Matchless Millinery Opening

WE have spared neither pains or money to make this a great event in the Dry Goods and Millinery business of this section. Let no lady fail to be present as it will be our pleasure to show each and every one through our stock of everything in wearing apparel for ladies and children.

Every Lady is cordially invited to attend

The paramount issue in our business is, and always will be, "Keep the Quality Up." And if you will give us a call we will prove to your satisfaction that the above assertion is correct.

Believing that experience is the best teacher, W. D. Wilson of our firm, accompanied by Miss Nelson and Miss Seal, spent two weeks in the Eastern markets doing their best to select only such merchandise as would suit the ladies of this section.

Miss Nelson has been in the Millinery Business in this section for a number of years and has no superior as a woman of the rarest taste.

Miss Seal has been with the firm for the past twenty years and we feel sure that their selections will meet fully the expectations of the ladies of Abbeville County.

Space will not permit us to go into details of what we have to show you in Ready-to-wear Garments, Linens, White Goods, Silks, Embroideries, Laces and Dress Trimmings. Linens in colors.

We extend a cordial invitation to all—to those who want style—to those who want quality—and to those who demand a reasonable price for their headgear. Our Opening Days are always looked forward to with fond anticipation. This year we are confident you will be more delighted than ever. For your inspection we have gathered together hundreds of Hats, embodying the essence of all that is stylish and beautiful.

repeatedly stated that they hoped to see the road carried to Abbeville and it is believed that their every influence will be used to that end. The matter of branch roads will be taken up as the main line is completed, and when this comes up, no one need doubt that Abbeville has friends

Messrs. Parker and Smith no longer have property interests in Abbeville, and their loyalty to and love for their old home is unalloyed by any personal motive They know in the first place that Abbeville is one of the best towns in South Carolina, and to extend the road to Abbeville is a good business proposition. On this price. assurance and with the kindliest spirit toward Abbeville these gentlemen have from the beginning had the fixed purpose to use their influence that a branch road be extended to this city.

But Abbeville should not depend on her sons who have gone out, alone, for her material growth. The task will be easier if the citizens at home will do something for themselves. Highways of traffic seek the places that furnish freight and passenger business. Abbeville is a town of some five thousand inhabitants. No better merchants and business men can be found anywhere. In the surrounding country, contributory, lands are unexcelled and the farmers are prosperous. There is plenty of wealth in the city. A little more of the spirit of public enterprise is really all that the city needs to bring it abreast with the best towns of the up country. A public spirited leader could work wonders for Abbeville. Contradictory as it may seem, the towns that grow are those which "pull themselves up by their own boot straps." In a previous editorial we cited the fact

The teachers in these schools are: Bethia, Misses popointment this people may have experienced in the settlement, it is certain that the two gentlemen named were loyal to their old home in every act and expression in connection with selecting the route.

In saying this, there is no purpose to convey the idea that these gentlemen stood out unreasonably for the Abbeville route, and we can not say certainly that a vote was cast for the Abbeville route. This was due, however, rather to the fixed policy of the road to extend directly toward a given point, and Greenwood is more nearly in the line of the probable extension.

Mr. Parker and Mr. Smith have both repeatedly stated that they hoped to see the road carried to Abbeville count.

The teachers in these schools are: Bethia, Misses Margie and Kitty Link; Bellvue, Miss Bessia Morrat, Buffalo, Prof. W. A. White; Sharon, Miss Sadie Magill and Mrs. Nannie Harkness; Warrenton, Rev. B. M. Cheatham; Lebanon, Miss Ora Ellis; Monterey, Mrs. Chas. F. Gilliam. Prof. Tate was very much pleased with the school situation in Abbeville County. He also visited Little Rock Buffalo colored school and made a post card picture of the church and school house, showing the comparison of their fine church to the insignificant little school building besides it. In one of his speeches he said there was a white church in South Carolina individually supporting a missionary in Mexico when their school building in the community was not comfortable. ### In the Path of the Padres.

Swift and all-embreing as has been the sweep of migration and commercialism in California, the traces of the Spanish occupation have not yet been obliterated. Indeed, in some ways, the remnants of the old days have been better preserved than if they had been lift to taeir fate. Strung along El Camino Real from San Diego northward to San Rafael like beads along a roasay are the imposing buildings erected by the pious labors of Padres and neophytes. Many of these wonderful missions have been restored and brought to something like their original magnificence. In time all of them will be rescued from that a small town in the upper part of In time all of them will be rescued from the wasting of neglect, ane the pilgrimage from one to another will become one of the features of the sojurn in the land which

D. M. Keller, grocer, Main St., Abbeville, S. C., says: "I gladly confirm the statement I gave in 1908 in which I told of my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills. The benefit they brought me has been permanent. I had suffered a great deal from a dull pain acros the small of my back and my kid-neys did not do their work prop-erly. I felt dull and languid and finally I decided to try a kidney medicine. I got a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at P. B. Speed's Drug Store and they soon corrected my trouble. I have no hesitation in advising other kid-ney sufferers to give this remedy
