How to Save Drowning People.

A new method of resuscitating drowning people has been discovered by Mr. Sutton, the harbor master of Washington. There has always been an unusually large number of deaths from drowning on the river front about Washington. There have been several narrow escapes here in the past week, and the ones who were fortunate enough to have lived owe their lives to a great extent, if not entirely to Mr. Sutton's new method. Mr. Sutton says that when other and older methods fail to revive the persons that his treatment will prove efficacious. He does not claim that it will restore life, but says that if a spark of vitality is left in the body the patiant will revive under his sait treatment. When old methods prove of no value Mr. Sutton unclothes the unfortunate person and literally buries him in sait, leaving only the nostrils and month exposed. The sait not only sets up an irritation, but absorbs the water and moisture of the body so rapidly as to soon restore the heart to operation. The patient may have to lie several hours before life is noticeable. This treatment is continued until breathing is restored and consciousness sets in. How to Save Drowning People.

ENEMY OF CORN CROP.

small Caterpillar Threatens Southern Crop-Means Used to Destroy Atlanta Journal.

The corn crop of the South is threatened with total loss by the destructive onslaught of the larger cotton stalk borer, a new enemy that has come to devastate the fields of grow-that has come to devastate the fields of growing grain.

Many letters have been received by State Entomologist Scott from farmers in all selections of the State, and he has received quite an interesting collection of the worm and the stalks upon which be finds his existence.

The worm is hatched from the eggs of a moth that lays on the young stalk of corn. The period of hatching requires little more than a week, and the moment the new-born pest opens its eyes in the new world he begins boring his way into the heart of the stalk, killing and poisoning the life of the plant.
