

BY OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.
Angel of love, for every grief,
Its soothing balm, its healing leaf,
For every pang its healing leaf,
For homeless woe its outspread wings.
Enough for thee the pleading eye,
The kneeling brow of silent pain:
The portals open to a sign of life,
Without the clank of bolt or chain.
Who is our brother? He that lies
Left at the wayside, bruised and sore;
His need our open arms supplies,
His welcome waits him at our door.
Not ours his call, in freezing tones,
His race, his asking, or his creed;
Each heart the tie of kinship owns,
When there are human veins that bleed.
Here stand the champions to defend
From every wound that flesh can feel
Her science, patience, skill, shall bleed
So save, to calm, to help, to heal.
Father of mercies! Weak and frail,
Thy guiding hand Thy children ask;
Let not the Great Physician fail
To aid us in our holy task.
Source of all truth and love and light,
That warm and cheer our earthly days,
Be ours to serve Thy will aright,
Be thine the glory and the praise!

An Act of Love.
A few Sabbaths ago a large audience had assembled at a fashionable church, to listen to a sermon from a beloved pastor. The air was balmy, with just hint enough of frost to make the new winter toilets comfortable. The minister was eloquent and magnetic, and the audience was listening with intelligent appreciation to the opening remarks of the sermon, when a poor widow entered, followed by two little children and carrying an infant in her arms.
She was personally known to several kind ladies in the congregation, and as she laded kind eyes were turned on her, beaming with sympathy. She had been unable for months to attend church, herself and children suffering for the bare necessities, until a lady had interested her friends in relieving the wants of the mother and little ones, and a most welcome contribution of winter garments had been sent them, and she had availed herself of the first bright Sabbath to attend divine worship.
With a sigh of relief she seated herself and little ones, glad to rest, after her two miles' walk; her meek face reflecting the joy she felt at once being in the consecrated house of God. But the babe in her arms, unused to so long a walk, and frightened by the stillness of the church, began to cry. The wailing cries growing louder and louder, scolding with baby indignation its mother's efforts to hush its cries.
With burning cheeks and sorrowful eyes the mother began arranging her wraps to leave the church, as it was evident she could not remain with the babe. She folded the wrap around the little struggling form and arose to her feet, when a beautifully dressed lady arose, and gently taking the babe in her own arms, whispered to the mother to stay and hear the sermon, and walked down the aisle, unheeding the wondering glances of her friends, her face transfigured with heavenly and grace reflected by the glowing words in her heart of the beloved disciple, "That ye love one another."
She walked rapidly through the quiet Sabbath streets, with the crying babe held tenderly to her heart, and entered the house of a relative, and to the exclamations of surprise and inquiry, replied, "It was too bad for that poor mother to miss hearing the sermon, and she walks and down the aisle, crooning soft words tenderly to the sobbing babe, as only a loving, womanly woman can, her costly dress trailing unheeded over the carpet. Her friends united their efforts with hers to soothe the excited babe, but all to no avail, when, as a forlorn hope, she placed the screaming infant in the arms of her own little daughter, and as the soft arms of the little girl closed around the babe, it uttered its cries and nestling close in the arms of this gentle "little Dorrit," soon fell asleep.

Consecration.
A worthy church member said, "Al! I have been consecrated to God. And yet this church member gave not over three hundred dollars a year for God, and twelve hundred a year, as a single item, to keep carriage-horses. This is a fair specimen of our ideas of consecration. A consecrated man, which exists only in name. We consecrate to God in name to get the substance for ourselves. We give God everything but ourselves. Which is in fact giving him nothing."
True consecration is a very simple thing. Paul defines it as acting with sole reference to pleasing God. Christ defines it as the single eye, one object, whole horizon, that object the glory of God. This brings deadness to self, deadness to the world, every motive inspired, every action animated and glowing with this vitalizing force, the glory of God. The church seems to estimate doing more than holiness of character, which is to secure the fruit without the tree, but the fruit is ripened. The church needs a practical, self to secure holy character; consecrated hearts will bring consecrated giving, and be full of consecrated doing. The Christmas tree may be full of fruit, but the fruit is pinned on. The good tree will bend under its load of fruit, the product of its own life.

In Jerusha Edwards we have an illustration of consecration—not after the passions of youth, when she is the appetite satiated by indulgence—not one whose tastes of the world have been imbibed by sorrow, but one in the freshness and beauty of the sweetest young womanhood—the second daughter of President Jonathan Edwards, who died in her eighteenth year. She was a remarkable example of a consecrated character, the power of grace over a young heart and life—only active in religious doing, but her doing the fruit of her saintly character.
David Brainerd said of her, "That she was not only a real Christian, but a very eminent saint. One whose soul was unconquered and entertained with things which pertain to the most spiritual, experimental, and distinct gulphing parts of religion; and one who, by the temper of her mind, was fitted to deny herself for God, and to do good, beyond any young woman whatsoever whom he knew." Her father said, "She manifested a heart unconquered and devoted to God in the course of her life." On her death-bed she said: "That she had not seen one minute for several years, and she desired to live a minute longer, for the sake of any other good in life, but doing good, living to God and doing what might be for his glory." This is consecration in its simplicity and purity. This is the Pauline standard and maxim. "For me to live is Christ; to die is gain." It is the being possessed with Christ and his work here, and Christ and heaven hereafter.

Do not let all of your repentance flow out in tears; put some of it into words that show that you have repented. The kind of repentance that pleases Satan is that which stops with the indulgence of grief and does nothing.

Grief.
The blessing of a great grief to the soul capable of feeling a great grief is incalculable. All the fountains of the deep are broken up by it, and the windows of heaven are opened, and as by a flood, the soul is swept away, and as by a flood, the remnant of a new world emerges as the waters subside. While the storm rages the stricken but trusting soul floats on the surface of the wide, wide sea, and waits the glad hour when the clear shining of the sun through the rain shall bring again the rainbow promise of a regenerated life.
In whatever form the cross of suffering be laid upon us, however light it be, however heavy it be, there is good concealed in it, and to be distilled from it into our souls to permeate and sanctify and purify us, and make us able to minister to others in their afflictions; but whether the inflow upon us of that precious good, so concealed and so distilled, shall be free or less free will depend always upon the spirit with which we bear it. We cannot become injured to pain, no matter how long we bear it; pain is always pain; but to bear it patiently, uncomplainingly, and without permitting any bitterness or repining to shade our patience, develops in the soul its noblest qualities, gives clearness of spiritual vision, strength of understanding, fixedness of purpose, and a settled and resolute character. "Made perfect through suffering," is a phrase we apply to those natures who, having borne without murmuring poverty, loss, bereavement, sickness, vicissitude, are by all these instrumentalities purged of the grosser elements that mar our common humanity, and made clear, refined, and pure. Borne meekly, patiently, rejoicingly, pain may be the perfecting in us of what makes us like Him who without suffering was not made perfect.

A Court of Arbitration.
All Christians, moralists, philanthropists, patriots—yea, all men in a hundred who have common sense and any regard for the welfare of mankind, as nations and as individuals, should all be gathered together to establish, as soon as possible, a High Court of Arbitration, for the just and peaceable settlement of all difficulties in and between nations, and thereby remove all excuses and plausibilities for war, the greatest of crimes, and the greatest disgrace of nations. But it is a sad fact that the people of America, and Europe, are indifferent to the idea of settling their disputes by arbitration, as if war has been so long in the world, it must be expected and continued for a long time to come, even to the "millennium," and, more sad still, many in all nations who do not directly oppose Arbitration, as they see that it is so reasonable, and that it is so necessary, as if it would forever destroy their profitable business of building forts, battle-ships, and instruments and powers of war, and feeding and clothing armies, which, especially in Europe, is a continual source of large income.
The great standing disgrace and sin of the Christian world, at the present time, is the upholding, voluntarily, of the gigantic and monstrous War System, which does not have any tendency, or power to prevent war, but whose inclination is toward war. How long shall this needless, barbarous, expensive, and demoralizing system continue? Let the great Christian world answer.—J. H. in Messenger of Peace.

A little Boston boy, aged six, is a very imaginative temperament. Quilt at recently his mother noticed that at bed-time each night he laid his little boots together upon their sides, instead of setting them upright.
"Pray tell me why you always place your boots that way?" asked mamma; and the child replied:
"Because they must be tired walking so much all day I lay them sideways so that they can rest."
