Lying west of the village on an estate of wo hundred acres the spacious mansion, in the Georgian style of architecture, modified by the spirit of the French renais sance, lends a distinguished air to the land scape. The main entrance, where there is a garden with vases and statuary, looks to the north. On the south the wild forest growth has been allowed to remain in its natural state. The Italian garden, covering several acres, extends to the court which is larger than the mansion itself, and contains a riding school, a racquet court lawn tennis court, squash courts, bowling alley, automobile room, gymnasium, swim ming bath. HORRIBLE MASSACRE

Infantry and Cavalry Charge the Riotous Mobs of Citizens-Father Gopon, the Labor Leader, at the Head of Thousands of Workmen Pleads to See the Czar -Mounted Cossacks Wreak Terrible Havoc With Sword and Pistol-Ambulances Prepared For the Carnage-Innocent On-Lookers Made Victims of the Government's Revenge-Ominous Outlook For the Czar.

St. Petersburg, Russia.-The sacri- | frozen river and canals on the ice by fice has been made. Thousands have fallen, willing martyrs in the cause of human liberty, in the belief that their blood will seal the doom of Russian tyranny and oppression.

Not since the massacre of St. Bartholomew's Day has a civilized community witnessed such a massacre as stains the latest page of Russian history. Its victims cannot yet be numbered. The official estimate puts the number of dead at 2100 and the wounded at

The last act of the bloody drama was the deliberate slaughter of hundreds of onlookers in the centre of the city. After all the organized attempts of the insurrectionists to march to the Winter Palace had failed, a large body of Cossacks was turned loose by the authorities against 50,000 people standing in the streets, with orders to kill without mercy.
The murderous command was obeyed to the letter. The carnage which followed has no parallel in modern record. The fierce horsemen cut down with their sabres all within reach. Those who fled were shot at with revolvers and carbines.

It is said that the authorities committed this atrocity with the deliberate purpose of terrorizing not only St. Petersburg but all Russia, and quenching the rising flames of revolution throughout the Empire.

Never was there a greater mistake. Instead of exciting terror, the massacre has already inspired a rage such as nothing but revenge will satisfy. This found its first expression an hour ago, when a crowd surrounded an old man in a General's uniform riding in a carriage. They tore him from the vehicle and killed him. Ghastly, indeed, would this day's work of slaughter have been if it had been the result of a sudden outcall of the troops to save the city and its rulers from an overwhelming force of bloodthirsty revolutionists, but more horrible than the massacre itself is the story of how it was brought about. It was not the outcome of mad passion, but was a cold, deliberate plan of Russia's rulers. Every man killed was liberately spared Father Gopon. One bering 200, at Slavini, in the Caucasus, carefully shepherded to his death.

Every one has wondered why during the last few days the strikers were allowed to meet and organize their peaceful demands in practical freedom. It might have seemed to be the dawn of more lenient treatment, but it was in reality the Government's method of collecting its victims, that its blow might fall more surely and more Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I wish to give deadly.

The police themselves proved this, for they define their own position in the following terms: "We were forbidden to prevent any spread of the strike or development of revolution. We were ordered to stand aside, and it was left to grow ripe for the army. Minister of the Interior Sviatopolk-Mirsky presented to his Majesty at night the invitation of the workmen to appear at the Winter Palace the following afternoon and receive their petition, but the Emperor's advisers had already taken the decision to show a firm and resolute front, and the Emperor's answer to the 100,000 workmen trying to force their way to the Palace Square was a solid array of troops who met them with rifle, bayonet and sabre.

The figures of the total number killed or wounded at the Narva Gate, the Moscow Gate, at various bridges and islands, and at the Winter Palace vary. The best estimate is 500, although there are exaggerated figures placing the number as high as 5000.

Many men were accompanied by their wives and children, and in the confusion, which left no time for discrimination, these shared the fate of the men. The troops, with the exception of the Moscow Regiment, which is reported to have thrown down its arms, remained loyal and obeyed orders. The military authorities had a firm grip on every artery in the city. At daybreak guard regiments, cavalry and infantry held every bridge across the the men in the front ranks sank to frozen Neva, the network of canals their knees and both companies fired which interlace the city, and the gates leading from the industrial section, while in the Palace Square, as the storm centre, were massed Dragoon regiments, infantry, and Cossacks of the Guards.

Cossack charges. Men and women, infuriated to frenzy by the loss of loved ones, cursed the soldiers while they retreated. Men harangued the crowds, telling them that the Emperor had foiled them and that the time had come to act. Strikers began to build barracades in the Nevsky Prospect and at other points, using any material that came to hand, and even chopping down telegraph poles.

Fighting meantime continued at va rious places, soldiers firing volleys and charging the mob. The whole city was in a state of panic. Women were running through the streets seeking lost members of their families. Several barricades were carried by the troops Toward 8 o'clock in the evening the crowds, exhausted, began to disperse eaving the military in possession. As they retreated up the Nevsky Prospect the workmen put out all the lights. The little chapel at the Narva Gate was wrecked.

On Kaminostov Island all the lights were extinguished. There was a very dramatic scene at the Narva Gate when Father Gopon, in golden vestments and bearing aloft an ikon, and flanked by two clergymen carrying religious banners, approached at the head of a procession of 8000 workmen. Troops were drawn up across the entrance. Several times an officer called upon the procession to stop, but Father Gopon did not falter. Then an order was given to fire, first with blank cart ridges. Two volleys rang out, but the line still did not waver. Then, with seeming reluctance, an officer gave the command to load with ball, and the next volley was followed by shricks of the wounded.

As the Cossacks followed up the volley with a charge the workmen fled before them, leaving about 100 dead dispatch from Constantinople to the or wounded. It was evident that the soldiers de ed and killed the Russian guard, num-wounded, but he escaped untouched numbers were crossing the frontier into and hid behind a wall until the Cossacks had passed. He was then spirit ed away by workmen. At the Palace Square early in the morning a considerable crowd of demonstrators lined the railings of the Ad miralty Gardens and Boulevard. The square itself presented the appearance of a military encampment.

Several companies of the Pavlovsky and Preobrajensky Guards had piled their arms, while the men were sitting around campfires or stamping on the snow to keep warm. Beyond the infantry stood squadrons of the Chevalier Guards and the Horse Guards, with out their lances, cuirasses or the usual gay trappings.

A whole row of ambulances drawn up near the palace served as a grim reminder of the stern business on hand.

The order came at 1.30 p. m. to clear off the crowd. The Colonel commanding the Horse Guards uttered a short. sharp command; the troopers drew their swords and advanced at a quick trot, and then broke into a gallop, headed straight for the Moika. Shrieks from the wounded resounded

Then came silence, broken only by the galloping of ambulance horses At the corner of the Admiralty Gardens the crowd persisted in refusing to move on.

Two companies of the Preobrajensky Guards, of which Emperor Nicholas himself was formerly Colonel, which had been standing at ease in front of the palace, formed up and marched at double quick toward the fatal corner. Events followed with awful swift-

The commanding officer shouted "Disperse! Disperse!" Many in the crowd turned to flee, but it was too late. A bugle sounded and three volleys, the first two with blank cartridges and the last with ball. A hundred corpses strewed the side walk. Many women through the back as they were trying to escape.

TUCKER DECLARED GUILT

Decision in Notorious Murder Trial Reached After Long Debate.

Defendant, the Declared Murderer of Mabel Page in Weston, Mass., Last March

-Counsel Overcome at Verdict.

Cambridge, Mass .- Chas, L. Tucker, of Auburndale, at 10.10 o'clock at night was found guilty of the murder, in the first degree, of Miss Mabel Page in her father's home, in Weston, on March 31 last. The jury were eight hours in reaching their decision. Tucker collapsed utterly when the verdict was announced, and his counsel were unable to revive him for some time.

A surprising feature was the effect of the announcement of the verdict upon the attorneys, not only for the prisoner, but for the Commonwealth. James H. Vahey, the senior counsel for the prisoner, was greatly affected, and when he left the courtroom he met Attorney-General Herbert Parket in the corridor. The leading counsel for the Commonwealth showed the result of the strain to such a degree that he threw his arms around Mr. Vahey's neck, and both men wept on each other's shoulders.

Philip Mansfield, one of the associate counsel for the youthful prisoner, beof a reporter who had gone to the room of the defendant's counsel to secure an interview. Many spectators and friends of the prisoner wept bitterly when they realized the young man's fate.

The penalty is death in the electric chair at the State prison in Charlestown, about a mile from the scene of the trial. The convicted man will be sentenced later.

One of the dramatic incidents of the trial occurred in the morning when, Attorney-General Parker having con-cluded his argument, the young prisoner unexpectedly accepted his constitutional privilege of addressing the jury in his own behalf. Rising in his cage, he asserted, at first trembling and flushing deeply, but later with con-siderable confidence. his innocence of the crime. Judge Sheldon then delivered the charge to the jury.

Miss Mabel Page, who was forty-one years of age, lived in a small country dwelling house with her father, Edward Page, formerly a Boston mer-chant, and her brother Harold. She was stabbed to death with a knife on March 31, 1904. Basing his examination upon the appearance of the wound found in the neck, the only wound at first visible, the medical examiner reported that Miss Page had committed suicide, and it was not until an undertaker had discovered other wounds that it was established that the woman had met death at the hands of an assassin.

Government's case against The Tucker included the charge that a slip of paper bearing the address, "J. L. Morton, Charlestown, Mass.," found beside the body of Miss Page, was in the handwriting of the defendant; that a stickpin found in his pocket had been stolen by him from the Page home, and that broken pieces of a knife blace found in his home were parts of the knife with which he had stabbed Miss

The evidence against Tucker was entirely circumstantial.
