SCOTT'S FRIENDS

In his Home Town Pleased Over his Nomination for the UNITED STATES SENATORSHIP.

Many Congratulatory Telegrams Were Sent to him from this City Yesterday—A Sketch of the Wheeling Business Man who will Succeed Faulkner in the Senate—Mr. George Wise Spoken of for Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

When the public learned yesterday morning that a Wheeling man in the person of Hon. N. B. Scott had been named as the Republican caucus nominee for United States senator, many expressions of satisfaction were heard, and a number of congratulatory telegrams were being sent to the local parties were soon speeding over the wires to Mr. Scott at Charleston. Mr. Scott's services as national committee man and in other capacities met with a ready recognition, and it was generally admitted that he had earned the high office to which the Republicans are now pledged to elevate him.

Governor Whitman, in his book, "Prominent Men of West Virginia," wrote the following sketch of Mr. Scott: Hon. N. B. Scott was born in Guernsey county, in December 18, 1845. At the age of eleven he entered a country store as assistant to the proprietor and regular clerk. During the winter he attended the public schools of the county. His father was 25 years, with his board, clothing and washing "thrown in." He remained in this employment until 1859, when, at the age of sixteen, he left Wheeling, and there secured passage on a steamboat for Leavenworth, Kansas. Arriving at his destination he was promptly employed to drive an ox team across the prairie to the point where the new stands, arriving May 8, 1859. At that time there were only a few houses there. He located a lot, but rather than do the required $2,500 gave up. That same year he sold his $400,000. Returning to the states he apprenticed himself to learn the trade of a tanner and currier. He labored earnestly at the business until the breaking out of the war in 1861, when he enlisted in the Union army. His father objected to his going as a soldier, and he was required to return home. In September, 1861, he volunteered under General Kirby Smith, where, under the destruction of Cincinnati, Governor David Tod called on the "squirrel hunters" of Ohio to turn out and defend the borders of the state. Responding to this call, young Scott shouldered his musket and was found among those on their way to the intrenchments in the rear of Covington, Ky. He remained in the service until discharged from this military service, Mr. Scott prizes most highly.

Shortly after his discharge from state service, he joined the Eleventh Kentucky regiment of Ohio Volunteers and served until the 3rd of July following the close of the war, when he was honorably discharged. He next went to Bellefleur, Ohio, and engaged in business, and at once began a course of study which occupied all his spare moments. He saw the necessity of an education which he deliberates, and, therefore, set about, in dead earnest, to obtain it. In 1870 he began work for a glass factory at Bellefleur, and resolved to master its many details. He remained there until 1872, when he returned in Wheeling in the employment of the Central Glass Company, one of the largest establishments of its kind in the world. It was not long before the owners of this extensive establishment saw in Mr. Scott the kind of man they needed to manage their great interests, so they elected him their president. For a number of years he managed the affairs of the company in the most successful and satisfactory manner.

Though a self-made business man, successful in every sense of the word, Mr. Scott has for years had a high regard for public affairs brought him into association with a class of men whose times insisted upon his accepting public position. Hence, when barely old enough to be eligible, he was chosen mayor of Wheeling (now Quaker City), his native town. In 1880 he was elected to the office of the second branch of that body. In 1882 he was nominated and elected to the West Virginia senate from the First district. His constituents were the late Captain Andrew Wilson, a very popular man. This, added to the fact that the district was largely Democratic, proved Mr. Scott's popularity among the people. He served ably, faithfully and efficiently in the senate for four years. One of his noted legislative acts was the introduction of a bill requiring the re-education of the sexes in the state university. For years he clung to his favored scheme, introducing bill after bill of the same kind, until it became a law. For this valuable work, Senator Scott is entitled to the gratitude of all progressive people. His fellow citizens, greatly pleased with the conduct of their representative in the highest legislative branch of the state government, again, in 1886, nominated and elected the senator, over his earnest protest, for a second term of four years. This competitor, this time, was a man whose name was familiar to a majority was very much larger than the one he received four years before.

As a legislator, Mr. Scott was attentive in all his acts, and, accordingly, he possessed the confidence of his associates. Such men are necessarily influential and useful, both in and out of legislative assemblies.

Mr. Scott has always been an ardent Republican. At the Chicago convention of 1858 he was elected a member of the National Republican executive committee, for the term of four years. During the campaign of that year he proved himself a valuable and active member.

Mr. Scott has continued as a member of the National Republican committee since he was first chosen in 1858, and in the campaigns of 1862 and 1866 he rendered valued services, especially in the campaign, when Major McKinley was elected. The President recognized Mr. Scott's services by appointing him commissioner of internal revenue, the most important bureau appointment in his gift.

Mr. Scott has not been actively connected with the management of the local concerns with which he is identified, but he has become a commissioner of the Central Glass Works and Dollar Savings bank, and has very extensive and profitable interests in the Cripple Creek gold field in Colorado.

GEORGE WISE MENTIONED

As a Possible Successor of Internal Revenue Commissioner Scott—Mr. Wise One of the City, and the Rumor Would Not be Confirmed. An interesting rumor was in circulation among Republican politicians last night, to the effect that Mr. George Wise, Wheeling's postmaster, may succeed Hon. N. B. Scott as commissioner of internal revenue. Mr. Wise is now in Charleston, and the rumor could not be investigated. It is merely given for what it is worth. If Mr. Wise is an aspirant for the position, his host of friends and admirers in this city know and possess the ability to make an excellent commissioner.

The office of commissioner of internal revenue seems to have become a heritage for West Virginians of both parties. Hon. Joseph S. Miller, of Kanova, formerly state auditor, was commissioner during both of President Cleveland's terms; Hon. John W. Mason occupied the office during the Harrison administration, and Hon. N. B. Scott succeeded Mr. Miller when the McKinley administration came into power. May the custom continue to prevail in the wish of West Virginians, regardless of party.

INCREASED TAXES

Of the Year 1895 Were Made Necessary by Democratic Mis-Management and Lack of Judgment.

"This overdraft at the beginning of 1895 was $11,283.21, and although the trustees elected to collect relief from the heavy burden, the board received not one cent of the increased revenues arising from the heavy taxation in 1895."—Register, January 6, 1897.

When a Democratic city administration had determined upon having an electric light plant it did not ask the citizens to agree to the expenditure of $120,000 for the plant, but went to work and after some pleasant jaunts indulged in by the superintendent of the gas works and a coterie of councilmen in search of light, the present plant was built. The generous public entered no protest because the necessity of a modern system of street lighting was acknowledged by everybody, and the liberality of the expenditure of so much money was gotten up by the promise from the gas board that the plant would be built and maintained out of the revenues derived from the gas works.

The honest intent of the gas board is not impeached, but its judgment was faulty. About one-third of the money necessary to complete the equipment of the plant was provided by the board when an appeal was made to council for assistance. This appeal was not unheeded. Council passed an ordinance June 4, 1891, which was ratified by the people June 27, 1891, authorizing an issuance of $30,000 of bonds to be known as electric light bonds, payable October 1, 1901, and redeemable in sums of $5,000 per annum, beginning October 1, 1892.

On the first of January, 1895, the balance of these bonds unpaid was $72,000, showing a default of $16,000 that should have been paid in 1892 and 1893 and 1894. The bondholders were satisfied so long as their coupons were cashed, yet it was not a creditable thing for the city to be classed as a defaulter. All this occurred during a Democratic city administration.

The council elected January 1, 1895, found it necessary for the credit of the city to provide payment of $24,000 of this loan, instead of $8,000. This was not all the legacy of debt the Republican council of 1895 had to provide for, as the Register well knows, but let us see what proportion of the increased revenues arising from the heavily increased taxes of 1895 bear to this debt of the gas board and see if the council of 1895 can be charged as egregiously careless in its distribution of the revenues derived from the extra levy of 1895. THE INCREASED LEVY OF 1895 WAS 14 MILLS, OF EVERY CENT OF THIS WAS COLLECTED IT WOULD AMOUNT TO $22,000.

MUCH WANTED MAN

Is Joe Foster, Whom Officer Joe McCausland Captured

SO NEATLY THURSDAY NIGHT.

Officers Here Yesterday From St. Clairsville and Columbus, Both Eager to Secure the Burglar—Chief Bennett Decided to Turn Him Over to the Columbus Detective—Much of the Property Has Been Identified.

Joe Foster, the desperate burglar who snapped a pistol at Lieutenant Ingram and then fled through crowded streets and darksome alleys, to the accompaniment of a shower of bullets, and was finally captured in a very neat and quite creditable manner by Officer Joe McCausland, is a very much wanted man. Officers were here yesterday from Columbus and St. Clairsville, and there was a friendly rivalry between Franklin and Belmont counties for the opportunity to start the burglar "over the road."

In the afternoon, Sheriff Foreman, of Belmont county, came in from St. Clairsville, accompanied by Mr. J. Worley, one of several St. Clairsville citizens whose homes had been entered by burglars this week. Later in the afternoon Judge Hollingsworth, of St. Clairsville, another victim, visited police headquarters. Mr. Worley identified a silver watch found on Foster, as one that was his property and which had been stolen from his home this week. He wasn't positive as to the number of the watch movement, and at the suggestion of Captain Bennett, he called up the St. Clairsville Jeweler from whom it was purchased, with the result that the jeweler said he had sold the watch movement to Columbus Worley, whose number was the same as that found on Foster. This was most conclusive evidence, and had not the Columbus officer turned up and claimed the man on the ground that he had been arrested by Captain Bennett's men at their instance, he would have faced a most certain conviction in Belmont county.

Judge Hollingsworth identified a gold watch, also a number of silver dimes which had been taken from his son's toy safe. A gold watch and some other articles were taken from the home of Dr. Hevettson, of St. Clairsville, were also identified.

Sergeant Lewis Wolf, of the Columbus police, arrived in the city last night and proceeded to police headquarters at once. He identified considerable of the jewelry and other plunder Foster had in his possession, as property he had stolen from Columbus people last Sunday night. In addition, Foster, it was learned yesterday, had pawned two silver watches at the Klondike loan office in this city.

Chief of Police Worley says Foster is a desperate man, and in all of the four robberies he committed at Columbus last Sunday night, he chloroformed a huge mastiff dog that would have been troublesome to him, and the brute did not recover until the day after the robbery. Foster is willing to go to Columbus without the formality of receiving a writ, and Detective Wolf said last night that he would leave for the Ohio capital this morning at 9:30 o'clock, via the Panhandle road.

Foster complained of feeling sore yesterday afternoon, and it is thought he injured his back in jumping over the iron fence at the old jail on East street, Thursday night. The fall was fully ten feet, and it is surprising the man's limbs were not broken.

Says yesterday's Ohio State Journal of Foster: Sergeant Louis Wolf, of the detecting force, will have the utmost satisfaction of bringing to justice Friday night from Wheeling the burglar, Joe Foster, who shadowed him and Detective Murphy Monday night for several hours. Foster was arrested by Officer McCausland, of the Wheeling force. Superintendent Kelly received a telegram from Chief Thomas Anderson, of Wheeling, conveying the news, and a statement was made that a big satchel of stuff was found at the express office. In this satchel were diamonds, jewelry and other articles. On Foster's person when arrested were found three gold watches and one silver one. Foster is not known in Wheeling.

Sergeant Wolf, Detective Murphy, a district messenger boy and a dog, hunted all of Monday night for Foster and the evidence adduced by Sergeant Wolf next day was to the effect that the burglar had been shadowing them all the time, keeping close in their rear for safety. He could not possibly have escaped them in front and he took the safest place and tried the boldest trick of all by shadowing his shadowers. Where Foster "fell down," however, was in being too bold. He sent money from Wheeling to the express office in Columbus to pay for the express on a grip he had hired. When this check was found by Sergeant Wolf and Superintendent Kelly the rest was easy for those experienced thief catchers. They had a dozen traps set for Foster in two hours after, either one of which would have landed him.

Foster is caught "dead to rights" on the chloroforming and burglaries in Worthington and several jobs in Pennsylvania can be traced to him.

Mr. Fred H. Decker, of New York city, who is an expert in drilling children, and who is also the owner of the "Mystic Midget" cantata, will be in the city before the next practice. He will find that children in splendid shape a result of Miss Lucy Robinson's faithful work with the cast of characters, numbering 200 children from all parts of Wheeling. Mr. Decker's work will consist in putting on the finishing touches, such as drilling the Amazons, the archer girls, the goody-goody girls, the Disney soldiers, the insects, etc. He will bring with him the beautiful costumes and elaborate stage scenery. In a few hours after he assumes command of the 200 children each one will know every movement in the pretty drills and marches. The mischievous gnomes, the brave midgets and the white-robed fairies all know their choruses and their positions on the stage.
