STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA, COUNTY OF ABBEVILLE, ss:
I, Lewis Perrin, Cashier of the above named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

LEWIS PERRIN, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 10th day of July, 1920.

W. H. WHITE, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest:
J. ALLEN SMITH,
W. M. BARNWELL,
J. S. MORSE, Directors.

The commission is composed of J. Gordon Hughes, chairman; M. L. Bonham, H. W. Conner, N. G. Evans and F. H. McMaster.

The commission is sending out the following circular letter:

My Dear Sir:

It has been said that in the past the South has made history and the North has written it. Naturally the historian gives adornment and lustre to the achievements of his particular section. While the records show that more important battles were fought on the soil of South Carolina during the Revolution than in all of the New England states, yet most historians would create the impression that the glory of American arms in that struggle centered around Lexington and Bunker Hill and did not extend south of Yorktown.

South Carolina has made much history, but has written little, and we have shown small consideration for the memories of our great leaders of the past. In practically every state of the union monuments have been erected to illustrious native sons in and about their capitals, and these stand as enduring tributes to patriotic greatness, and as inspirations to succeeding generations. In Columbia we find one individual monument—an equestrian statue of Hampton, the splendid soldier and leader in reconstruction days. What have we to show our admiration and veneration for Moultrie the two great Pinckneys Sumter and Marion—all of whom played a magnificent part in shaping the destinies of the nation? New York has erected a monument to J. Marion Sims, our wonderful surgeon, and the nations of Europe have honored him, but there is nothing in South Carolina to show any claim we have upon this benefactor of humanity in Trinity churchyard in Columbia, ton sleeps beneath a plain marble slab. The eloquent William C. Presbut few know it. Where is any recognition of Hayne and McDuffie? Have we forgotten John C. Calhoun, clearly the greatest Carolinian of any generation? Member of congress, United States senator, secretary of war, secretary of state and vice president of the republic in its hazy days of political thought, eloquence and debate, he stood for the highest and best in the golden age of American statesmanship. Though the exponent of an interpretation of the constitution that was defeated only on appeal to arms, he never yielded to an adversary in forum, and even in the light of subsequent events his arguments are still unanswered and unsatisfactory.

Yet in the capitol of our state there is no statue or monument to indicate to the younger native generations or to visitors to South Carolina that we recognize Calhoun's greatness and still revere his memory. He died just before the War Between the States, and it was the announced purpose of the state to provide for the removal of his remains to the capital and render such honor as was due her matchless son and glorious champion. The bloody struggles of civil war came, however, and was followed by an impoverishing period of reconstruction. In her troubles the state delayed her tribute to Calhoun. In 1907 we were awakened to realization of our obligation when called upon to place in Statuary hall in Washington a statue of our leading figure of the past. Whom could we name, save Calhoun? In 1910 a splendid statue of him, executed by F. Wellington Ruckstuhl was unveiled in the capitol of the nation. This is a work of sculptural art of the highest order, as you will note from the inclosed print, which shows Calhoun defending the faith of the fathers, expounding their views and protecting the constitution of their creation.

Still in and about the capitol of our state there is no image or monument of any kind to indicate that this is the home of the man who presided over various departments of the national government, who defied Andrew Jackson, who crushed the great Webster in senatorial debate and who throughout a long public life lent lustre to the history of his state and nation.

Shall this state of affairs continue? Under a concurrent resolution of the general assembly of South Carolina in 1918 a commission was appointed to secure funds to place in the rotunda of the capitol in Columbia a replica of the Ruckstuhl statue of Calhoun, to keep Calhoun's magnificent character and glorious achievements before the generations of South Carolinians for all time to come and to show the stranger within our gates that our citizenship still loves and reveres his memory.

The entrance of the country into the world war has delayed the consummation of the plans of the commission, but the present time seems propitious to put them into execution. For the purposes above outlined the commission is asking 160 patriotic South Carolinians to present this statue of Calhoun to the state, and thus have their names preserved in the permanent archives of South Carolina as men and women who love their state and appreciate its history. You have been selected as one of this number.

The commission is well assured that this high purpose will appeal with force to your love of the state and to your admiration of Calhoun, the statesman, judge and philosopher. If the appeal finds lodgment with you, kindly mail me your check, payable to F. H. McMaster, treasurer, for fifty dollars ($50.00) which is the sum that the commission asks from each of the citizens selected by it to accomplish the patriotic purpose it has in view.

With assurance of my respect and esteem, I am, etc.

ENTERING INTO HONOR

Glorious days these for the art preservatives of other arts. The profession is not only becoming a jostling place for the great and the near great but the embargo is lifted which confined the flow from a reservoir of talent.

Senator Harding's avocation is public life, but his vocation is editorial. Governor Cox of Ohio, who may be his rival, is another editor, and Carter Glass and Gilbert M. Hitchcock also are editors. Mr. Bryan has amassed a fortune since he left the law and went in for journalism. Mr. Taft's income as a special contributor adds materially to the handsome revenue he receives from his labors on the Chautauqua circuit. Colonel Roosevelt left the White House to become an associate editor. And so on down a long list, Great is the change from the days when Daniel Webster, declining a reporting job, said he hoped to be an actor in life and not merely a recorder of the acts of others.

But of the recruits who have responded to the call of the craft none

The MOLINE

Tractor is Universal

Work of 3 Teams and 3 Men

One man with one tractor does all field work
from plowing to harvest

Hay harvest is near.
The top speed, short of help, hot sweaty days are near at hand, when the hay crop must be cut and cured.

Are you ready?

You are not completely ready without a Moline Universal Tractor and a Moline Mower No. 4, 6 to 10-foot cut, attached to this tractor, because:—

1. With this equipment, you can cut 25 to 30 acres per day.
2. You require but one operator for Tractor and Mower.
3. You can work all day and as late at night as is necessary.
4. You can work steadily with no stops.

If desired you can use the "drag behind" or horse drawn implements you now have with the Moline Universal the same as with other types of tractors.

Here is what one man and a Moline-Universal Tractor can do in a ten-hour day:—

- Plow 7 to 8 acres
- Disc 27 acres with a 7' Tandem Disc Harrow
- Disc 38 acres with a 10' Disc Harrow
- Harrow 76 acres with a 20' Peg Tooth Harrow
- Cultivate from 13 to 20 acres with a two-row Cultivator
- Drill 35 acres with a 10' Grain Drill
- Harvest 40 acres with a 10' Grain Binder
- Harvest 10 acres with a Corn Binder
- Mow 25 acres with a 8' Mower
- Rake 40 acres with a 12' Rake

Immediate deliveries—a satisfactory stock of repair parts always carried; real service guaranteed.

is more notable than Colonel House, say or do something that will lift who is in Europe as a newspaper the Irish pressure here against the correspondent. We do not know Administration but even so the Colonel, against his habit and his temperament, has agreed to through the motions of communicating information and ideas.

So the Fourth Estate is no longer populated by the disinherited. It becomes respectable. It is necessary abroad to induce Lloyd George to
