

A CLASS OF 30

Graduates Ushered from the Wheeling High School.

VERY INTERESTING EXERCISES

Marked the Conclusion of the School's Second Year.

PERFORMANCES OF RARE MERIT

And Elicited Many Manifestations of Appreciation From the Large Audience Assembled at the Opera House - Addresses by President Bowers, of Board of Education, and Rev. N. S. Thomas - Highest Honors Taken by Miss Ella Bowers - Musical Numbers a Feature.

The second annual commencement of the Wheeling High School was held last night at the Opera House, and the event attracted an assemblage that packed the theatre. The exercises were interesting and well rendered and their merit gave an inkling of the school's high standard. There were thirty members of the class, and on the stage sat also Superintendent W. H. Anderson, Principal H. B. Work, President Frank W. Bowers, of the board of education, and the ministers who participated in the exercises.

Only ten of the class gave performances. The graduates were as follows: "Ella Mae Bowers, Ella Mae Brown, Jeannette McKelvey Burt, Catherine Elizabeth Doudridge, "Margaret Mae Dudley, Grace Elizabeth Fend, Margaret Josephine Fry, Mary Antoinette Graham, Katherine Wilder Hannan, Ella Curtis Haynes, "Isabella Harwood Jepson, Olga Elfrida Mayer, Bertha Williams McCoy, Adeline Charlotte Miller, "Maude Murrin, Etia Mae Peckford, Clementine Pickett, Ruth Curtis Rice, "Grace Barbara Schwarm, "Stella Sonderman, Alma Spell, Flossie Stobbs, Mary Agnes Wayman, Annie Marie Wetzel, "Lillian Minerva Wincher, Alfred Tippet Graham, Walter Gwynn, Harry Merle Miller, George Carroll Rhoades, John Forrest Springer. (Honor pupils are designated by *)

The exercises opened with the entrance march played by the Opera House orchestra, to the accompaniment of which the graduates came on to the stage and were seated in neatly arranged tiers. The class presented a very pretty picture. The girls were dressed in white and each held a bouquet of flowers. The class colors, red and white, were hung above the stage, the footlights shed their illumination through tinted shades, Japanese lanterns hung over the class, and potted palms contributed to a beautiful stage setting.

Rev. C. B. Graham, of North street M. E. church, made the invocation, which was an effective plea for God's grace on the school, the faculty and the graduates. The orchestra followed with a medley of civil war tunes. Superintendent Anderson then introduced the class salutatorian, Isabella Jepson.

"No Steps Backward"

Miss Jepson's theme was the class motto, "Vestigia Nulla Retrorsum," and her appearance was the signal for applause. Miss Jepson bade the audience a cordial welcome in a pleasing and well modulated voice, and her naturalness of composition and manner combined to make her performance one of rare charm. "Vestigia Nulla Retrorsum," translated is "No Steps Backward." Miss Jepson illustrated the chief incidents of the progress of our country as an example of the fulfillment of the law contained in the motto, and illustrations were drawn from other nations. The hope was expressed that the class would never retrace its steps. Miss Jepson closed with a quotation from "The Chambered Nautilus."

Miss Stella Sonderman read a cleverly written essay, entitled "The Riches of Leisure." The essay was eminently practical and up-to-date. It argued for the right use of time and opposed waste of money by people of little means who were anxious to dress as well as the rich. "Leisure," said Miss Sonderman, was time in which to do something useful. Friendships could be formed, the work of charity be done and the uplifting of the lowly, and other boons could be shed—in leisure hours. "Rather to do nothing than to do good" showed a low state of mind. Miss Sonderman's paper was exceedingly interesting and appreciated by applause.

The next feature was a chorus by the class under the direction of Miss Lucy Robinson, superintendent of music in the schools. The selection was "All Hail the Victor."

"Life's True Ideal," was the theme of an oration by Grace B. Schwarm, whose enunciation was unusually good and she was heard clearly in all parts of the house. Miss Schwarm urged the forming of pure and true ideals. The ideals could not be too high even if the summits were not reached. Without ideals no young man or young woman could succeed. "Eat, drink and be merry" was a poor ideal. Love of gain, seeking to be monarch of all one surveyed, did not betoken the true conception of life. The dominant thought of Miss Schwarm's argument was for a life of helpfulness to others and an ambition to live the best and purest of lives.

Man's Progress. Miss Maude Murrin was the next member of the class to speak. "Man's Progress" was the keystone of her pleasing effort, and she entertainingly sketched the historical milestones in the elevation of man. It was an optimistic array of facts and eloquence. This age, she said, is one of scientific inquiry. The world would continue to become more learned, "and doubtless in coming centuries," remarked Miss Murrin, "some school girl will compare her condition with ours in noting the gradations of improvement."

An exceedingly well read essay was that rendered by Minnie Wincher, whose reading demonstrated eloquent ability. "What is Worth While?" was the inquiry in her paper. The question was answered by a series of suggestions how to make life more useful and pleasurable. Good company, good literature, good habits, and a general employment of one's better impulses were advocated. "The Legend of Innisfallen" was the little of a descriptive oration by Clementine Pickett, which was a story of a lone pursuit of a bird by an old abbot, and contained a moral beckoning on with hope the weary mortal. Miss Pickett had a splendid delivery and her pretty word pictures held her audience intensely interested.

Bertha McCoy chose as her theme, "Arma Virumque Cano," the opening words of Virgil's Aeneid, in her oration eulogizing the immortal Dewey and graphically telling the tale of his marvelous victory at Manila. Miss McCoy described Dewey's noiseless attack on that memorable May morning, and her peroration aroused considerable enthusiasm. "The Influence of Literature Upon the Masses," was discussed by Margaret Dudley. Literature was praised for its beneficial effects. But books should be chosen as friends; the companionship of only the best should be sought. "Touch not, taste not, handle not," was a good rule to follow in relation to much of the trash emanating from the printing presses as literature. Miss Dudley's essay was well prepared and charmingly delivered.

Girls' Chorus The girls of the class, twenty-five in number, sang an amusing chorus, entitled "The Owl and the Pussy Cat."

Alma Spell's oration departed somewhat from the beaten path of graduating performances, and as it was generously sprinkled with humor, it was greatly enjoyed. Miss Spell spoke on "Friends," and was in the nature of a satire on the class of people who use the name of friendship to use up their spare time visiting or for the purposes of getting something in return. In brief, "familiarity breeds contempt." In these instances. But there were true friends and Miss Spell paid tribute to them in an apt quotation from Tennyson.

The performances proper concluded with the valedictory essay, "Let us Go Forward," by Ella Bowers, which was one of the most logical papers on the program. Miss Bowers urged progress at all times. The need was apparent in a government and in life in all its phases. A forward movement was urged for temperance, and education should mean the development of the moral as well as the intellectual faculty. Man would find much enjoyment if he ceased to be selfish, and self would and refinement closely followed would lead to realize an ideal life. To attain success, continued Miss Bowers, the motto of life should ever be "Forward."

After Miss Bowers finished the reading of her essay, she stepped back to say the words of farewell to the members of her class and the school faculty. She had scarcely begun this touching duty before she was seen to halt and begin again, but only to fall suddenly to the floor in a faint, due probably to a high nervous tension. Her father, Mr. Bowers, resident of the board of education, who was in the audience, immediately rushed to her assistance and carried her into the wings, where restoratives were applied with the wished-for effect. The class and audience visibly expressed its sympathy for Miss Bowers.

Rev. N. S. Thomas, rector of St. Matthew's P. E. church, then delivered a splendid address to the class, during which he complimented the performers for the thoughts contained in their orations and essays. Speaking of Solomon and his proverbs of wisdom, there was a touch of cynicism in his sayings, said Rev. Mr. Thomas, and wiser though Solomon was he is not esteemed as is David, whose psalms sing of holiness rather than wisdom. Wisdom was not all. The speaker would repeat the words of the valedictorian "go forward," but with the ideal of David and not of Solomon.

Pres. Bowers' Talk. President Frank W. Bowers, of the board of education, presented the diplomas, incidentally addressing well chosen remarks to the class as follows: "Ladies and Gentlemen of the graduating class of 1899—I have the honor and pleasure to present these diplomas you have justly won and merited; and permit me to say that these diplomas but more intrinsic worth, they would indeed be but trifles.

"But there is something back of these that gives them significance and value. They are symbols of years of patient study and industrious effort. They will serve to recall your school days, where amid genial companions and under the solicitous and watchful care of your efficient and worthy instructors, you struggled upward to higher planes of education and broader paths of knowledge. "They are proclamations and certificates attesting that you have been studious and diligent and have reached that degree of proficiency that well justifies reward.

The conferring of these diplomas marks one of the important epochs of life. They also mark the beginning of further effort and further progress. "Graduates, your work is not yet finished. The vast realm of actual life opens out before you. But no matter what the task or how difficult the undertaking, meet it with the same energy and determination that you have displayed in your school pursuits and success must crown your efforts. "We all sincerely hope and trust that these diplomas will serve to keep warm the energy and industry that have distinguished your school days and that you will continue to press forward, honorably striving for higher and higher goals, for there are other honors yet to gather and other diplomas yet to win."

Each member of the class was the recipient of applause as well as the diploma. Miss Bowers, supported by her brother, was warmly applauded when she received her diploma, and the appreciation increased at Superintendent Anderson's announcement that the Wheeling Business College scholarship for highest honors had been awarded to her.

The class song, written by Isabella Harwood Jepson, and treating of the class motto, was sung by the class and scored a hit with the audience. The words of the song were previously printed in the Intelligencer. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. Samuel Schwarm, of the English Lutheran church.

WASHINGTON SCHOOL.

The Closing Exercises Were Held Yesterday Afternoon.

The pupils of the eighth year of Washington school held their closing exercises in the grammar room yesterday afternoon. A number of parents and friends were present to applaud the performers.

Rev. Dr. C. B. Graham, of the North Street M. E. church, presented the certificates, taking advantage of the occasion not only to congratulate the members of the class but to urge them to continue to build upon the foundation they had made. "Opportunity and responsibility" were the words that furnished the text of a timely address that was much appreciated by the pupils.

BRIEF MENTIONINGS.

Events in and About the City Given in a Nutshell. Lincoln high school's commencement occurs to-night.

The Bellare board of education met last night and re-elected all of the old trustees.

The board of education has fitted the public library with four electric fans, and it is now the coolest place in the city.

Mayor Sweeney last night swore in six special police for the Elks' fair week. They will be dressed in civilians' clothes and keep a lookout for crooks.

Clerk Hornish, of the board of public works, advertises for bids for the construction of the Forty-fifth street sewer just authorized by council. Bids close Saturday, July 1, at noon.

A programme of athletic events, including hurdle races, has been arranged for the picnic to be given to-morrow, at Mozart park, by the "Small Pouch Athletic Club. The boys expect to entertain a large crowd.

Mullen division, A. O. H., held its annual picnic and outing yesterday at Mozart park. It was a highly enjoyable affair and the cool high-top resort attracted a large crowd in the evening. Bowling and dancing were the features of the day.

Couer de Leon and Bernard Shanley companies of the Uniform Rank of the Knights of Pythias, meet on the diamond at the Island ball park to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. Pythians and their friends are talking great interest in the contest.

One of the largest real estate transactions recently consummated in Ohio county, figured in the deeds recorded yesterday in the county clerk's office. For $15,000 Dr. John L. Dickey purchases the country residence of Mr. Joseph Speldel, at Echo Point.

An alarm of fire from box 52 called out the department, yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. A gasoline stove in the home of Mrs. Prettyman, of Twenty-sixth street, east of Chapline, had exploded, happily without injuring anyone. The blaze was extinguished with slight loss.

Yesterday, in the circuit court, suit for $2,000 damages was entered by ex-Squire George Rike against Constable Henry Thomas and the latter's bondswoman, Louisa Sebright. The suit grows out of the late trouble between Mr. Arkle and the trustees of the First English Lutheran church.

Mr. E. C. Sample, formerly of the Sample-Lingman Company, having accepted a position in the east, Mr. George J. Lingman has purchased his interest. At a meeting of the directors of the company held yesterday afternoon the following were elected to fill vacancies: Mr. M. J. Mooney and W. C. Ball. Mr. George J. Lingman succeeds as president and general manager.

Funeral of G. W. Carpenter.

The funeral of G. W. Carpenter, a well known lap and butt welder at the Riverside tube works, will occur this morning, from his family residence, on South Jacob street. A wife and three children survive the deceased. Among the secret organizations called to attend the funeral of a departed brother are Blazing Arrow Tribe, Improved Order of Red Men, Benwood lodge A. O. U. W., Garfield Castle, K. G. E., and Garfield Temple, Ladies of the Golden Eagle.

BAD management keeps more people in poor circumstances than any other one cause. To be successful one must look ahead and plan ahead so that when a favorable opportunity presents itself he is ready to take advantage of it. A little forethought will also save much expense and valuable time. A prudent and careful man will keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in the house, the shiftless fellow will wait until necessity compels it and then ruin his best horse going for a doctor and have a big doctor bill to pay, besides; one pays out 25 cents, the other is out a hundred dollars and then wonders why his neighbor is getting richer while he is getting poorer. For sale by druggists.
