WHEELING, JANUARY 12, 1898.

The Triumph of a Principle.
On the formal ballot in the separate houses of the Ohio legislature Senator Hanna received sufficient votes to elect him as his own successor on joint ballot, the total number received being 73, exactly enough for that purpose. There is no reason for believing that Mr. Hanna will lose any of these votes before the joint ballot is taken, and it is now regarded as certain that the credit and honor of the Republicans of Ohio, that traitors in the camp sought to bring reproach upon, will be vindicated. It is more probable that Mr. Hanna will gain votes on the joint ballot than that he will lose any.
The public is so familiar with all the circumstances of the remarkable contest that it is unnecessary to review them here. The conspiracy that formed immediately after the November election, in which those who violated the faith that their constituents had reposed in them entered into a disgraceful deal with the enemies of the Republican party, a corrupt crowd of Popocratic politicians, has already received a ringing rebuke from the betrayed and outraged Republicans of the state, and it was doubtless the spontaneous uprising in every quarter of the state in protest against this treachery that saved the disgraceful compact from being carried out. The Republicans and friends of sound currency, throughout the country, will rejoice that the conspiracy, which involved so much that is important to the Nation, and which would tighten the dishonest money advocates' grip in the senate, has so far failed, and that the conspirators who have sought to defeat the will of the Republican party of Ohio are put to rout.
The personality of Mr. Hanna, the chosen candidate of the party for the position of United States senator, was lost sight of in the contest for the vindication of a broad principle involving party integrity, and the proper representation on national issues of the majority of the people of Ohio, and it is fortunate for the state which gave to the country its President, elected upon a platform declaring for the financial honor and credit of the Nation, that not only has the principle so far triumphed, but that the shaft which was aimed at the Republican administration by vindictive enemies within the ranks has so far fallen short of its mark.
The Republicans of Ohio are entitled to congratulations that there are apparently enough men in the legislature correctly representing them to prevent the commission of a political crime which would bring upon them the humiliation that had been prepared for them by the most unwholy and disgraceful alliance that the history of party politics in this country has ever witnessed. Mr. Hanna, personally is entitled to congratulations that, in spite of the vilification and slanders of partisan enemies and disappointed leaders in his own party, his confidence in the faithfulness of the majority of the Republicans has not been misplaced.
If the lines formed in the balloting by the separate houses holds until the joint ballot is taken, Mr. Hanna will be his own successor, and it will be many a year before such an attempt to defeat the will of the voters will be again witnessed in the state of Ohio.
A Striking Object Lesson.
The business men of Kansas are distributing throughout the country a circular containing a recapitulation of the report of the secretary of the state board of agriculture, which shows the remarkably prosperous condition of the state this year. It tells an eloquent story of the wholesome state of affairs existing at present in Kansas, and is in marked contrast with the conditions of the years previous. It fully explains why the calamity howl has ceased among Kansas farmers.
The circular contains an itemized statement of the quantities and values of the agricultural products of 1897, and shows the amount of mortgage indebtedness which has been cancelled since prosperity set in. This showing carries with it a strong evidence of the fallacy of the arguments that were made a little more than a year since to sustain the Populistic school of politicians that seemed to thrive better in Kansas than in any other state.
The showing made by the report is so notable that we quote the summary as follows:
Values of Products.
Winter and spring wheat.....$3,483,250
Corn.....28,553,293
Oats.....5,828,192
Rye.....650,521
Barley.....262,770
Buckwheat.....7,872
Flax and sweet potatoes.....46,601
Cattle and hogs.....869,106
Pork.....17,225
Cotton.....4,280
Hemp.....17,225
Broom-corn.....462,600

Mill and Hungarian.....1,972,225
Sorghum, for syrup.....418,558
Sorghum, for meal.....6,182,631
Tame grasses.....2,043,523
Prairie grass.....4,006,684
Wool clip.....91,495
Cheese, butter and milk.....2,559,757
Poultry and eggs sold.....3,550,977
Animals slaughtered or sold for slaughter.....57,741,618
Horticultural and garden products and wine.....1,429,890
Honey, beeswax and wood.....208,403
Total value of products.....$136,325,258
Total value of live stock.....94,674,885
Grand total.....$230,410,143
This enormous total of values embraces twenty-four varieties of agricultural products and five kinds of live stock, the greatest quantities of products being the crops of wheat, 51,626,604 bushels; corn, 152,140,993 bushels; rye, 23,431,263 bushels; Irish and sweet potatoes, 5,342,189 bushels; cotton, 1,198,882 pounds; broom corn, 10,418,189 pounds; wool clip, 702,161 pounds. The remainder of the products were in smaller quantities, making up the total values as shown in the table.
It will be remembered that in the arguments that were adduced from the conditions in Kansas by the calamity silversites great stress was laid upon the alleged fact that the state was mortgage ridden, and that the farmers were groaning under a mountain of debt, for which the gold standard was held responsible, while the "money power" was held up as the vampire that was sucking the life-blood from the agricultural interests of the state. Free silver, it was held by Mr. Bryan, of Nebraska, and the Populistic statesmen who were the principal forces of Kansas when other crops were scant, was the only remedy that would cure the ills. Nature and Nature's law of supply and demand had nothing to do with it. The situation was wholly due to the wicked gold standard and a lack of cheap money. When the sound money men declared that there was plenty of money, and all that was needed was bountiful crops and a demand in the market for them to bring the money into the agricultural regions of the west, good prices for products and prosperity for the farmer, the claim was sneered at, and even to this day Mr. Bryan is setting up the absurd claim that the agricultural communities are no better off than they were eighteen months ago.
In Kansas alone the enormous value of the crops, and the great demand for them at good prices, give the lie to these calamity wails, and every claim made by the sound money advocates has been verified by the fact that there is no lack of money among the farmers, due to the demand for their products and their receipt of good one hundred cent dollars for them, while silver's price is far behind in the race with the price of wheat. The deposits in the banks have been largely increased, and the report of the state bank commissioner of Kansas, which is incorporated in the circular referred to, shows that the indebtedness cancelled has been $50,000,000, of which $25,000,000 represent mortgages lifted and $5,000,000 represent notes in bank that have been paid.
What is true of the state of Kansas is true of the other great agricultural states of the west, where the cheap money demagogues found the richest field for the propagation of their theories during the hard times, and where the natural laws of trade have demonstrated the utter absurdity of the claim that an absence of cheap money was the cause of the ills that were complained of. The flow of money into the west as the result of the operation of these laws has been sufficient answer to the demagogues, while the farmers have been made to see how near they came to becoming the victims of too much faith in the demagogic arguments of financial quacks.
In view of the grand total of $230,410,143, which represents the value of the crops and farm animals at the end of the year 1897 in this one state; in the handsome bank balances, and the payment of $30,000,000 of indebtedness, all in one hundred cent dollars, good the world over, the people of Kansas have time to reflect upon how much worse off they would have been if the dangerous and absurd financial arguments of the financial theorists had prevailed.
General Manager Burt, of the Ohio River railroad, says that West Virginia is getting what she voted for, and points to the fact that the railroads in the state are rushed with business as evidence of the truth of his remark. Mr. Burt is right, and it is such testimony as this that counts against the calamity agitation which Mr. Bryan is vainly striving to revive since his return from Mexico. Mr. Bryan should make a tour of his own country, and learn how far behind date he is.
Judging from the lively interest that has been excited among the Democratic papers in the state over the announcement by Congressman Dayton that he will stand for a renomination this year, and the efforts being made by them to convince their readers that the Second district representative hasn't a ghost of a show, it is apparent that the Democratic editors do not regard Mr. Dayton as being any more of a "joke" than he was in 1894 and 1896.
Mrs. Mack gets fifteen years in the penitentiary, which is little enough, and her partner in crime is expressing regret that he was granted a stay of the death sentence, in his own case, saying that he wants to die without delay. The indifference exhibited by this precious pair as to their fate raises a doubt as to whether or not the penalties inflicted upon them are really to be regarded as punishments.
A South Carolina colored farmer became dissatisfied with the lease of the farm he was cultivating, and moved away, thus breaking his contract. A mob of neighbors followed him and strung him up. That was carrying the lynching fever to an extreme. If there is justice in South Carolina every member of the mob will be prosecuted for murder.
It is not pleasant for Americans to reflect that the number of lynchings in this country during the year just closed was 153. That was just 123 too many.
The tin plate product of American mills increased forty-five per cent last year. Thus has an industry which some gentlemen were predicting a few years ago could never exist in America grown in a single year, and that year marking the ascendancy again to power of the party that had confidence enough in the ability of the country to make the article to encourage the industry by favorable legislation.

And where was Mr. Kurtz in the shuffle? What about the guarantee to deliver the goods that he gave Allen O. Myers?

The Indiana Farmer.
One refreshing fact in Indiana is that the farmers throughout the entire state are flourishing. They are getting better prices for wheat, corn, hogs, cattle and sheep. Money is easier. They are happy, also, because they have a Republican governor who has reduced their taxes over a quarter of a million dollars. The divine alibi has struck one Indiana farmer under the influence of dollar wheat and prosperity, and he has poured forth his soul in the following song, after the style of James Whitcomb Riley, the Hoosier poet:
I.
When the wheat is in the granary
And the prices reach the sky,
And the chickens flyin' high;
And the hogs are kickin' high,
For the farmers' views and votes,
And the barn is full of timothy,
And the bins are full of oats,
Oh! it's then that the farmer
Is a-feelin' at his best.
With the risin' sun to greet him
For a night of glorious rest,
And the babies caper round him
And the cats are kickin' high,
When the wheat is in the granary
And the prices reach the sky.
II.
There's something kind o' hearty-like
About the sky and field,
With the stubble there a-laughing
At a thirty-bushel yield,
With the happy birds a singin',
And the cattle in a doze,
And the hired man a-comin' round
To show his new store clothes.
A feller feels contented
And at peace with all the world,
With the golden flag of plenty
Like a blessing is unfurled.
Oh, I tell you, Nex's happy,
And the cash are flyin' high,
With the gran-a-ry a-bustin'
And the prices in the sky!

Another "Crime of '73."
It was a saddened Popocrat,
Whose brow was wreathed in woe,
And when he heard the tidings read,
His form bent from the blow.
"And Hanna's votes that number are?"
He muttered mournfully.
"But history will repeat itself—
It's one more 'crime of '73.'"

HON. JOHN W. MASON'S PLAN
For the Selection of United States Senators—A Correspondent's Suggestions.
SIR:—I see in the Saturday edition of the Intelligencer a communication from the Hon. John W. Mason in regard to the method of choosing a candidate for the United States senate to succeed Senator Faulkner. A part of the plan might be feasible, a convention of the peoples' representatives, but not called by the state committee. I am opposed to handicapping the committee in any sense with their work, as I think it would have a tendency to, should they have any part in this call. Why not have the various candidates announce themselves for the position so that the public may know who they are, as well as a chosen few. Every man qualified for the position has that divine right to enter the free-for-all race. One part of Mr. Mason's views I am heartily in accord with, that the masses of the people must be consulted to win. It is only by this method that the issue of power now attained by the Republicans can be prolonged.

IN WEST VIRGINIA
Business is Thriving—The Good Results of McKinley's Election.
A New York special to the Pittsburgh Dispatch of yesterday says: "Colonel R. A. Burt, of West Virginia, is one of the leading railroad men of his state. Besides being the general manager of the Ohio River railroad system, he is vice president of two smaller roads, and now is building a new line, which will run from New Martinsville and Clarksburg to the center of the state. Colonel Burt was one of the West Virginia Sound Money Democrats, who voted and worked for the election of McKinley.
"We are now benefiting from the result of that election," he said to a Dispatch reporter. "Conditions never have been so good in West Virginia as they now are. Everyone has money, and the railroads cannot haul all of the freight offered to them. There is only one difficulty, and that is the famine in freight cars. We cannot get them fast enough. The Ohio River Railroad system is to West Virginia what the New York Central and Hudson River railroad is to New York state, and every bit of the rolling stock that can be put to that purpose is being used for hauling freight.
"A little over a year ago the people of West Virginia were poor. They were in debt all around. Now everyone seems to have money and the men who were borrowers a year or so ago are now depositors in the banks. That was what we voted for in November, 1896."

— JOHN DUNN'S SONS, AGENTS, NEW YORK.

Many Think!
When it was said to the woman: "Is sorrow shalt thou bring forth children," that a perpetual joy was pronounced, but the thrill of joy felt by every Mother when she sleeps to her heart her babe proves the contrary. True, dangers lurk in the pathway of the Expectant Mother and should be avoided.
"Mother's Friend"
So prepares the system for the changes taking place that the final hour is robbed of all danger and pain. Its use insures safety to the life of both Mother and child, and makes childbirth easy and recovery more rapid.
Sent by Mail, on receipt of price, $1.00 PER BOTTLE. Book, "To Expectant Mothers," mailed free, containing valuable information and voluntary testimonials.
