Business Men Note This.

Business men who believe in advertising will get the best returns by placing their inducements to buyers in the newspaper that has an abiding faith in the signs of good times that are multiplying in the country and publishes them. The reader of such a newspaper is in a better frame of mind to read the advertising columns and seek out the advertiser. The man who, on opening his newspaper, finds a calamity howling staring him in the face, or a pessimistic snarl at the indications of returning prosperity and all the hopeful signs sent out by the trade and commercial agencies, is in no mood to feel encouraged to read mercantile advertisements. He feels more like locking up his spare change (in the fear that the country is going to the demitition how-wows) instead of giving it to his wife to make needed purchases.

The Falsifiers and the Administration.

There have been few presidential administrations that have been the victims of the assaults of the professional liar to a greater extent than that of President McKinley, but it is a pleasure to note that events come fast upon each other which expose the lies and serve to bring out in strong relief the fact that the President is honestly carrying out the pledges of his party. One of the most wicked of all these falsehoods was that the President violated a pledge to the Gold Democrats in giving his support to a protective tariff measure. This story has been repeated over and over again in spite of the fact that not only was the party platform pledged to restore the protective system, but Mr. McKinley himself, in every one of the many speeches he made during the campaign, promised it and made protection one of the two leading issues. Nobody doubted for a moment McKinley's sincerity and the Gold Democrats exacted from him no promise whatever. Their course was entirely voluntary and was prompted by their hatred of Bryanism and all that it meant. Though they were not protectionists, regarding protection as an unwise policy, they were willing to accept it if its triumph meant the defeat of dishonest money and the other heresies advocated by the Populist wing of their own party.

Notwithstanding these facts which all the country knows so well, the falsehood about a broken pledge is still in circulation. But this is not all. It would be impossible to repeat all the false statements that have been made by the Popocratic press regarding the administration's policies since the inauguration, each of which has in turn been proven false by subsequent events. The Brooklyn Eagle is one of the Democratic free trade papers that are honest and fair in their treatment of the Republican President. It is totally disgusted with the practice of some of its contemporaries in arguing with falsehood and blackguarding the President, as witness the following editorial, which we quote almost entire, and commend to our friends of the Popocratic party who are engaged in the detestable business of trying to discredit and misrepresent an honest administration:

The President has signed the Dingley tariff law. Anyone is at liberty to say his own mind whether that is a good or bad law. None is truthfully authorized to say that he does not represent that kind of man. The President was elected to bring about. Opinions on the law can differ. The question of its conformity to the pledges of the President is one of fact. Ignorance may not know that fact. Wickedness may lie about it. Neither is a qualification for respectable journalism. Take two other instances: The President has sent in a currency reform message. He has not overthrown his predecessor's civil service reform classifications. The declaration that he would not send in the message and that he would not overthrow the classifications has been abundantly made. What is the country to think of such statements? It knows that the President has been injured and insulted by them. It knows that he has been misrepresented by them. But what of the journalism which has made those statements? Has it been honored? Not unless we regard the President as an honor. And the press as a whole has been hurt to a degree by this wrongdoing of some of it. The people are apt to confound the editor with the printer, or at least in this time of wickedness intelligent readers may also confound him. But the general mass of folk discredit journalism as a pursuit when a few printers, or a few editors, are guilty of flagrant violations of the truth out of their desire to make evil estimate pass current. Will another case is in point? Weeks ago a report was sent that the President intended to rescind the order of Mr. Cleveland which made most consular fees payable into the treasury and which reduced the bulk of them, whereby commerce was freed from some burdens and consuls were no longer presented with fortunes. The report was instantly adopted as true by the papers which wished it to be true. They united in saying that the order was meant to repay politicians in office for party service, and especially to enrich the counsils of the President, who had been made consul general to London. What are the facts? Some further regulation of the consular fee system is intended in accordance with the suggestion of one of President Cleveland's officials, whom he sent on a tour of inspection into many countries to examine into the subject. The effect of this disingenuousness on the authors of the comprehensive calumny was what? They declared that the discussion of their invention prevented it from being carried into effect!

These are but two or three instances wherein the detractors of the President have been confounded. The lies, and we can call them by no milder term, emanated from a class of journals which are a disgrace to the country. The character and the reputation of no public official is safe from their assaults. But they are not alone to blame. There are other guilty ones. The New York Press, in commenting on this subject says: It is true that the "broken tariff pledge" falsehood was uttered over and over again by the now declining yellow journals. But it was as frequently and maliciously circulated by those Democratic papers which shudder when they are mentioned as the yellow journals. No papers, for example, were more industrious in the spreading of this utterly indefensible lie than the New York Post, the New York Times and the New York Herald. And more than that, it was constantly mouthed by William C. Whitney, Mr. Cleveland's secretary of the navy in his first administration. Worse yet, it came often from the lips of Professor Wilson, author of the law which the Republican party and President McKinley were pledged to repeal, and a member of Mr. Cleveland's second cabinet.

When such things are true, what defense is there against the slander of yellow journals and politicians of high standing who should be in better business? None save Time, which brings with it vindications and events that prove the falsehoods—and happily Time is doing that very thing, as pointed out by the honest Brooklyn Democratic paper above quoted.

Free Speech in West Virginia.

The appeal of the labor leaders to Governor Atkinson to grant them the right to agitate the strike movement in this state was founded upon a wrong impression that the governor would have a right to set aside the judicial authorities of the state. The fact is, however, as the governor stated, that he is only one of the three co-ordinate branches of the government, and can only execute the law as he finds it, or as it is construed by the courts. It does not follow that the governor cannot guarantee to every man the right of free speech so long as he keeps within the law and does not incite riot or other lawlessness. Nor does an injunction granted by a court for the purpose of protecting property from possible destruction, or a mine company's employees from being interfered with in their work, contemplate the restriction of the legitimate personal rights of any one. The Intelligence knows that Judge Mason, whose injunction in the case of two of the Fairmont mines is complained of as being too sweeping, would be the last man to abridge the rights of any man under the law. We do not believe that his intention was to have so sweeping a construction placed upon his injunction in some of his critics have done.

West Virginia is a free state; her people are a free people and her laws guarantee that freedom. Men upon peaceful missions in behalf of humanity will not find their rights abridged within her borders. Her governor and her courts will see to that. But threats of violence, and intimidation, whether from the rostrum or in private, will not be tolerated. This the labor leaders who are about to renew their campaign in West Virginia thoroughly appreciate. In all their public utterances they have counseled only peaceful methods and moral suasion. If there is any violence, any intimidation, any unlawful assemblages the purpose of this peaceful mission into West Virginia will be defeated, and it is for this reason that the labor leaders, who have enlisted themselves in the cause of the poorly paid miners of other states, are promising our chief executive and the courts and the public that their endeavor will be to avoid these things. Upon a strict adherence to this promise depends the success of the strike. Any departure from it will mean failure.

Judge Jackson's Civil Service Decision.

Under the decision rendered by Judge Jackson, of the United States court, at Parkersburg, Wednesday, United States Marshal Thompson must retain in office the three Democratic office deputies appointed by the Democratic administration. From a political standpoint this is pretty hard and will be a disappointment to the Republicans whom Marshal Thompson had appointed to fill the places. Judge Jackson construes the law to prohibit the dismissal of the deputies for purely political reasons, and he is clearly right. The civil service law, which covers the office deputies alone, and not the field deputies, who are subject to removal at the pleasure of the marshal, is very explicit and of course cannot be violated. The rule, it seems from Judge Jackson's decision, which gives the three office deputies the protection of the civil service law, cannot be suspended by the Chief Executive, nor by any other authority, even if he had a mind to do it, for the reason that the deputies are so placed by an act of Congress, which is a statute law, and not, as some may suppose, by an executive order, as is the usual case. So it seems, that if the Democratic office deputies have no mind to resign on the ground that they are not desirous of holding office under an administration with which they are not in political harmony, they must be permitted to keep the office seats warm and draw the salaries that three good, hard-working Republicans had expected to draw. The only patronage, therefore, at the disposal of Marshal Thompson, at present, is the appointment of field deputies. If does not seem just that a public officer, who is held responsible under a heavy bond for the conduct of his office and the acts of his subordinates, cannot have the privilege of selecting as his personal staff men of his own choice, and who should be, if not politically, certainly in every other respect in accord with him and his policies and methods.

Though it is not so in this case, so far as the Intelligence is aware, the Democratic deputies being gentlemen of character and ability, a case might arise, and doubtless has arisen somewhere in the country, where a marshal would be compelled to assume the responsibilities of office with a personal staff selected by a predecessor, every man of whom may be personally offensive to him. The merit system is all right, but there are instances where it may work injustice, and this seems to be one of them. Judge Jackson's decision has settled the matter, however, and it is undoubtedly founded upon a strict and correct interpretation of the law.

Good News for the Miners.

The uniformity agreement adopted by the mine operators of the Pittsburgh district, while it does not have much to do with the settlement of the coal diggers' strike, is a very long step in the direction of a betterment of the miners' condition, and it is hoped that the required number of signatures to the agreement will be secured. It removes many of the grievances the miners are groaning under. The company store will be abolished and the men will be paid in cash; fair weighing and fair screening are guaranteed.

These are the grievances that have brought the miners in that and some other mining districts to a condition bordering on slavery, and with them removed it will be much easier to arrange a wage schedule. The main difficulty in the way of the latter negotiations is the fact that the contracts for coal have been taken at prices based on the low wages that have prevailed, and the operators will have to fill them at that price or lay themselves liable to bankruptcy in some instances. However, the settlement, one way or another, is bound to come, and with the signs of returning reason exhibited by the operators in the Pittsburgh region there is warrant for the belief that it is not far off.

Consul Taney can now come home. An Ohio Republican succeeds him. Mr. Taney will be warmly welcomed by his old friends here, who were pleased at the deserved honor conferred upon him by President Cleveland, and whose only regret was that it involved a long absence from home.

The New York Times, Democratic free trade paper, has the following editorial declaration: "There is nothing in sight but good times and plenty of business." If all of our Democratic contemporaries were so frank there would be less pessimism in the country.

Gorman has resumed business at the old stand as the Democratic boss in Maryland. Now, the Baltimore Sun will proceed to have some fun.

CURRENT COMMENT.

Secretary Sherman should be proud of these rumors that he is about to resign. No man can feel that he is holding the job of secretary of state down in a thoroughly professional manner until these rumors begin to be circulated about him.—Chicago Record.

Mr. McKinley's reappointment of Terence V. Powderly as commissioner of immigration in spite of the senate's failure to confirm his nomination indicates that the President is not to be influenced by the Debs-Sovereigns-Algeed attack upon this once distinguished labor leader. That is well enough. Mr. Powderly's offense was that he, like Peter Arthur, took the gold standard side of the controversy in the last campaign, while the Debses and the Sovereigns demanded that workmen should be paid in fifty-cent dollars.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Throttle Pulled Wide Open.

New York Times (Ind. Dem.) In vain the spyglass of the shallow pessimist sweeps the financial horizon in quest of a portent of disaster. Everywhere good auguries swim into his ken. There are no bad signs.

The sunburst from the distant Klondike radiates a golden glory that deepens as it traverses our immense fields of yellow wheat. The rolling wheel and the laden car give a pleasing and unwonted aspect to returns and of railroad earnings. Money is flowing into the pockets of the people, who put it out to pay debts and make purchases long deferred by hard times.

There is new courage and plenty of cash. A promoter might go into a Wall street business office with a prospectus without being eyed.

The benignant planets of the business heavens are in conjunction and foretell prosperity. By a unanimous vote word of confidence has been exhaled from the country. In their rejoicing that the tariff bill is settled and out of the way the people ignore the faults of the measure. The President has proposed a plan for taking up the problem of the currency. Our burden of sorrows has been lifted, the gloom that possessed our minds is dispelled.

There is nothing in sight but good times and plenty of business.
