LEGISLATIVE.

February 28th. The Senate received a message from the House that they had refused to concur in the Senate amendment to the civil rights bill, and requested the appointment of a committee of conference.

A bill to provide for the appropriation of $600,000 for the land commission.

A bill to make appropriations and raise supplies for the fiscal year commencing November 1, 1869.

A bill to fix the per diem and mileage of the members of the next General Assembly.

A bill to repeal an ordinance to prevent the erection of wooden buildings in the city of Charleston.

An act to provide for an assessment of real property in the year 1870.

An act to provide for the filling of vacancies in county offices.

An act to incorporate the Charleston Banking and Trust Company.

A joint resolution authorizing the State Treasurer to re-issue to Robertson, Blacklock and Coachman certificates of State stock.

An act to provide for the sinking fund and the management of the same.

An act to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the assessment and taxation of property."

An act to provide for the appointment of trial justices.

A message was received from the House by the Senate in evening session that the House had struck out the enacting clause of a bill to incorporate the South Carolina Banking Company.

The Senate and House appointed committees of free conference on the Civil Rights bill.

A bill to incorporate the Wilmington and Carolina Railroad Company was ratified.

BRAIN WAVES.—In a memoir of Dr. Francis Wayland, by his sons, we find the following, which was taken from some memorials of their father relative to his family:

"One or two circumstances in the life of Mrs. Wayland—Dr. W.'s mother—were sufficiently remarkable to merit recital. No explanation of them is attempted. At the time of their removal to America it was the design of Mr. Wayland and his wife to return in a few years, and visit the relatives whom they had left behind, especially the mother of Mrs. W. This purpose they often spoke of to each other. But one morning, after they had been some years in this country, she said to him on waking: 'I do not wish to return to England. My mother is dead.'" No previous intimation of her ill health had been received. He, unknown to her, made a minute of the time of her declaration, and a subsequent arrival brought the news of the event which had occurred at about the time at which her mind was thus impressed.

"When her son, the subject of this memoir, was expected home from New York, after attending medical lectures there during the winter of 1814-15, Mrs. W., who was sitting with her husband, suddenly walked the room in great agitation, saying, 'Pray for my son,—Francis is in danger.' So urgent was her request, that her husband joined her in prayer for his deliverance from peril. At the expected time he returned. His mother at once asked, 'What has taken you home?' He appeared that while coming up the North River on a sloop he had fallen overboard, and the sloop had passed over him. He was an infant's swimmer, and readily kept himself afloat till he could be rescued. Was it the irresistible power of a mother's love that imparted a vision more than human to her mind?"

The London Times asserts that the late President of the United States, General Grant, restores English confidence in American justice.

THE MASCULINE ELEMENT.—It is as necessary to the life of a house as oxygen is to the life of the body. A woman generally gives in instinctively to those who have the right to govern, quietly and readily taking her own place as the governed and protected one, while she as naturally fights against feminine supremacy, refusing to recognize or submit until every point is contested to the utmost limit of her rebellious power. Therefore a household composed wholly of women is a dreary thing, for the masculine element, supplied by a woman with the heaviest of trends and most authoritative of voices, united to an unexceptionable development of existence and executive energy is a widely different thing from that element coming the legitimate way, through husband, father, or brother. A woman may pay the bills, order in the stores, keep a sharp lookout on water rates and taxes, do everything the most active and business like man can to keep the household engine moving, and yet she must expect rebellion, injured looks, nerves, and hysterics from her feminine protectors if in any manner of pleasure or taste she advances her claims on account of business supremacy.

Hear Us.

ABOUT one-half of the Goods sold by merchants are bought for Net Cash or thirty days—the remainder is bought on two, three, and four months' time, and to fail to meet their obligations at maturity, is ruinous to their credit. One of us will leave about the 1st of March for New York to make purchases for the Spring and Summer, and to do this we must have MONEY. We now make a second appeal to those who are indebted to us to come forward by 1st March and liquidate the same.
