For thee, my country, I would plead!
For thee, who set my life, my creed,
I would forego this beauty of the West.

And its sweet rest!

Is size, there, quite becaused, has Love of Glory Set the land? Do men forged, who wear the sears, They, and they only, who the stars! For them the undying laurels of the land Drop from each hand?

Is God's own image sunk so low that m for man?
Where are the arms of will and brawn?
Where is the strong h we cannot pawn?
Do piles of gold west dignity like man
Is this our plan?

Men, fathers, brothers, hear you not our a bose-sching cry? Oh, lovers! Women have grown proud! They learn to look upon a shroud. But scorn the man who would not, dying, cry "For Victory?"

Mothers and eleters eitting by the quiet thearth!
We are not leasily, though alone—
Each patriot soldier is our own—
Our prayers arise beside the quiet hearth
To bloss their worth.

Lieut. Gen. Winfield Scott.

The veteran hero, Lient. Gen. Winfield Scott, once more visits the City of New York, and has taken apartments at Delmonico's, Fourteenth street and Fifth avenue. Since his arrival many of his old associates in arms and other personal admires here called to welcome and have a mirers have called to welcome and have a shake of the distinguished old soldier's

On a call, by one of the latter, he was cordially welcomed by the General, whom he found enjoying the society of two lads, his grandchildren. The veteran is pleased to see his friends, but the necessity and pro-priety of not making visits too long will suggest themselves. As to his spirits, they are excellent, and his feelings cordial and hearty as ever. His health is what he nearty as ever. His health is what he terms good, though he suffers from an af-fection of the spine, which prevents him from walking as much as he would wish; still he generally walks to his church and takes some moderate strolls. He remarked:

"I am now going up to fourscore years a longer period than the Great Disposer of a longer period than the Great Disposer of events permits many men to live, yet I praise him that still my mental faculties are unimpaired, and that they are as vig-orous as ever. I just had a visit from a friend, hoary-headed like myself, and my senior in years; yet he and I were con-versing upon matters that occurred forty and fifty years ago—matters which are as vivid in my memory now as at the periods vivid in my memory now as at the periods when they happened. True, it is, that old age will shake the best of men; but when a young man I was very strong and possessed of an excellent constitution. Besides these, I was of a very determined resolu-

The General is most scrupulous in attendance at church, and is a close and constant student of the Word of God. His reverence formand gratitude to his Creator is one of the many marked characteristics of the venerable chieftan. He expects to remain in the city during the Winter, and his apartments are arranged with that view. As he has been all his life, he is now, an early riser, his breakfast hour being eight. After this be drives out; writes and reads; a short map during the day, and he retires at 10 o'clock. On the subject of the war the General is reticent. It gives him pain. To a ques-tion in regard to it he shook his head, re-plying, "That is a matter I do not talk upon; it is a subject for others to discuss, and not for me to dwell upon in my old age. It is in other hands, and must now engross the attention of other heads."

When his carriage awaits him at Delmonico's, and it is know to be Gen. Scott's, a crowd of persons, anxious to have a glance at the esteemed and respected vet-eran, gather around it. He is most cour-teous, and has a kind "How do you do?"

It may be stated in this connection that the General is understood to have been devoting a very large portion of his time for a long while past to writing; the subject of his labor is not definitely known, but if the result is for the world, it will be one of greatest value and importance, and also be another monument to one of the greatest and most successful warriors of the age

How the Draft Failed .- A philosopher, not a practical military man, made out the list of causes for exemption-that's why the draft caught so few men. Says the Chicago Tribune:-

"Why has the draft produced so few soldiers? We can unswer the question. The war department appointed Professor Leiber to frame a list of causes for exemytion for the government of examining boards. The learned professor exercised his profound research to discover diseases, ailments and ills that flesh is heir to that would form pretexts for granting certifi-cates of exemption. He succeeded in pro-ducing a catalogue of enormous length, and susceptible of endliness abuse. He opened a hole as wide as a barn door, through which two hadred thousand drafted men marched out in double file. He established a standard of physical perfection so high that only here and there a man was found equal to it. It was no a man was found equal to it. It was no trouble for the soundest and ablest bodied men to obtain, certificates of exemption from the examining board. There are very few perfectly sound men in civilized countries—men free from all trace of discase—and if a conscript pessesses any symptom of allment, he could easily magnify it, and by simulation, personal influence that the interval is preference to any other collar, as they are readily cleaned in one minute with a aponge. or bribery, induce the examining surgeon to grant him a certificate of exemption.
