

WHO THEY ARE.

Names of Candidates For Senate and State Officers.

CAMPAIGN NOW OPEN

There Are Five Candidates for the United States Senate, Two For Governor, Three for Superintendent of Education, Five for Railroad Commissioner, and Only One for Each of the Other State Offices.

The political campaign in this State may be said to be fairly open now, and soon it will be in full blast from the mountain to the sea. The County Conventions meet on Monday, May 4, and the State Convention will meet on May 20. Candidates are being brought out by their friends, and soon they will be all out. The candidates for United States Senator are:

Messrs. O. B. Martin, John Gary Evans, George Johnstone, E. D. Smith and D. C. Heyward. From expressions in the county press, it appears to be the opinion that the race is between Ex-Gov. Evans and Ex-Gov. Heyward, but Mr. Martin seems to object to the promulgation of this opinion, and doubtless the other candidates do also, but they do not express themselves as does Mr. Martin.

Some Past History.
In 1902, when Messrs. Evans and Johnstone were also candidates for the senate, the vote in the first primary stood:

William Elliott, 13,658.
John Gary Evans, 17,893.
J. J. Hemphill, 13,261.
D. S. Henderson, 13,771.
Geo. Johnstone, 13,556.
A. C. Latimer, 22,971.
Total 95,110.

The second primary was between Evans and Latimer, and in the second election Mr. Evans received 36,371 votes and Mr. Latimer 53,890. Mr. Latimer being elected by a majority of 17,519, over Mr. Evans. Mr. Evans had been defeated for the senate by John L. McLaurin in 1897 and again by Joseph H. Earle in 1896.

In the year 1902, Capt. Heyward made his entry into politics and the vote in the first primary resulted as follows:

D. C. Heyward, 36,551.
M. F. Ansel, 17,685.
W. J. Talbert, 18,218.
J. H. Tillman, 16,398.
W. H. Timmerman, 6,515.
Total, 96,367.

The second race was between Heyward and Talbert and the vote resulted: Heyward, 50,330; Talbert, 40,494. Capt. Heyward being elected by a majority of 10,336. In 1904 Gov. Heyward was re-elected without opposition.

The year 1902, also saw the political debut of Hon. O. B. Martin, who in that year was first a candidate for the office of state superintendent of education against Hon. John J. McMahon, receiving 48,850 votes against 45,891 for Mr. McMahon, there being only two contestants. Since then Mr. Martin has not had opposition for this office, being re-elected in 1904 and 1906.

The Gubernatorial Race.
The withdrawal of Mr. Featherstone from the race for governor leaves the Hon. C. L. Bleese, senator from Newberry, as the only candidate against Gov. Ansel. Mr. Bleese was always a stalwart state dispensary supporter and since that institution's abolition he has come out on an extended local option platform. Gov. Ansel on the other hand announced his platform this year to be restricted local option, favoring a law making the entire state prohibition with the right to counties to exempt themselves by majority vote and sell whiskey through county dispensaries.

In 1906, when he was elected, governor, Mr. Ansel favored the present county option system, and in 1902, when he was defeated, he favored the state dispensary as "the best solution of the liquor question." Before that time he had been regarded as a prohibitionist. Mr. Ansel, who is a man of positive personal convictions has always been a close student of popular sentiment and his successive platforms indicate the trend of public opinion in this state fairly well during the last few years. That the prohibitionists will be content to have such a law enacted as Mr. Ansel now advocates seems evident from Mr. Featherstone's withdrawal.

Other State Offices.
Mr. Martin not being a candidate for re-election the way is open for a new man in the office of State Superintendent of Education. County Superintendent of Education E. C. Elmore, of Spartanburg, was the first to announce and he has made a preliminary campaign. County Superintendent S. R. Mellichamp, of Orangeburg, was next to announce and he has also done much work. Recently Prof. J. E. Swearingen, of Cedar Springs Institute announced his candidacy.

The office of railroad commissioner is always contested for. Commissioner Caughman's term expires and he is a candidate for re-election. So far it is known that he will have opposition from Mr. J. A. Summersett, of Columbia, Major Fishburne, of Charleston, Major H. W. Richardson, of Columbia, "Candler of Tirzah," and perhaps others.

It appears now that the other state officials will not have opposition. Secretary of State McCown, Attorney General Lyon, Comptroller General Jones, State Treasurer Jennings, Adjutant General Boyd. However, the campaign has just started; and the election is yet four months off, but the entries for state offices close in June.

In 1906 the total vote in the first

LEVER HAS BEEN SICK

And Everybody Seems to Miss Him Says a Correspondent.

The Washington correspondent of The News and Courier says Representative Lever has been greatly missed from his accustomed place in the House during the past week. His enforced absence has been noted by many people, who have asked where the little Congressman from South Carolina has gone. When told that he was ill, there have been many expressions of regret and sympathy.

Mr. Lever is a friend of the newspaper man, and all of the Southern press boys know there will be something worth writing about when he is around. He likes the newspaper men, and they are fond of him. He has never reached the state when he felt too proud to come out of the House when sent for and say that he had no news when asked for it if he had none. Nor has he ever sent a newspaper man away feeling other than better for having seen him. He is the correspondents friend always.

WILD ELEPHANT NUISANCE.

Hindustani Planters Complain of Damage Done by Pachyderms.

At Calcutta, India, the Doors Planters' Association has appealed to the government for help in ridding the country of wild elephants, whose pranks are becoming intolerable. Though no actual "rogues" are reported or loss of life, crops are said to be trampled on, fences torn down, roofs pulled off, and many roads rendered impassable by the patrolling of these mischievous pachyderms. The most serious matter, however, is interruption of railway traffic, for the brutes exhibit a queer predilection for wandering on the line, which is a narrow gauge, and therefore renders the trains specially liable to derailment should they meet an obstacle when running at night or round curves in the day time.

PICKED UP AT SEA.

Wrecked Off Charleston and Rescued by Yacht.

The steam yacht Columbia arrived at New York from Florida on Tuesday with three fishermen on board, rescued from their sinking boat in a gale off Charleston. The three men sailed from Charleston in the fishing smack Star on April 17. The next day they were caught in a gale in which the smack lost her mast and most of her sails. When the derelict was sighted the sea was running so high that the Columbia could not lower her boats. The yacht approached the Star so near that ropes could be thrown to the fishermen, who were then hauled on board the Columbia. Their friends in Charleston had about given them up as lost.

HEIRS OF GARRETSON.

Information Wanted of a Captain in the United States Army.

The Charleston Post says Postmaster W. L. Harris has received a letter from Attorneys Lyon & Lyon of Washington, D. C., asking for information about heirs of one Charles Garretson, a captain in the United States army, who died in Charleston in 1871. The letter states that it is very much to the interest of the heirs that they should be known and Postmaster Harris, desiring to contribute his services to the cause, will be glad to receive any information in the matter that he may be able to forward to the Washington attorneys.

INUNCTIONS PERMANENT.

Temporary Orders Issued by Justice Gary Made Perpetual.

Charleston blind tigers will have to behave themselves or go to jail. The Supreme Court Tuesday evening rendered decisions in 8 of the Charleston dispensary injunction cases, the temporary injunctions previously granted by Associate Justice Gary being in each case made permanent, the opinion of the Court being written by Justice Gary. These are cases additional to those in which permanent injunctions have already been granted on the petition of the Attorney General.

SOLD FOR BRYAN.

The Alabama Delegation Instructed to Vote for Him.

A dispatch from Birmingham, Ala., says in compliance with the primary plan that two hundred or more qualified Democratic voters may place the name of any Democratic on the ticket for nominee for President on the United States, to be voted direct, John W. Tompkins, president of the Bryan Democratic State club has filed with the chairman of the State Democratic committee a petition signed by the Governor and every State official and over two thousand other Democrats for the name of William J. Bryan to be placed on the ticket, delegates to the Democratic national convention being instructed, under the plan, to vote as a unit for the man receiving the largest vote, which gives Alabama's twenty-two votes to William J. Bryan.

Drank Gasoline.

Helen, the 19-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Odum of Greenville, drank a bottle of gasoline and died twenty minutes later on Wednesday.

primary ran to about 97,000 and there was much interest in the race for governor and attorney general as well as for the legislatures and county offices. With a warm fight for state and county offices this year, the total vote may go to 100,000. At any rate, to win the candidate should make sure of at least fifty thousand votes.

A MONEY MAKER.

COUNTY DISPENSARIES ARE MONEY GETTING INSTITUTIONS.

Have Done About Same Business as Former State Dispensary With Much More Profit.

During the quarter ending March 31 the county dispensaries sold $790,964.01 worth of whiskey in 24 counties, of which one has since gone dry. On this business an average profit of 39 per cent. was made, the total profit being $268,941.98. This is at the rate of over a million dollars a year profit.

According to the statement recently prepared by Comptroller General Jones the state dispensary during its thirteen years of business paid into the state treasury for all purposes the sum of $1,515,107.57.

The proportion of profit paid to the counties and towns varied at different times, but the total profit of the State dispensary, even when there were dispensaries in forty-one counties did not reach one million dollars per year, or thirteen million dollars in the years that it was in operation. According to the report made by Dispensary Auditor West to Governor Ansel at the close of the fiscal year the total amount of sales by the county dispensaries during the nine and a fraction months they were operated in 1907 was $2,691,663.43, on which the net profit declared was $655,056.61.

The business for a full year, or 12 months, runs easily in excess of three million dollars, which was the high water mark for the state dispensary, while the profit of the county dispensary system for twelve months runs in excess of one million dollars, which the state dispensary never did attain, though its founder predicted it would.

Though there are now dispensaries in only twenty-four counties the profit from the county dispensary system is proportionately so much greater than from the state dispensary, and it is distributed between the county and towns, that as a revenue producer the county dispensary is going to prove more popular than the old system, and for that reason, if for no other, it is more difficult to vote it out than it was to close the county dispensaries under the so-called Brice Act under the state dispensary regime, when prejudices and antagonism to the state dispensary had something to do with the large prohibition vote cast in several counties of the state.

GIRL WITH FLEET.

She Made the Trip on the Supply Ship Brutus.

As a result of a story circulated in Pittsburg by Elmer E. Day, who was a civilian passenger on the supply ship Brutus, attached to the Pacific fleet, that a girl stowaway made the passage through the straits of Magellan with the fleet, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Newberry has taken steps to ascertain if a man named Day was aboard the Brutus. "It does not seem possible that a girl could secrete herself aboard one of the vessels," said Mr. Newberry. "I believe it would be almost possible to hide a ham, or even a cigarette. The person who circulated the story kept the girl aboard too long. He should have had her discovered sooner."

According to Day's story, the girl boarded the Brutus at Trinidad and made the trip around the point of the southern continent and landed in Peru.

USED HER GUN FREELY.

White Woman in Tennessee Goes on the War Path.

At Memphis, Tenn., following a quarrel because she had stopped her children from playing with some negroes, Mrs. James Wright shot and instantly killed Leila Gordon, a negro woman. Mrs. Wright used a single-barreled shot gun and her one shot tore an arm completely from the negro woman's body.

Rushing into her home, Mrs. Wright re-loaded the shot-gun and started in pursuit of Mary Davis, another negro woman. She shot at her once after a chase of nearly a block, but the shot went wild. Police officers from the Webster avenue station arrested Mrs. Wright a few minutes later and she was locked up on a charge of murder.

A quarrel over the children of the white woman being stopped from playing with some negroes living in the vicinity was the cause of the tragedy.

KILLED IN WRECK.

Over Fifty Are Dead and About Ninety Injured.

Forty-two bodies have been taken out of the wreckage caused by the collision which happened on April 19 of two trains at Braybrook Junction, about eight miles from Melbourne, Australia. It is believed that several others are still buried under the debris. The number of injured is placed at eighty-eight.

Little Boy Killed.

Martin, the little son of Mrs. John E. Fletcher of the Pine Grove section of Marlboro county, died at 1:45 p. m., as the result of injuries received in a runaway accident Sunday.

Mrs. Fletcher was returning from church with her son and daughter. A break in the harness frightened the horse and caused it to run away. Martin was first thrown out, his head striking a log. The little girl was next thrown from the vehicle, but her injuries are not serious.

A MATRIMONIAL ADVERTISEMENT

By Ethel May Shorey.

"And still they come!" exclaimed Willis Clayton as he entered his airy little office in the Oxford building and saw the package of envelopes on his desk. Large envelopes and small of all tints and shades, and with a few exceptions each highly perfumed. "It's a ducal of a nuisance now," he muttered as he tore open envelope after envelope, merely glancing at the contents and invariably giving each a toss into the waste basket, with curling lips. "Twenty-four this noon, that makes 119 in three days—119 foolish girls! Ah, this one inclosed the notice itself, 'A young bachelor, good looking plenty of money, desires to communicate with eligible young lady—matrimony. Address Clay. P. O. 25.'"

"When Jack made the bet with me I scorned the idea that any girl would be unwise enough to even think of answering such a nonsensical advertisement. Well, I've lost, and a box of good cigars goes to him evidently. At first it was interesting, then amusing, and now, well, rather disgusting." Suddenly he paused, staring incredulously at a photograph he had just taken from a plain little envelope—a smiling sunny face returned his gaze, and two big trusting eyes, shaded by wavy hair falling about a high forehead, looked into his.

"It is!" he exclaimed at last with a deep breath. "She was the last one in the world I thought would stop to such a thing, but there can be no mistake," and he stared long and earnestly at the picture, entirely ignoring the accompanying letter.

"How many times does a fellow have to rap to be admitted to this sanctum sanctorum?" asked a merry voice as its owner put his head inside the door.

"Beg pardon, Frank, I didn't hear you," answered Clayton, slipping the picture of that sweet face under a pile of papers. "Did you knock?"

"Did I knock! Several times, my dear boy. Aren't you feeling well? Look as if you'd seen a ghost. Who is she?"

"Well, it is a she this time," Clayton laughingly replied. "And I don't even know her name. Your acquaintance among the fair sex is not as limited as mine; perhaps you can assist me. I see her nearly every morning, as early as 6:30 or 7 o'clock, on horseback riding through Westbury street—a beautiful girl with fluffy brown hair—"

"Wears a gray habit, doesn't she?" interrupted Frank, a strange little gleam in his eyes.

"Yes, yes, do you know her?" "If it's the one I think, you must be referring to my cousin, and if you've been putting her on a pedestal you can't make it a bit too high."

"Your cousin?" "Yes, and the dearest, sweetest, little thing you ever saw. Are you coming to slaps? I suppose you have received her invitation?"

"No, but I haven't been all through my mail yet—why?" "Because Queensie will be there and I'll introduce you. Her real name is Marjorie, but we've always called her Queensie on account of the imperious, yet modest, little ways she has."

Impertinent—modest! Involuntarily Clayton's hand fumbled with the pile of letters underneath which lay the picture face of this girl, giving the lie direct to her cousin's eulogy.

"There's Kit's invitation now; I know her writing," exclaimed Frank digging a plain little envelope from the pile. "Haven't you read it yet?" "Haden't seen it before," responded Clayton.

"Been opened," replied Frank, unceremoniously dragging forth the folded paper. As he scanned the lines a bewildered look stole across his face. "What the dickens—" he began, then stopped, the light of understanding superseding his bewilderment, which ended in a hearty laugh. "One on sis," he cried. "Hear this: Mr. Philip Hanscomb, artist: Dear Sir—Inclosed find the photograph I wish copied life size, and about which I spoke to you yesterday. Sincerely, Katherine Ellis."

Don't you see what she's done? Wrong envelopes! Kit was going to have Queensie's picture copied as a surprise for her father and mother, and she mixed your invitation up with the letter to the artist. Good joke, isn't it? I wonder where she sent the photo."

And again he laughed heartily, while the rapidity with which Clayton set his "pedestal" up again would have done credit to the swiftest express ever known. But he wouldn't part with that picture, and so failed to enlighten Frank.

"I'll see you get your invitation," Frank said as he started for the door, then, as an afterthought, "By the way, speaking of my cousin, I want to tell you the most nonsensical thing she ever did to my knowledge—taken a decided interest in a good-for-nothing chap who looks something like you, and whom she meets nearly every morn—"

After his exit Clayton drew forth the picture from his hiding place and gazed once more at the two big trusting eyes, and it was quite a while after the wedding bells had gaily chimed that Queensie learned from her husband how she had once for a few moments, been credited with answering a matrimonial advertisement.

CURTIS must think that the Democrats of the South are a lot of imbeciles. He says Bryan is the master, although there is a deep resentment and a widespread distrust, the Southern Democrats will nominate him at the convention and at the polls vote for him. Wonder if the people for whom this man Curtis writes believes such stuff as the above which is a fair sample of what he dishes up for them.

SWEPT BY FLOOD.

Fully Three Thousand Persons, Most of Them Poor,

DRIVEN FROM HOME.

The Whole of North Texas Deluged By Heavy Rains.—Every Available Man Is Pressed Into Service by the

Fort Worth Railroad—Traffic Paralyzed—Police Fired Pistols to Warn the People.

Throughout north Texas the heaviest rains in many years are reported, causing tremendous loss to farmers and stock growers flooding lowlands and rendering country roads impassable, hundreds of bridges having been washed away.

At Fort Worth the Trinity river is receding, but street car traffic between Fort Worth and North Fort Worth will not be restored before tomorrow.

By employing every available man in the city and dispatching them in special trains to the seat of the trouble, Fort Worth railroads Saturday actively began to repair the $250,000 damage inflicted by Friday night's storms.

North Fort Worth is isolated and five hundred houses are submerged. Mineral City, near Weatherford, is under water, and Cleburne, south of here on the Santa Fe, is surrounded by the flood. Engineer Long and Fireman Allsup were found dead under their engine. Their train left the track in a washout a mile north of Cleburne.

The flood sufferers have been provided with shelter. Crops over a large area have been destroyed and the loss will reach over half a million dollars. All night the police fired a continual volley of shots to warn residents in the flood district.

That the storm was the worst experienced in north and west Texas in half a century is indicated by reports. From Grayson county on the east to Potter county in the far northwest and southwest to Tom Green county, about one-third of the entire area of the State, the country is literally covered with water, all modes of travel are demoralized and business is practically suspended.

In every direction railroad bridges are down, hundreds of yards of track have been washed away entirely and other hundreds of yards so badly undermined that rebuilding will be necessary. If the weather should clear immediately railroad traffic cannot be restored to normal conditions in less than ten days.

The flood reached Fort Worth about noon Saturday. At that time city park and vicinity was inundated to a depth of about ten feet. The tracks of the street railway company leading to Arlington Heights was washed away for a quarter of a mile, and communication with that section of the city was cut off.

Fully three thousand persons, principally of the poorer classes, were driven from their homes, in the submerged district. Many of these are being cared for by charitable organizations at the expense of the city.

The reservoirs and mains of the water works system were overflowed with the muddy water of the river, and before they can be cleared it is feared considerable sickness may result.

While an accurate estimate of the monetary loss at this time is impossible, it is believed the loss will exceed a million dollars.

APPEAL TO TEDDY.

Newspapers Ask Relief From the Paper Trust Exactions.

The annual meeting of the Associated Press was held at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York with an exceptionally large attendance of members from all sections of the country on Tuesday. Aside from the transaction of purely routine business affecting the organization, the most important action taken was the presenting and adoption of an address asking the President and the Congress to "grant immediate relief from the exactions of combinations of paper makers." The association had a banquet on Wednesday night at which W. J. Bryan was the chief speaker.
