Great Union Demonstration at Indianopolis last Thursday Extract from the Speech of Gov. Johnson of Tenn Resolutions that have the Right Ring in them.

When the Southern leaders saw the scepter of political power departing, and saw, when Mr. Lincoln's term expired, that other men would make their way t was their time to strike. They did, and we see the result. What is it to end in. if we are to have a civil war whenever a party is defeated? It will end in confuparty is deteated? It was too sion, anarchy, exhaustion of our resources, and national extinction. The true policy and national extinction. when Mr. Lincoln was elected was, let him go on, call a Cabinet around him, and, if his policy was wise and good, sustain it; if not, oppose it, as we had done in times past. Where was the danger from Lincoln's election? The majority of the Congress, on the day of his inauguration, was opposed to him, and he could not form a Cabinet without the Senate's confirmation of his nominations. He could not make treaties without their approval, or draw his salary without Congressional appropriation. We had him tied, and could have negatived all his acts, if deemed assessary. Where then was the danger to the rights of any State or citizen? There was a fixed determination to head up the Government it was no ready to fight. He believed the time to do resolve.

BESOLUTIONS.

RESOLUTIONS.

We, the loyal people of the State of Indian, in Mass Convention assembled, at the capitol Square, in the proval, or draw his salary without Connew thing. He read from the Montgom-ery Mail, to show that it was no precipitate thing, but was done with coolness and deliberation, after forty years of thought and calculation. Gov. J. also read from an original letter of General Jackson to Crawford, of Georgia, his well known prediction of the next attempt at rebellion, after nullification : "Therefore, says Jackson, "the Toriff is only the pretext, and disunion and a Southern confederacy the real object. The next pretext will be the negro.' Isn't that it? said Gov. J. Doesn't it rend like prophecy Where now do we find ourselves? Who ommenced this diabolical and damnable struggle? It was the south who fired the first gun. The conspirators South were so afraid there would be no war, that Roger A. Pryor went to Charleston to commence it. There a blow must be struck to carry Virginia out of the Union: and the first gun was fired after they had been notified that the garrison, if not succored, would be starved out within three days. They could not wait for starvation to give them the fort, but bombarded it. When the blow was struck, the news was sent to Montgomery, with the speed of lightning. Jeff. Davis was serenaded, and his Secretary made a speech, in which he declared that the Confederate WHEELING, VA determined now. Was it despotism to call out the militia to defend the imperiled Cap-ital? There have been many things to complain of in the Administration, but if I have any complaint to make it is not that it has done so much, but because it has not done more. Some are distressed because they say Lincoln has violated the Constitution and trampled the laws under foot.

Some have failed to see that Davis and his crew have drawn the Constitution from its archives and trampled on it. They are keen to see any irregularities on the part of the Administration, but fail to say anything of those who have set aside the Constitution and law. He predicted that the attempt to erect a party on such a base was laying to erect a party on such a base was laying its foundation in sand, and when the rains descended it would be awept away. As to peaceable separation and re construction, it was impossible. You can't divide the Union without blood. Suppose you agree to try it, where will you begin? where draw the line? The framers of the Constitution designed that the Union should be perpetual. He believed the Constitution con-tained immutable and indestructible priociples, and, with the Government, would come out of the war triumphant. It cost our fathers seven years' war to establish it. They sacrificed life and property for it, labored in cabinet and field, stepton the cold ground, under an in-clement sky, only to rise with the morrow to march with blood sponting from their shoes, and by their trials, sufferings and blood cemented the Constitutional Gov ernment. Who here will raise his hand to destroy it? Governor Johnson quoted the Watches, Jewelry, Silver & Placed ticle, to show that the design was to make You have got it to do, and must do it in it perpetual, and provide for amendments whenever a change in the condition of the expanding republic demanded it. [Voice, we'll give you 50,000.] There is a fearful responsibility resting upon those who have precipitated the coastry into civil war. They have caused all these new made graves, all this suffering and sacrifice. You sympa-thizers and all, let me ask you to lift your hand to Heaver and see if it be not red with blood. Do you talk of being tired of war; if it cost your fathers seven long years to establish this Government, how much longer ought we to fight to preserve it? So far sa am concerned, I would carry it on not only seven, but thirty years. What is thirty years in the life time of a nation, in permanently founding a Government, that may revolutionize the civilized mass meeting world? Wes, my life spared seventy dispersed:

The right of secession! He would show them that that was sturious coin, and to be nailed to the counter—that the right to secede was a pretense in the absence of all rause for its exercise. He entered into the history of Congressional action. The adoption by Congress of a proposed article amendatory of the Constition, guaranteeing to slave States a perpetual constitutional assurance that their right in slave property should never be disturbed, and the of territorial bills covering every inch of territory, in which was incorporated a pro-vision that the rights of private property should not be impaired, or any discrimination used in taxation of property. They rejected both these guarantees, determined not to enjoy rights fully guaranteed to them. This shows that they want no com-
