THE BOX SOCIAL.

At the Carroll Club Was a Brilliant Function. The box social, under the auspices of the Ladies' Social Carroll Club, at the Carroll Club, proved what had been predicted, an evening of pleasure.

which were collected from every lady upon entering the club, afforded all kinds of merriment. Mr. George Mathison executed this work and never failed to have the boxes prepared by the married ladies go to some gentleman other than her husband, so that in the mix-up, it was hard to distinguish the married from those unmarried.

JURY DISAGREED.

On the Zercher case, which was on in the Criminal Court yesterday. In the criminal court yesterday, Judge Hagus, the case of the state vs. Henry Zercher, charged with stealing a horse and buggy from Hezekiah Culley, a Short Creek farmer, last spring, was on trial.

Previous to consideration of the Zercher case, Judge Hagus ordered the discharge of Charles Scott and his wife, Clara Scott, who with Grace Davis, were charged with stealing a trunk from Mary Simmons. The Davis woman was acquitted Monday, so the state nolleed the cases against the two others.

Old Children

Many children look too old for their years. They go about with thin faces and sober manners not in keeping with robust childhood. If it's your boy or girl, give Scott's Emulsion. 'Twill fill out the hollow places, increase the weight, and bring a healthy color to the cheeks.

A THING OF BEAUTY

Is the "Carnival of Authors," Which Opened Most Auspiciously.

THE MANY ATTRACTIVE BOOTHS

In Charge of Attractive and Appropriately Costumed Attendants, Did a Thriving Business—Scenes From Favorite Literary Works Charmingly Depicted for Sweet Charity's Sake—Will Conclude Saturday Evening.

The "Carnival of Authors" was opened at Arion hall last evening under most auspicious conditions, and judged by the flattering reception accorded this worthy affair given for a worthy cause, is destined to duplicate last night's success many fold to-night and Saturday evening, when it concludes.

Commodious Arion hall is none too large for this elaborate affair, as was evident in the jam of the throngs in front of the various booths, which form a net work about the four walls that is particularly pleasing to the eye, and on the stage in front, in the centre of the room and on the landing entrance to the hall proper are other beauty spots of no little magnitude, so arranged in common as to weave a maze of color, light and animation and dazzle the admiring gaze of the beholder.

The button was pressed, so to speak, at 8 p. m., when the grand march took place, a signal initiation and promise of the marvelous treat in store. The vanguard was composed of Cubans, seniors and senioritas, and following them came Japanese and buxom Dutch maidens, colonial dames, Indians, Norsemen, gypsies, etc., in bewildering array, to the inspiring strains of the Opera House Orchestra, which will furnish music throughout the carnival.

No description of the booths would do them justice. Cold type can give but a bare outline. After passing the refreshment enclosure at the entrance, which is an adjunct of Nansen's "Farthest North," and so placed on account of inadequacy of space inside, the string begins to the right hand with Marion Harlan's "Common Sense" kitchen, where an embowered apartment furnishes luncheon and all the delicacies desired by a good liver.

The next booth is Scott's "Guy Manner," where "Meg Merrilies" holds forth in revealing the future. Continuing on that side of the hall are "The Night Before Christmas" booth, with dolls and children's toys for sale; "Cranford," with its Colonial dining room, and accompaniments of quaint china, melodeon and spinning wheel; and Cooper's "The Last of the Mohicans," a typical Indian tent, where juvenile redskins give thrilling Wild West performances at frequent intervals.

"In Cuba," occupies the stage, and the settings reflect the experienced hand of Mrs. Andrew H. Patterson, of Elm Grove, who has spent some time in Havana and other parts of the island. Cuban and American flags are festooned over the tropical scene, and revenue is derived from the sale of pineapples and other fruits.

The first booth on the other side of the hall, proceeding from the stage, is Nansen's "Farthest North," which is resplendent with white cotton and tinsel, and above it rises the "north pole," over which "Old Glory" proudly floats. "Sweets to the Sweets," suggested by Shakespeare's little poem, as might be expected has candies for sale. The booth is decorated in red, white and blue.

Lemonade is dispensed from the "Maud Muller" booth, whose background contains a large painting of the "Judge" quaffing a drink from the barefooted maiden's hands. Lines from Whittier's poem adorn the booth's front.

A German kitchen is "Queen of Curds and Cream." It is distinguished by quaint china, pewter plates and candlesticks, all family heirlooms of Wheeling people. Chocolate and cakes are sold at this booth by girls in the German national costume. The first glass tumbler made in Wheeling is exhibited by Miss Annie Swift.

Quite attractive to the masculine patrons was the bachelor's den, presenting a cosy interior, with appropriate pictures and ornaments. It answers to "Reveries of a Bachelor," and cigars and tobacco are on sale here. An inscription worthy of reproduction hangs above the booth. It reads: "A woman is only a woman; but a good cigar is a smoke.—Kipling."

Dickens is honored by a tent with Mrs. Jarley's wax works, and a store with odd articles for odd prices, a real "Old Curiosity Shop." The central booth is a clever imitation of a Japanese pagoda and its only appeal for revenue is through its beautiful stock of chrysanthemums, the national flower of Japan, and likewise the delight of the football crank. This booth is very attractive. Beautiful girls, with costumes befitting the various scenes, are also on exhibition. It might be said, and they are not by any means the least attractive feature of "The Carnival of Authors," that Linsley Cadets and boys who are not Linsley Cadets have been pressed into service in giving each subject complete representation. The carnival should be seen to be appreciated.
