commented her friend, "Mrs. Multi-millions said the other day that you were the only woman she knew who did not bore her about your troubles, and that was the reason she liked you and that was the reason she liked you did, not bore her about your fromers, and that was the reason she liked you so much."

Those who are well off, as a rule, make their straightened circumstances too obvious and people who have lost money retire from the world when there is really no reason to do so. They take a back seat, and of course are not urged to come forward; but if they had remained in the front no one would have questioned their right to be there. It is not necessary to spend much or entertain in order to maintain a position once you have acquired it. All you have to do is to be agreeable and not let society see that you are worried. Society is goodnatured if you do not exact sympathy and is disposed to be friendly to its members who have lost their money if they are plucky and cheerful about it and continue to go about.

Of course if people are morbid and avoid their former associates the latter cannot be expected to hunt them up; but if they lose their friends it is, in nine cases out of ten, more the fault of the people themselves than of their former associates. Vanity Fair has no time to look after those who fall by the wayade, but people make a mistake in thinking she oatracises her citizens simply because they are poor. It is the concomitants of poverty that she objects to—the shabbiness, the low spirits, and, above all, the pride which apea humility, which is more boring than anything else.
