GOOD ROADS BY RAIL.

TRAINLOAD OF EXPERTS ON EDUCATIONAL TOUR.

Third Train That Has Been Sent Out by the National Association—South to Be Taught to Build Highways Scientifically.

A train of twelve cars, known as the "Good Roads Special," left Washington early in November to stop at ten or twelve of the chief cities reached by the system and aid in organizing good roads associations and at the same time give a practical illustration of modern roadmaking.

The train carried a full equipment of roadmaking machinery and a party of eighteen persons, all skilled in the manufacture of good dirt and macadam roads. It is the third such train to be organized through the efforts of the National Good Roads Association, one having been sent along the route of the Illinois Central from April to July and a second having traversed the district between Chicago and Buffalo along the routes of the Lake Shore route and the New York Central.

Mr. Martin Dodge, director of the office of public road inquiries in the agricultural department, and M. O. Edridge, his assistant, with Mr. W. H. Moore, president of the National Good Roads Association, are in charge of the "Good Roads Special." Under their direction fourteen road experts, Mr. H. W. Richardson, secretary of the national association, and several clerks will undertake to organize in each of the cities visited a permanent good roads association. To this end they will confer with the mayor and city council of each city and the officers of its commercial organizations, arrange that a suitable haul shall be hired and obtain the use of ten or twelve teams, as many men and a sufficient supply of crushed stone to construct a length of good road as a sample.

When the train arrives, the engineers will begin at once to build about a mile of dirt road with the teams, men and materials furnished by the locality. They will then surface or macadamize as much of that road as their time will permit. When the practicability of the movement has been thus manifested, the mayor and commercial organizations will unite in a call for a public meeting to organize an association.

President Moore of the National Good Roads Association says of the project: "The south can have good roads if it will, and the sooner the citizens get together and work along some well organized and practical line these results will be reached the quicker. There is nothing that will do more to increase the value of virgin lands and advance the development of the rural districts than well constructed public roads. The improvement of the road system will have a wonderful effect upon stimulating the settlement of people on farms, and as these settlements are being made so will the value of the land increase.

"Wherever a city or town is found possessing well made roadways leading therefrom you will find the business of that point is in a prosperous condition. Therefore the citizens of every town in the south will be promoting their own interests if they give this movement their moral and if necessary financial support.

"It is hoped that every state, county, city and town officer will give this subject of better roads serious consideration and then take the matter in hand immediately and show his constituents that the movement for better roads will receive his utmost consideration and utmost co-operation.

"It is universally decided that good roads are what we want. In order to secure them we must pull together, working systematically and on practical lines. This grand tour, planned by the Southern Railway company, is a signal for action. If the states visited are not alive to this and do not avail themselves of the opportunity to secure information rendered by the good roads special train, no one will be at fault except the citizens of the states in which the exhibits are made."

Grades of Roads.

The grade is the most important factor to be considered in the location of roads. The smoother the road surface the less the grade should be. Whether the road be constructed of earth, stone or gravel, steep grades should always be avoided if possible. They become covered at times with coatings of ice or slippery soil, making them very difficult to ascend with loaded vehicles, as well as dangerous to descend. They allow water to rush down at such a rate as to wash great gaps alongside or to carry the surfacing material away. As the grade increases in steepness either the load has to be diminished in proportion or more horses or power attached.

HIRAM TILLMAN TUSTEN.

Passes His Eightieth Mile Post Along Life's Way.

"Cold December gave him birth, The month of ice and snow and mirth." On December 10, 1907, Mr. H. T. Tusten, of Abbeville, S. C., celebrated his eightieth birthday. In mind and body he still enjoys life, possessing a competency of this world's goods. He has still with him the wife of his youth, whom he married more than fifty years ago. In 1851 he married Miss Ann Davis, and to them were born several children, three of whom survive, namely: Mr. Walter D. Tusten of New York; Mrs. Gary, wife of Associate Justice Eugene B. Gary, and Mrs. Bradley, wife of Mr. W. W. Bradley, one of the owners of the Press and Banner.

Mr. Tusten's father, James Hartman Tusten, came from Goshen, New York, in 1820 and his people were of the first settlers of the State. His great-grandfather, Col. Ben Tusten, was a member of the Colonial Congress. He also did service as a soldier, having had charge at one time of all the Colonial forces of the Indians about Goshen. Col. Ben Tusten, Jr., grand-father of Mr. H. T. Tusten, was a physician and was the first to introduce vaccination for smallpox in the United States. He suffered many heavy fines for what was then thought to be impracticable.

An interesting story is related of the death of Col. Ben Tusten, Jr. A noted Indian chief, Brandt, whose father was a white man, stirred up the Indians about Goshen to insurrection. The Indians in great numbers were devastating the country about Goshen. The white people organized for the purpose of protection, and wise heads advised that they were too few in numbers to advance on the Indians. Some hot heads advised immediate pursuit, but Col. Tusten urged the men to wait until their forces could be strengthened. One of the speakers made use of the expression, "Let the cowards stay at home."

When Col. Tusten found that his people would not follow his advice, he said, "If they will not go with me I will go with them." About forty miles from the settlement the little party was surrounded by the Indians and every man was put to death except the fire eater who advised pursuit. Col. Ben Tusten had established a kind of hospital between two large rocks in the field—and there, administering to the wounded and tending the cholera victims, he was killed. A beautiful marble shaft was erected to the memory of Col. Ben Tusten in the streets of Goshen. Mr. Tusten among other things was a very cheerful and sunny disposition. Discouraged at nothing, he always looked forward hopefully and cheerfully. The darkness and the gloom that at times came over him never gave him a sense that he did not see the silver lining of the sun beyond the clouds. Of Mr. Tusten it may be said that he was a man of a high character, but Col. Tusten urged the men to wait until their forces could be strengthened. One of the speakers made use of the expression, "Let the cowards stay at home."

ing the society of his friends. No man living knows the city or the county as well as he does. His age and his retentive memory make him more familiar with the history of the people and things hereabout than it is possible for others to be. Aside from his cheerfulness, and his love for doing little deeds of kindness, or speaking cheery words, he is noted for the love of his children. There never was an hour that he was not watchful of their best interests.

GEMS IN VERSE

Now and Then. All of us commit mistakes. Now and then. Some of us make serious breaks. Now and then. We are apt to set the pace in the hustling worldly race. With more recklessness than grace. Now and then. We are fond of breaking out. Now and then. And we go too far, no doubt. Now and then. Yes, indeed, 'tis nothing new to be sorry, through and through. For the foolish things we do. Now and then. Well, we only really live. Now and then. Other's faults we can forgive. Now and then. At our own, then, let us wink; Of their sin we'd fain think. If we didn't sort of sink. Now and then. —Milwaukee Sentinel.

Any Soul to Any Body. So we must part, my body, you and I. Who've spent so many pleasant years together! 'Tis sorry work to lose your company, Who clove to me so close, what'er the reason. From winter unto winter, wet or dry. But you have reached the limit of your tether. And I must journey on my way alone. And leave you quietly beneath a stone. They say that you are altogether bad! (Forgive me, 'tis not my experience) And think me very wicked to be sad. At leaving you, a cloud, a prison, whence To get quite free I should be very glad. Perhaps I may be so some few days hence. But now, methinks, 'twere graceless not to spend A tear or two on my departing friend. Now our long partnership is near completed. And I look back upon its history. I greet you once so very proud of you! You with the honesty you showed to me. And I must own that you have oft deceived. Unworthy schemes by your sneer and And by a blush or stammering tongue have tried To make me think again before I fled. 'Tis true you're not so handsome as you were. But that's not your fault, and is partly true. You might have lasted longer with more care. And still looked something like your first design. And even now, with all your wear and tear, 'Tis pitiful to think I must resign. You to the friendless grave, the patient friend Of all the hungry legions of decay. But you must stay, dear body, and I go. And I was once so very proud of you! You made my mother's eyes overflow When first she saw you, wonderful and new. And now, with all your faults, 'twere best to let you go. A slave more willing or a friend more true. Aye, even they who say the worst about you, Can scarcely tell what I shall do without you. —Como Monks-house.

Within the Reach of All. The gift of beauty lies within the reach Of all who seek it. You who scan in vain Your candid mirrors, showing but how plain Are the reflected features, I beseech You to the lesson I would teach. The best cosmetics in the heart and brain Their beauty bringing qualities obtain; Laborious make-up things I can hide; A noble impulse in the cause of right, With finer fairness, dowers the humblest face; Pure thoughts and self forgetting love will light The homeliest features with a heavenly grace. Lending a loveliness not age's night Nor even Death himself shall quite efface. —Edward A. Church.

Plaint of the Plutoocrat. I have bought everything I can buy; I have tried everything I can try; I have eaten and drunk and eaten, Beaten each beatable; I have eyed everything I can eye. I have sold everything I can sell; I have told everything I can tell; I have setted all the settable, Squeezed all the squeezable, Till they have shelled everything they can shell. I have ridden each thing I can ride; I have ridden each thing I can hide; I have joked all the jokeable, Soaked all the soakable, I have slid everything I could slide. I have talked everything I could talk; I have talked everything I could talk; I have kissed all the kissable, Hissed all the hissable; I have balked everything I can balk. I have crushed every one I could crush; I have hushed every one I could hush; I have drunk everything drinkable, Thought every thinkable; I have rushed everywhere I could rush. I have been everything I could be; And the scheme of things will not agree. I have spent all that's spendable; Still it's not endable. And I mean it's a bother to me. —Chicago Tribune.

Life. A little cry of fear through which Your heart is won; Two eyes with sudden wonder filled, And life's begun. The tears of childhood and the play That soon pass past; The triumph at the altar when The bond is fast. The striving after things whereby Men measure worth; The wrinkles and the thinning hair, The growing grith. The rounded shoulders and the hopes That one by one Die off until the last goes out, And life is done. Discoveries. Little drops of knowledge, Little grains of sense, Solve the mighty problem Of the home expense. Had the little leakage Earlier been checked, Then the mighty vessel Never had been wrecked. Thus the golden trifles Make the sum of life, Making home an Eden, Or an endless strife. —Good Housekeeping.
