Some of the Best Citizens of Abbeville Are Using Burriss' Mental Shingles. Why not you, and help a Home Industry grow to be the Biggest Success in your State.

Anderson, S. C., May 22, 1909.

Messrs. John T. Burriss & Son, Anderson, S. C.
Gentlemen:—Some weeks ago the parsonage of the St. John's Methodist Church, Anderson, S. C., was covered with the Burriss' Metal Shingles. The covering has been tested by rain and hail, and it stands the test. We are delighted with the covering.

A Mighty Good Way to Fertilize the Grain You Sow this Fall is to Use Our 10-4 or Our 10-6 Goods when You Sow Your Grain.

The ten-four goods contain 10 per cent. Available Phosphoric Acid and 4 per cent. Potash, and the ten-six goods contain 10 per cent. Available Phosphoric Acid and 6 per cent. Potash. You can put either of these in the ground when you sow your grain as neither Phosphoric Acid nor Potash will leach out of the soil on account of rains, but stay in the soil until they are taken up as plant food. So, if you fertilize your grain with this fertilizer and the grain stands the winter you can top dress it next spring with either Nitrate of Soda or our specially prepared High Grade Fertilizer for side dressing which is better, as this is heavily charged with Nitrate of Soda and has other High Grade Ammoniates which makes it last longer than Nitrate of Soda when used by itself. If you find that your grain has been killed out during the winter you can use the same ground for corn or cotton in the spring and you have the advantage of the 10-4 and 10-6 goods which is put in the ground at the time you sow your grain, for neither Phosphoric Acid nor Potash leach out of the soil but remain there until taken up as plant food.

We are selling our goods right at our own door and it is necessary for us to make the best goods that can be made. If we shipped them a hundred or a hundred and fifty miles away we might afford them to put out some skimpy goods, but where they are used right at our door it is necessary for us to make the best goods that are made. In proof that we do that we just cite you to the crops made this year where our fertilizer has been used. There is no better fertilizer put in sacks than we are making.

THE LOVELEI.

A Legend of the Rhine.

A Letter from Germany.

Cologne, Sept. 10, 1910.

Editor Press and Banner:

Dear Sir:—Among the many legends of the Rhine the most widely known, perhaps is that of the Lovelei. A few years below the little town Oberwesel there projects into the stream a great broken-off mass of rock called the hurei. This mass of rock causes the stream to be narrower and deeper and swifter here than anywhere else. For that reason the boatmen who went up or down the river by this place needed here all his strength and skill to pass the point safely. It was in the summer of 962 that the Lovelei appeared. From all accounts she must have been a wondrously beautiful maiden, or she would not have caused such a stir of excitement as she did. She had blue eyes and yellow hair, but unfortunately she had no hairpins, and not being able to fix up her hair (she had grown too old to plait it any more, so she thought) she sat there on the top of the cliff, combing her hair and singing. The reason Lovelei sat thus out on the headland instead of going home and arranging her coiffure was two-fold. First her comb was of pure gold, and the young lady properly thought that there was no use having a golden comb unless others could see and admire it. Then she had an idea that this particular spot was more favorable for her beauty than any other. And it was. An attractive maiden she was indeed anywhere, but on the top of that bare rock she was irresistible, as was proved by the first day she sat there. It was Rudolph the son of the smith at St. Goar who, returning late in the afternoon with his boat full of barley that he had cut and was bringing to shelter, heard the wonderful melody and saw the vision of beauty on the cliff. Without the least hesitation he directed his boat to the rock, and when it struck he sprang and clung to the cliff. He succeeded in clambering up some fifty feet before, losing his hold, he fell. Two neighbors on the opposite shore, having seen this and supposing the smith's son was mad, went and told the father that Rudolph had tried to scale the cliff and had fallen back into the river.

"Woe!" cried the father. "And the boat?"
"The boat was wrecked on the rocks."
"Woe!" cried the father, "And the barley?"
"The barley is scattered over the water and is being hurried to the sea!"

Then the father's grief knew no bounds. He tore his beard and wailed and would eat no meat for forty days, and would drink no beer for forty nights.

It was the very next morning that three merchants were going up the river to Coblenz, rowed by the boatmen. They were shouting greetings to their acquaintances on the shore when they heard suddenly the strains of a song, and turning saw the Lovelei on the cliff. The boatmen turned their boats to the rocks, and the merchants stood up in front ready to spring. The rocks at this point were so sharp that the bottom of the boats were pierced by them, but the three merchants succeeded in springing to the cliff and taking the boatmen who with their own leaking craft were pushed back into the stream by the merchants springing out, drifted down and were saved, but the merchants, all three, met the same fate as the boatmen. The bishop who happened to be riding by at this time and saw the whole occurrence asked the boatmen what made them act in such a foolish manner. The boatmen explained that the Lovelei looked so bewitching and sang so sweetly that they wanted to get nearer.

"Bewitching! that's the word," said the bishop. And he sent two of his knights to bring the Lovelei before him to be tried for witchcraft. The knights came up the cliff by a path, two miles below and approached Lovelei while she was not singing; for she rested sometimes when there were no boats on the river.

The knights who had not seen Lovelei were astounded at her beauty, and both took off their helmets and bowed.

"God greet you, fair maiden," said the spokesman, "will you go with us to the bishop?" He wanted to see you. So the three went back to the bishop. Lovelei holding her golden comb tight in both hands, and a knight on each side of her. The bishop had a frown ready for the would-be witch, but when he saw the beautiful young girl, standing abashed before the gathered crowd, he asked her a few questions, which she answered so sensibly that the bishop was quite satisfied and sent Lovelei back home. Some say he sent two knights back with her, but that is not true for the bishop never had to take care of his knights, and was only too glad that he had not lost the first two that he had sent.

After Lovelei was gone the bishop counseled his people when going by this place to sing as loudly as they could so long as they were in sight of the cliff, and not to look up on any account, and all would be well. And so it was. And from that day to this the Rhine folk have been great singers.

Now the fame of the Lovelei was naturally spread abroad from Coblenz to the sea, and was a favorite topic of gossip. Thus, it was quite natural that Brummelschoen, then living at Confluents, should hear the reports and gossip. Brummelschoen was a man of extraordinary parts and handsome pose and bearing. He was indeed quite famed for his conquests among the fair ones of the whole district, and it had been often said that his attractiveness was irresistible. When he heard of the Lovelei he at once thought that such a conquest would reflect credit on him, and decided to pass by in a small boat and call the fair singer down to him. No sooner did he let his resolution be known than the boat was noised abroad that the Lovelei was to meet her match, and came tumbling down from her perch.

The day came. There was an immense crowd on the left bank lined up to see the event. Brummelschoen was not long in appearing. He was singing one of the folk songs which, somewhat changed, the students sing to this day, thus following one of the bishop's injunctions to the people. But the injunction that he should not look up he naturally ignored; and just when he looked up happened what the people looking on could hardly believe, so quickly did it all take place.

And it was only after they had related the occurrences to one another several times that they came to realize it. As soon as Brummelschoen began to round the curve where the Lovelei was to be seen, the onlookers began to hold their breath with expectation. They saw the man in the boat as he looked up and heard the song from above and they heard his explanation.

"Donnerwetter, tadellou!"

Which being interpreted means, "My isn't she a beauty!" With two strokes of the oars his boat smashed against the rocks and he sprang against the cliff. Up! small stones and slabs of rock came tumbling down, loosened by him in his climb. Up, up, without a moment's pause or hesitation, almost in reach of safety, when the rock, ever treacherous, gave way under his feet, and there he hung for an instant with his fingers fastened in the crevices. Then the girl, having seen everything, ran down the rocks as far as she could and tried to reach her hand to the bold climber. Just twelve inches distance was between those hands, one clinging to the rock, the other reaching down. The climber, lying down flat on the rock, shook out her locks and let them fall down till they brushed the climber's straining arm. He reached up with his other hand and catching the girl's hair, climbed up and was saved. This is the story, freely translated from

What "M" Sees and Hears on His Rounds About the City and Along Route No. 3.

The many friends of Judge J. C. Klugh will regret to learn of his extreme illness and wish for him an early recovery.

Mr. Eugene McMillan will leave today for Augusta where he will take in the fair.

Mrs. E. E. Platt after spending the last week with her home people returned to her home near Augusta last Monday.

Miss Katherine Klugh is home from Converse on account of the illness of her father Judge Klugh.

Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Hill of Atlanta with their handsome little son Robert spent Sunday in the city with their home people.

We give a cure for "sore mouth in dogs" taken from Southern Cultivator.

Asphytydine is a sure cure for sore mouth dogs. Shave the hair off the dogs mouth; saturate a piece of cloth and tie on his mouth so he can't get it out and keep well dampened with the asphytydine. It will cure him.

Recipe for Mange on dogs. Creolin 1 oz. water 4 quarts. Apply all over dog once a week.

Miss Annie Thornton left Monday to attend the Augusta Fair.

Statistics—Last years egg crop was valued at $400,000,000, and the poultry products estimated at over $600,000,000 who can have the nerve to say the poultry business is small fry any longer.

The colored people had a nice fair considering the fact they had made no preparations.

Like the whites, they will get in line, and have a fine one next fall.

Numbers of citizens have returned from the Columbia Fair and report a delightful trip and a fine fair.

The year is fast drawing to a close and the winter season is being met by their last quarterly conference for a final settlement so you had better see how your quartermaster account stands, and if it appears settle up and let our pastor go up to Conference with a clean sheet from the M. E. Church of this city.

The ladies of the Episcopal church served oysters last Monday, but with what success we did not hear.

Mr. Bradley Reese returned last week with his charming bride and met with a hearty welcome from his hosts of friends all of whom extended kindest congratulations and best wishes for his future happiness and good luck.

When Bradley Reese for Oxford, Mississippi he was the happiest man between Abbeville and now he returns with a lovely bride, and of course is the happiest man in all the city just now and we hope for all the future.

ROUTE 3.

Miss Rosa Knox and Mr. Mabry Chestnut will be married next Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock Nov. 16th in the Presbyterian church of Lebanon, instead of the date of the bride as announced last week.

Rev. J. B. Hillman is officiating.

James G. Hillman is home from the Columbia Fair, as usual he had a fine time and was much pleased with his trip.

Messrs. J. H. Penney, N. Schram, James Williams Jr. and R. F. McNeill represented the Shaver section last Monday in the city of course they all had business in town.

Miss Alice Penney spent part of last week with her brother Mr. John Penney.

Mr. Will McNeill and son Henry will be among the visitors in the city Saturday.

Mr. Edwin now drives a span of fine bays, he is a graceful driver and rides with uncle Arthur by his side.

Is greatly obliged to his friends on route 3 who have so kindly remembered with those fine potatoes that always grow on route 3.

Look out for sore head fowls they are now abroad in the land.

Master Earl Graves received a prize for the splendid map of the U. S. drawn by himself, also for a fancy table cover. Earl is the son of Mr. C. F. Graves on route 3 and is a bright fellow.

Route 3 is very quiet, and as dry as a powder horn.

100 Million Dollars Worth of Shoes

These are stupendous figures, yet this is the yearly amount that the South spends for shoes. As a curiosity these figures may attract you for a minute, but the most curious thing about them is that three quarters of this money is regularly sent away from the South and the South is that much poorer for it.

You trade at a Southern shoe store. You give the dealer your money. You probably buy a western or northern made shoe. When the dealer pays his bill, this money, less a small per cent to the dealer, goes north or west and the South is that much poorer.

Keep your money at home. Let it work for better times, better wages, more factories, more work for Southern people.

Ask your dealer for The Craddock Shoe. Made in the South, by white labor, for Southern gentlemen. The best shoe value offered by any maker in the land for $3.50 and $4.00. Money spent for Craddock Shoes stays in the South, and pays Southern labor, Southern grocers, bakers and butchers.

It builds Southern factories, homes and schools.

We can support more and better industries. Let's each do his part.

WASH THAT ITCH AWAY

It is said that there are certain springs in Europe that give relief and cure to Eczema and other skin diseases. If you knew that by washing in these waters you could be relieved from that awful itch, wouldn't you make every effort to take a trip to Europe at once? Would you not be willing to spend your last cent to find the cure? But you need not leave home for these distant springs. Relief is right here in your own home town! A simple wash of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol and other ingredients as compounded only in D. D. D. Prescription will bring instant relief to that terrible burning itch, and leave the skin as smooth and healthy as that of a child. If you have not already tried it, get at least a 25 cent bottle today. We assure you of instant relief. C. A. Milford & Co., Abbeville, S. C.
